Temptation lies in the path of every man. None is more strongly tempted than the detective, and he that successfully resists temptation is alone worthy of confidence. Never, under any circumstances, deceive a client. Tell the truth even if it places you under the suspicion that you don't know your business. Be true and upright to the man who parts with his money and just with the man you are working against. If your man is guilty, strive by every honest means to prove it; if he is innocent, frankly inform your client of the fact. This is the secret of true success. Be patient, be thorough. The world was not made in a day, but above all things be energetic. Do not "Kill time." If you can bring a case to a conclusion in one day, do so. It will bring you clients, reputation and money. If you discover you are on the wrong track, switch off. Never pursue phantoms. Strive for facts and results based alone upon facts. Never go to court with a weak and uncertain case. If you cannot prove a case before entering court, the chances are greatly against you of proving it in court. Be quiet and discreet, and avoid talking too much. Read, study and observe. You cannot possess too much intelligence. Keep yourself thoroughly posted on current events. Cultivate good associates at all times. You will see enough of this world's deceit and low cunning while in the pursuit of your calling. In spite of my long years of service I still appreciate the fact that there are many good men and women in the world to-day, and will be to-morrow.

Let your conduct be above reproach, so that when you are called upon to give your testimony in court the most offensive cross-examination will not prejudice your case. If you depend upon your labor for your support decline all reward cases, as they generally read: "For the arrest and conviction of." Now suppose you spend a week or month in pursuit of one of these cases and you succeed in arresting the right person and lodge him in jail, and suppose he dies before trial, or breaks jail, or through some flaw in the indictment or the law he escapes, where are you? The person or persons who have offered the reward will quietly point to the last words in the above line which reads "conviction of" and you return to your home a wiser but sadder man.

OBITUARY.

Mr. Wm. Wilson, who died so suddenly and unexpectedly, met his death in Jackson on Tuesday evening, Aug. 30th, 1892, at the age of 43 years, was born near Ballymena, Ireland in 1849, and his boyhood days were spent there on a farm with his grandmother. Accompanied by his sister, two cousins and Thomas Murphy he came to this country in the spring of 1868, and in a short time came to this village, and from that time forward made Tecumseh his home. In 1875 he was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Wilson, and four children, three daughters and one son, are left with their mother to mourn the early loss of a kind and loving father and husband; and what a vacancy it has made in that family circle, and how he will be missed in the long winter evenings as they gather around their fireside. There also remains an aged father and two brothers, both of whom are in Los Angeles, Cal., to mourn his loss.

Mr. Wilson was always kind and affectionate to his family, and a steady, honest and upright citizen who during his residence in this place, formed many warm friendships. For about fourteen years he was employed in Brewer's foundry, where he had many true friends. Last spring he obtained a position in the car works at Jackson, and expected to move his family there the last of this month, when he was suddenly called away to join his mother, brother and sister on the other shore, as his life and conversation gave evidence that his faith and trust were in his savior. So in our beautiful cemetery he sleeps the sleep that shall know no waking till the great judgment day. The funeral services conducted by W. H. Babbett, were held at the family residence at 2 o'clock, Friday afternoon, Sept. 2d. Fitting, tender and comforting were the words spoken. The many beautiful floral offerings were an indication of the esteem in which he was held by his friends.

A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled;
A place is vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled.
God in His wisdom has recalled,
The boon His love had given;
And though the body moulders here,
The soul is safe in Heaven.

That Pretty Evangeline.

We published recently under the head of "A Pretty Surprise" a notice of a new and very charming edition of Longfellow's most celebrated, "Evangeline." Upon examination, the book proves so delightful in every way that we believe it will be a favor to our readers to refer to it again. It is handsomely illustrated, mainly by Birket Foster, one of the most famous of English artists, and bound in exquisite taste in a combination of white and blue cloth, with gilt edges and ornaments, and is sold only by the publisher direct, at approximately the actual cost of manufacture by the hundred thousand—19 cents a copy, plus 6 cents postage, 25 by mail. His object is to place an example of his book making in the hands of a vast number of readers. He could certainly choose no more excellent volume, to please all people of good taste. His catalogue of books covering every department of literature, a veritable feast of good things for book lovers, and at a wonderfully low price, considerably over 100 pages in size, is sent post-paid for 2 cents. Address, John B. Alden, Publisher, 57 Rose St., N. Y.

IN CUPID'S TOILS.

Last Thursday, Oct. 6th, was a beautiful autumn day, and the farm residence of Mr. P. J. Farley was the scene of a most happy gathering fully in harmony with the day itself. Shortly before noon about a hundred guests assembled to witness the ceremony that made Mr. George H. Stacy and Miss Clara Belle Farley husband and wife.

Promptly as the clock struck twelve the bride and groom, accompanied by two bridesmaids, entered the parlor, quietly took their position in the lover's corner, declared the vows and received the benediction from the Rev. W. H. Babbitt, that bound too hearts together for life. The ceremony, though brief, was performed in Mr. Babbitt's happiest manner and at its close the assembled guests crowded around the wedded pair to offer their congratulations.

The bride was dressed in a white silk gown and the groom in conventional black. Misses Bertha Smeltzer and Gertrude Hialey acted as bridesmaids. After a brief season of hand shaking and merriment, the guests were seated about the tables and a sumptuous wedding dinner was served. The company was a peculiar one. Both young and old participated in the festivities, but all hearts were young that day. After refreshments a couple of hours were pleasantly spent in social chat and merry making, and in admiring the bridal gifts, both useful and ornamental, with which the parlor table was loaded. These guests from abroad graced the occasion with their presence: Mrs. C. A. Dresser and Miss Flora Dresser, of Toledo; Mrs. Howard Perrin and Miss Kittie Perrin, of Anacortes, Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Rufus Stacy of Buffalo, N. Y. At three o'clock the newly married couple, accompanied by most of the guests, drove to the Lake Shore depot and admidst a shower of good wishes and congratulations, they took their departure for Buffalo where their future home will be.

The young couple, who have thus set sail on life's voyage together, passed their childhood in this vicinity and both were at one time pupils in our Tecumseh schools. They were favorites in the social circles in which they moved and the general verdict is that they have both chosen wisely and well. They leave for their distant home accompanied by the best wishes and heartest benedictions of all their friends. May they never forget the happy days they passed in old Tecumseh and may their auspicious wedding day be an omen of the happiness that will attend them hereafter.

Prescriptions and how to use Them.

Under the above title the Dominion Publishing Company, of Chicago, has brought out a work which will be received as a boon throughout the country. It is a Family Medical Guide, in three volumes, but, by reason of the novel features introduced into its construction it can scarcely be classed with any of the numerous works upon the same subject now upon the market, and is a new departure in books of this description. The most novel feature in connection with this work is the detachable prescriptions, which constitute the third volume. Volume I consists of a very simple but cleverly written treatise on the anatomy of the human body, with numerous wood-cuts as an aid to a clear understanding of the text; also a complete guide to the diagnosis and treatment of every known disease to which we are liable, excepting those which may be considered of a private nature. Volume II embraces a complete guide to the private diseases, and is more particularly adapted to all requirements of woman. Volume III is a reproduction of every prescription contained in the first two volumes, each one of which is printed in quadruplicate, and so arranged that one of the copies can be detached and taken to the drug store whenever it is required to have the prescription made up. This certainly adds greatly to the value of the work for the purpose for which it is intended—namely, for family use. The language used is so plain and simple that any one who can read can understand. As to the authorship of the work, there certainly appears to be nothing left to be desired. The physiological portion is from the pen of Prof. Geo. Henckel the celebrated physiologist; while the strickly medical portion is the work of Dr Orville J. Perkins, graduate of the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, New York, and of the Medical Association of the State of Alabama, Licentiate of the Board of Medical Examiners, State of Illinois, and member of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Toronto, Canada. "Prescriptions and How to Use Them" is, we understand, sold only by subscription, and should surely find a place in every home. The publishers' advertisement will be found in another column.

Met. Conklin received last week several baskets of superb Concord grapes from his brother, J. M. Conklin, of Avon Lake, Lorain Co., Ohio. The HERALD office was remembered in the distribution of them. They were the best samples we have seen this fall.

James Pickett, who resides near Clinton, was arraigned before Justice Davidson, Monday, charged with having burned the barn of James Wallace, west of Clinton, a week or so ago. He was released upon a bond of one thousand dollars; examination to be held on the 18th inst.

The series of reminiscent articles of "My Father as I Recall Him," by Mamie Dickens, the oldest and favorite daughter of Charles Dickens, will begin in the next issue of The Ladies' Home Journal by an entertaining narration of Dickens' personal habits, and an inner glimpse of his home life.

Rev. James Gorton began his pastoral duties at the Universalist church last Sunday. He had good congregations both morning and evening and made a most favorable impression upon all. He is a man of experience and scholarship, and a pleasing pulpit orator. He begins his work with bright prospects for future usefulness.

The business of the Detroit Evening News has reached such proportions now, that it requires five great Potter perfecting presses to print its regular editions. No other afternoon paper in the west, excepting one in Chicago, has such an equipment, and since The Evening News reduced its price to One Cent, its wonderful increase in circulation makes it manifest that still more presses will soon be required.

Cleo Hall is the latest addition to the post office force.

Miss Earle, of Duluth, Minn., is visiting at O. B. Finch's.

Go and hear Speaker Crisp, at Adrian, next Tuesday afternoon.

Harris & Hiteshu have a change of card this week. Read it.

Chas. Waldron has gone to New York City, where he will take a post-graduate course in veterinary surgery.

Lyster Dewey, of Washington, was in town yesterday, returning to Washington from a business trip to Dakota.

Take your poultry, eggs and butter to L. D. Dewey's, on railroad street; he pays more than market price for it.

The Pioneer meeting at Britton yesterday was a rouser. A full report is necessarily deferred until next week.

Prosecuting Attorney Wood was in town Monday, conducting the examination of Jas. Picket, charged with arson.

Don't forget that social at the Baptist Parsonage, to-morrow night. Admission, ten cents, including supper and program.

About seventy-five members of the Baptist church gave their pastor's family a surprise last Saturday evening, and the evening was very pleasantly spent.

Hiram Raymond, of Dixon, Ill., is visiting friends in Ridgeway and Raisin. He attended the pioneer meeting yesterday at Britton, and found plenty of friends to shake hands with.

Speaker Crisp, of Georgia, will address the people of old Lenawee, at Adrian, next Tuesday, Oct. 18th. The meeting will commence at an early hour in the afternoon as he will go to Detroit at four o'clock.

Mesdames Skinner & Knapp, of Adrian, wish to announce to the ladies of Tecumseh that their Fall & Winter's display of Millinery occurs Friday and Saturday, Oct. 14 and 15.

The John Dillon Company, who will present the sparkling Comedy "A Model Husband," on Wednesday evening, are a first-class organization, and Mr. Dillon is an actor of renown and merit. We hope our citizens will show their appreciation by giving them a full house. The prices are slightly more than usual, but the character of the entertainment will be commensurate.

This prescription can be filled at the old Baptist Parsonage, after 5:30 o'clock to-morrow evening:

No soup. No fish. No hash.
Beans cooked. Baked beans.
Bread and butter. Dried beef.
Pickles sour. Sweet pickles.
Sugar cookies.
Ginger cake.
Pumpkin pie.
Hot coffee. Water cold.
No ice cream, No floating island.
Peppermint. Paregoric.
All for ten cents.

Three physicians within call. Everybody invited.

The appearance of the old time favorite commedian, Mr. John Dillon, at Sutton's opera house, Oct. 19th, should be greeted by a large audience, as Mr. Dillon is being seen to better advantage in his new play, "A Model Husband," than in anything he has had for years. The play is of the same class as "Wilkinson's Widows" Junior "Partner" and other Frohman comedies lately produced, but is more cleverly construed, more possible in story and more laugh producing in its unfolding than any of its contempories alluded to above.

Having become a worthy member of Chicago's Bi-chloride of Gold Club, John Dillon will now assume the role of "A Model Husband." John Dillon is said to be very much pleased with his new play. "A Model Husband;" the title, no doubt carries John back to the early sixties, when, in addition to daily rehearsals and performances in "Wood's Museum, Chicago, he often walked the floor in wee, small hours, administering to the wants of a baby daughter. The daughter is now a mother, making John a grandpa.

The audience which greeted the return of the ever popular Greundlers, assisted by Mrs. Annie Dolin Spence, a charming reader, last Thursday evening, was not what they deserved, after the flattering successes heretofore had here, nor what the people of Tecumseh should give to so worthy an object as to assist the Ladies Library Association. Every number on the program was a gem; the piano solos by Mr. Greuendler were particularly fine; and the readings of Mrs. Annie Dolin Spence, could not have been excelled. Mrs. Cora Ferris Greundler's vocal solos were given in her usually charming and happy style and were much enjoyed by all her friends present. The ladies of the Library Association did not realize anything from the entertainment. The people of Tecumseh should never allow another opportunity to pass when they might benefit so worthy an object, without doing so.

A GOOD NOMINATION.

The nomination of Chas. Burridge Esq., for the office of Judge of Probate on the Democratic County ticket, was one eminently fit to be made. In Tecumseh and the adjoining towns, where he enjoys a large personal acquaintance, this statement needs no proof; but in other parts of the County a brief biographical sketch may serve to give the electors a better idea of his worth as a citizen and his peculiar fitness for this particular office.

Mr. Burridge was born in the city of London, Eng., and passed his boyhood in that great metropolis. At the early age of fifteen he caught the Western fever and embarked for the New World. He made the voyage alone, not a relative being with him, and upon arriving at New York, he drifted westward into Michigan, arriving here in October, just forty years ago. He first hired out on a farm in the the old township of Tecumseh, going to school winters. He attended our village school in the last of the fifties, and prepared himself for teaching. In 59 and 60 he taught the "Section" school, then taught in Franklin two years and in Macon two years. He subsequently worked several months for Wm. Hayden and afterwards had charge of Temple's lumber yards. In the spring of 1865 he entered the office of the late Edwin B. Wood, and acted as his clerk for several years, in the mean time pursuing a course of legal reading. Afterwards he was in partnership with Mr. Wood for several years, and during this period he obtained a large experience in Probate practice and has ever since enjoyed a lucrative business in this branch of the law. Twenty two years ago this fall he was elected Justice of the Peace and has held that office continuously ever since, excepting one year when he lived on his Raisin farm and thereby lost his residence in Tecumseh. His habits of industry and judicial temperament enabled him to fill that office to excellent acceptance, and he has always done the bulk of the Justice business in Tecumseh, since he first assumed that office.

Personally Mr. Burridge is a genial, whole souled man, possessed of rugged physical health, and habits of temperance, industry and economy that have enabled him to build up a character in this community second to none.

His domestic relations have been exceedingly happy and he has a splendid family. In business affairs his reputation is irreproachable and his word is as good as his bond. He is universally recognized here in his own home as one of our most worthy and exemplary citizens. Should he be called by the sufferages of his fellow citizens to fill the responsible position of Judge of Probate he will honor the office no less than the office will honor him.

"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.
Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements that so much comfort for $1.00 (the price) is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.
The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitivenesss of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.
The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.
Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Eletric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt) and credit $3 on the price of new order. Remember the Electric Foot warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

MADE PRESIDENT.

The Venezuelan Republic Names Gen. Crespo as Ruler.

He Assumes Full Control and Will Manage Affairs Until Congress Names His Successor—The New Cabinet.

A NEW PREMIER.

CARACAS, Oct. 10.—Gen. Joaquin Crespo was accorded an enthusiastic reception upon his triumphal entry into Caracas Sunday. He marched into the capital at the head of the remainder of his army, 3,000 men having taken possession of the city Saturday.

A council of his officers and advisers was held and the result was the proclamation of Crespo as provisional president of the republic. He is to hold office only until the regularly elected congressman shall have had time to meet again and proceed to the election of a constitutional successor to ex-President Raimundo Andueza Palacio.

Crespo then issued a proclamation naming the following cabinet:

Minister of foreign affairs, Pedro Egequiel Rojas; minister of the interior, Leon Colina; minister of finance, Senor Pietro; minister of war, Guzman Alvarez; chief of police, Gen. Victor Rodriquez; chief of telegraphs, Leopoldo Baptista; minister of public works, Munoz Tebar; minister of instructions, Silva Gaudolphy; general in chief, Ramon Guerra; governor of Caracas Senor Andrade.

These are all well-known Venezuelans who have aided the cause of the legalists by active service in the field or by financial contributions. The provisional cabinet gives general satisfaction. It will restore order throughout the distracted republic. The rumors concerning the escape of the de facto president, Villegas-Pulido, and his ministers are confirmed. They managed to get a vessel bound for Martinique. It is said to be their intention to proceed to France.

BODIES IN A BURNING HOUSE.

It Is Believed Farmer Luckey and His Wife Were Murdered.

TOLEDO, Ont. Oct. 10.—The home of J. J. Luckey, Sr., a farmer 4 miles from this place, was destroyed by fire Saturday afternoon, and Mr. Luckey, his wife and daughter were burned to death. The circumstances in connection with the fire are mysterious. About 2 o'clock a neighbor noticed flames issuing from Mr. Luckey's house. He at once rushed to the house but found the doors, front and rear, locked, and the inside of the house a mass of flames. He burst in the front door and found lying in a heap at the foot of the stairs the charred bodies of the three occupants of the house. The bodies were unrecognizable. It is believed the three victims were murdered and their house then fired to hide the crime.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Buried Alive Thirty-Six Hours.

Samuel Raven was buried alive thirty six hours at Jackson. He was in the bottom of a 30-foot well when quicksand caused the walls to fall upon him. A thousand people assembled to dig him out, but the more they dug the more the sand caved in. Lights were provided and when night came on operations were not stopped. Just at dark on the second day Raven was reached, terribly crushed, but alive. The stones in the well had fallen upon him, forming an arch and giving him room to breathe.

Stripped by Lightning.

Otto Zaston was struck by lightning and every stitch of his clothing was torn from his body. His boots were found 2 rods from where he was struck at Midland. His coat was ridded and made into rags. There was not a mark upon Zaston's body. He was discovered about 10 feet from where he stood at the time of the shock. He seemed to have been lifted and carried bodily.

Beats the Divorce Record.

Mrs. Annie Bright was divorced and wedded again inside of ten minutes at Detroit. Immediately after Judge Hosmer had granted her a divorce on the ground of non-support she repaired to the county clerk's office with Charles H. Cobb, where a marriage license was procured. Then a justice of the peace was called in from a neighboring office and the two were quickly made one.

Physician Sets a Dislocated Neck.

Nora Standish was thrown from a buggy at Coldwater and fell on her head, dislocating her neck. It was thought she was dead. The physician summoned two strong men; one seized her by the feet, the other by the head, and at the word pulled as hard as they could. The bones sprang into place with a snap, she soon recovered consciousness and will live.

Fully Exonerated the Norrie Owners.

The coroner's jury in the case of the four miners recovered from the Norrie mine cave-in at Ironwood returned a verdict of accidental death in each case and exonerated the Metropolitan Iron and Land Company, which operates the mines, and its officials of all blame. The search for the other six bodies was still going on.

Wants His Freedom.

PRONOUNCED HOPELESS, YET SAVED.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me, and I thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at J. J. Orr's drug store. Large size 50c. and $1.00.

A LOVER'S FANCY.

The withered brown leaves lie
In clusters beneath her feet;
They were glad to fade and die
To make her pathway sweet;
And each scattered flake of snow
In amorous longing seeks
To melt away in the glow
Of her warm and crimson cheeks.

And the rays of the setting sun
Steal ninety billion miles
To catch a sight of one
Of her rare and brilliant smiles;
And the stars of evening light
At the close of the dying day
To be first to greet her sight
With a feeble twilight ray;

And the dull old earth rolls on
With a slow and steady gait,
And his solemn mind upon
His sweet and precious freight.
No wonder he seems afraid
To enter the comet's race;
He is bearing a queenly maid
Through the dizzy realms of space.

STRUCK BY AN ICEBERG.

Cast Adrift in an Open Boat in the South Seas.

"By dead reckoning," said Capt. Burton, of the Golden Eagle, rising from the study of the chart, which had lain open on the cabin table between us for some time—"by dead reckoning that is about our position," and he indicated a spot representing something like fifty miles south of Cape Horn. "How is the barometer?"

"Steady since noon," I replied.

"Then we have seen the worst of the gale," he added. "Let us go on deck."

Under close-reefed canvas, the Golden Eagle was running before a fierce westerly gale. The murky light was darkened by frequent snow squalls.

The waves, like famished wolves, leaped on our ship's quarters as though they would claim their prey; but she, like a living thing, plunged into the hollows, throwing off her foes, and rising on the forward wave flew on unharmed.

All hands were on deck, and a sharp lookout was kept, for a moment's inattention, under circumstances such as these, might mean instant destruction.

About midnight a tremendous squall struck the ship, and I thought for a moment that she was on her beam ends; but she recovered herself, and rose to a less perilous inclination.

"All hands shorten sail!" cried the captain.

The seamen struggled aloft through the wind-swept shrouds, but the squall swept to leeward, and a cry of alarm rose from the lookout at the bow:

"Starboard! hard a-starboard!"

I ran forward, and there, like an awful specter, towered above us a huge iceberg.

"Ice right ahead!" I shouted, as I fled aft.

The wheel-chains groaned under our united efforts. The sailors aloft abandoned their work and came hurrying to the deck. I knew, as they knew, that our ship was doomed, yet knowing it and realizing in some degree all that our terrible position involved, every man was ready to meet death resolutely and perfect discipline was maintained.

"Stand by the braces!" the captain shouted.

Before the men could obey the order another cry arose:

"Look out! she's into it!"

And the Golden Eagle, rising on the crest of a wave, dashed headlong into the iceberg. The impact was terrific. The three topmasts snapped short off. An immense block of ice fell on the bow, crushing the fo'c'stle-head into splinters.

Amid the roar of the wind and sea, the rending of spars and the cries of injured seamen, Capt. Burton's voice rang out:

"Clear away the boats!"

There was a gallant effort made to obey the order. The port lifeboat was cut adrift and turned upon her keel, but the ship gave a violent roll, and men and boat fell to leeward in a confused heap.

The next moment the Golden Eagle trembled beneath our feet, and, without further warning, sank beneath the dark waters off bleak Cape Horn.

I went down with the ship, conscious only of the cries of the seamen, which rang fearfully in my ears. My next sensation was one of deadly chill, as I rose to the surface, amid the tumult of the wind and sea.

The iceberg was invisible, owing to the flying spray and snow, and the night was so dark that nothing could be distinguished a few feet away.

My boots and heavy clothes were saturated, and the numbness of my hands told me that I could not remain afloat much longer.

Something large and black loomed alongside out of the snow-squall, and instinctively I grasped at it. It was the gunwale of the released lifeboat. Several men were clinging to it, and succeeded in removing their sea-boots, and were bailing the water out.

As she rose, we scrambled aboard, and, finding ourselves nearing the berg, we tore up the bottom boards, which we used as oars, and managed to clear it.

We were evidently now under the lee of the berg and, therefore, in comparatively smooth water.

We managed to keep the boat from drifting out to sea again, and, having done all that was possible under the circumstances, we awaited the dawn.

It came at length—a sickly gleam across the wild waste of waters. There was no joy in it—no warmth, no comfort; yet we were thankful for it. It was daylight.

Then we looked at one another—the captain, myself, the second mate and three seamen; in all, six dazed and half-frozen wretches, barely delivered from the jaws of death, whose faces had grown prematurely old during that terrible night.

Of the Golden Eagle and the rest of her crew, not a vestige remained. Out of a ship's company of twenty-six, all told, twenty had perished when our gallant ship met her doom.

Our present position was serious. Before us the vast iceberg, piercing the clouds, its pinnacled summits touched with the cold light of returning day; astern, a waste of waters, seething like a caldron, in which no boat could live.

As the day advanced the gale abated, but the sea continued to run so high that were compelled to remain close under the berg till the following morning.

We managed to get some sleep, by taking it in turns to keep the boat in a safe position, and at daybreak we were able to put into more open water, the sea being calmer. Our one hope was that we might sight a passing vessel.

The second mate was standing on athwart, anxiously searching, with straining eyes, across the gray waters. Suddenly he threw his arm up and shouted, in wild excitement:

"A sail! A sail!"

The cry sent the blood coursing through our veins once more, as we followed the direction of his gaze, and saw, towards the northeast, the welcome sight.

Our first sensation of joy was soon followed by anxious doubts. Our lives depended on the course she was steering, and of that we must remain in ignorance for some time.

If she proved to be close-hauled, she would bear down on us in a few hours; but if her course was northward we were doomed men.

"What is she?" asked the captain.

"Homeward bound!" cried one.

"No; I can see her head-sails!" said Capt. Burton.

She was standing towards the berg—of that there could be no doubt—and our hearts were lifted up again. Suddenly her after-sails darkened, while those forward still shone white.

"She has tacked! We are lost!"

She had come as close to the berg as was prudent, and was now standing away on the opposite tack.

"Now, men, let us make a last effort for our lives!" cried the captain, taking off his coat and jumping on athwart and waving it as a signal of distress.

We all shouted till our voices failed us, but the vessel kept her course and sank below the horizon, and we were alone again on the sullen sea.

We all sank into the boat, crushed and hopeless. This bitter disappointment, coupled with our long exposure to cold and wet and the want of food, quite unmanned us. It turned me sick and faint. My head swam, as though the boat were in the vortex of a whirlpool, and I swooned away.

When I recovered consciousness I became aware, from the motion of our boat, that we were in comparatively smooth sea.

A few stars were visible and I could see the outlines of my companions huddled together in the stern. Their listless conversation reached me, and they were talking of our probable position, which was supposed to be somewhere near the South Shetland island, a barren rock lying quite out of the track of ships.

They talked like men resigned to their fate. They had abandoned all hope and considered themselves doomed.

Just before dawn a cold sea fog settled upon us, making our position even more miserable than before.

When the dawn appeared there were indications of a clear sky, and when the sun rose the fog rolled away like a curtain. To us the effect was like that of a stage spectacle, for every man staggered simultaneously to his feet and stared with incredulous eyes at the sight before him. I am certain that for a second or so we all thought we were dreaming.

Right ahead of us lay a large brig, her foretopmast, maintop-gallantmast and jib-boom carried away, and the wreckage still floating alongside.

"Brig ahoy!" shouted Capt. Burton; but there was no response.

Again and again he shouted, while we, with suddenly revived energies, worked the boat alongside.

No sound or sign of life came to us, and she was evidently abandoned. She proved to be an Italian brig, laden with coal, but with both her hatches stove in.

Our first care was to sound the well. There were four feet of water in the hold. The pumps were choked, and we were powerless, therefore, to keep her afloat. Her crew had evidently abandoned her in a panic, for we found clothes in the forecastle and ample provisions on board.

After a hearty meal and a welcome exchange of our wet clothes for dry, we returned to the well, and found the water in the hold had not increased in depth.

"I do not believe she is leaking. The water must have gone down through the hatches," Capt. Burton said.

And this proved to be the case.

You may imagine our feelings of relief and joy. The food, so much needed, and the change of clothes, added to this new hope of escape, revived our energies, and we set to work to clear the wreckage and rig up a jury topmast and jib-boom.

The hatches were secured against further accidents, and before night set in we had shaped a course for the Falkland islands.

The log-book showed that the brig was bound from Cardiff to Valparaiso, and we afterward learned that the crew had been picked up by the vessel we had sighted.

Next day we succeeded in clearing the pumps. The wind freshened into another gale, but by careful seamanship we weathered it without much further damage, and had the satisfaction of bringing the brig to our destination in safety.

The salvage money came to a pretty good sum, which, when it was divided, compensated in some measure for the hardships we had endured owing to the loss of our fine ship, the Golden Eagle. —J. A. Higginson, in Golden Days.

—Spain, as a country, is still terribly backward in matters of sanitation, but it has progressed somewhat during the last century and a half. In the year 1760 the cleaning of the streets of Madrid was actually forbidden, the physicians of the city being of opinion that the filth was wholesome and the innovation unnecessary.

PAYING REWARDS.

The Southern Pacific Company Sends Cash to Kansas.

It Is to Pay the Men Who Killed the Four Members of the Notorious Dalton Gang—Brief History of the Criminal Family.

EARNED THE PRICE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 8.—The Southern Pacific Railway Company and Wells, Fargo & Co. has telegraphed to Coffeyville, Kan., $6,000, to be paid to the men who killed the Dalton gang. The express company's agent there is instructed to ascertain at once who has earned the price set on the bandits' heads and to make immediate payment. It is stated here that the rewards offered for the gang, dead or alive, aggregated $9,000 each.

The Daltons were a numerous family. There were five boys and three girls. Of the boys, two are engaged in farming, one in Oklahoma, where the mother of the family lives, and one near Coffeyville, where three of the brothers met their death Wednesday. The Daltons were second cousins of the noted James boys, who defied the law in Missouri for so many years, and through them were related to the Youngers, who are now serving life terms of imprisonment in the penitentiary of Minnesota. "Bob" Dalton was the first of the boys to enter upon a career of crime. While he was scarcely more than a boy he became a cattle thief, and did a thriving business driving off cattle from the herds on the Cherokee strip and taking them across the Indian territory into Colorado, where he would sell them. He was joined soon after he entered the business by his brother, Grant Dalton. Their depredations became so frequent and troublesome that the cattlemen organized to drive them from the strip. A posse of cowboys was formed for that purpose and gave the Daltons a hard chase, finally losing them in the wilds of New Mexico.

The next heard of the Daltons was in California, where they took to train and stage robbing. While robbing a stage there one of the passengers was killed in the attack. This spurred the officers on to extraordinary efforts to effect the capture of the gang, and Grant Dalton was finally captured. While being taken to a place for safe keeping he was rescued by the other members of the gang, the whole party finally escaping after being chased in California and through a good part of Arizona. In the spring of 1889 the gang turned up again in the Indian territory. When Oklahoma was opened to settlement the Dalton boys secured a choice claim for their mother near Hennessey, where she still lives supported by one of her sons. At the time of the opening "Bob" Dalton was a United States deputy marshal, being selected on account of his peculiar fitness to deal with desperate characters. After the opening he returned to his life of outlawry and he and Grant were then joined by their brother Emmet, the youngest of the brothers. They were at that time also joined by "Texas Jack," and soon gathered about them several desperate characters.

It was then that the most successful period of the Daltons' career, from their standpoint, began. Their attention was first directed to the robbing of express trains, and perpetrated many successful "hold-ups," the most noted of which are the robberies of the Santa Fe at Wharton and at Red Rock, the Missouri Pacific at Adair and the Frisco near Vinita. The amount secured by the robbers in their various raids will probably never be known. It was very great, however, and has been estimated at $300,000.

After the Frisco robbery the Daltons seem to have diverted their attention to the robbery of banks. They rode into El Reno one day and attacked the only bank in town. The only person in the bank at the time was the wife of the president, who fainted at the first sight of the ugly revolvers. The bandits leisurely took all the money in sight, and, remounting their horses, rode away. This raid netted them $10,000, which was such a severe loss to the bank that it was forced into liquidation. Thursday's was the next and last raid of the gang, and with it ended the existence of a band equaled only in the desperate character of its undertakings by the James and Younger bands.

KEEPING IT GREEN.

Irishmen Honor the Memory of Parnell by Visiting His Grave.

DUBLIN, Oct. 10—The people who took part in Sunday's demonstration in honor of the late Charles S. Parnell equaled in number those who attended his funeral a year ago. Thousands of visitors came to this city from Cork, Galway and the north of Ireland. Floral tributes in the form of wreaths, harps and other designs were received from political bodies throughout the country, and completely filled the memorial car and two carts. The procession to Parnell's tomb was accompanied by bands and corporations of Dublin and Cork, who attended in state. J. J. O'Kelly delivered an oration at the grave.

THE NASHUA'S CREW LOST.

The Boat Found Drifting Wrong-Side Up and All Hands Gone.

PORT HURON, Mich., Oct. 7.—The tug Howard returned to Sand Beach at noon and reports finding the steambarge Nashua drifting upside down about 8 miles off Bayfield, a small village 12 miles south of Goderich. There was a large hole in the bottom of the hull, indicating that the boiler and engine had gone through the bottom. No bodies or floating wreckage were found, near the vessel. It is probable that all hands were lost, as if any had reached shore they would undoubtedly have been heard from before now.

Fusion in Wyoming.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Oct. 10.—It is reported officially from democratic headquarters in this city that fusion with the populists has been perfected. The democrats will support Weaver electors and the people's party the democratic state ticket. In the twelve counties mixed tickets will be placed where there is failure to agree locally, which is threatened in two cases. The state fusion still holds good.

Death from Inhaling Gas.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 7.—James Rogers and his wife, an aged couple, were found dead in the bedroom of their residence Thursday afternoon. Gas escaping from a coal stove is supposed to be the cause of the calamity.

The Result in Georgia.

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 7.—Late returns from Georgia give Gov. Northen (dem.) 70,555 majority. The alliance candidate carried only eight out of 137 counties. The entire democratic congressional ticket was also elected.

Lived Over 100 Years.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 7.—John Merryweather Tinsley (colored) died here aged 109 years. He was born in Richmond, Va., July 1, 1783

PHYSICIANS CALLED IT CONSUMPTION.

What Two Bottles of Hamilton's Cough Balsam Did.

Bristol Center, Ont. Co., N. Y., June 24th, 1892.
I sold Hamilton's Cough Balsam to John Worden for his daughter Delia, who was suffering from a severe lung disease following after a serious attack of typhoid pneumonia, four years ago in May. Physicians said she had Consumption and everything indicated they were not far from right. She came to my store resting upon pillows and could not sit up, with a bad cough and apparently not long to live. I persuaded her to take a sample bottle of Hamilton's Balsam. She took it and two regular sized bottles, and picked hops the next September, seemingly in good health and has been well and healthy since then.
Yours truly, E. W Burge Druggist.
Hamilton's Cough Balsam is sold by your druggist. Large bottles 25 cents. Extra large bottles 50 cents.

DO HORSES THINK?

If they do, they certainly think Parmelee's Condition Powders are the best medicine they get. Full pound 25 cts. Red wrappers.

TO ESCAPE THE CHOLERA.

Don't get scared. Keep clean in person and surroundings. Keep the system generally in vigorous tone Keep the secretions active. See to it that the stomach and bowels are in good condition. Especially have the liver, that great cleanser of the system, active and vigorous. If these points are carefully attended to there is little chance for disease germs to find lodgement in the system. These conditions are not difficult to produce. One of the simplest and best aids toward all this is Parmelee's Mandrake and Dandelion Bitters. Their action upon the stomach, liver and bowels, is such as to correct any irregularity or derangement and put them in normal, active condition. Only 25 cents a bottle at druggists.

GOOD FOR MAN! GOOD FOR BEAST!

Parmelee's Universal Liniment for all Bone, Flesh and Muscle Diseases. It is guaranteed to give relief. The best Liniment made. Sold by dealers.

Autumn leaves you with work for the winter. Pearline leaves you little work in washing and cleaning. It leaves your hands in perfect condition after washing your clothes; it leaves your clothes clean without being torn and twisted; it is harmless, efficient, economical. The best thing for all housework is Pearline: the best thing for you is—try it.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 220 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

13. Dedicatory oration—William C. Breckinridge, of Kentucky.

14. "Star Spangled Banner" and "Hail Columbia," with full chorus and orchestral accompaniment.

15. Columbian oration—Chauncey M. Depew of New York.

16. Prayer by his eminence, Cardinal James Gibbons, archbishop of Baltimore.

17. Chorus—"In Praise of God"—Beethoven.

18. Benediction by Rev. H. C. McCook, of Philadelphia.

19. National salute.

The night of October 21 there will be a display of fireworks in Washington, Garfield and Lincoln parks. This is a change from the original programme, which contemplated a three-nights' display in Jackson park. Subsequently it was deemed hazardous to explode so many pieces in the vicinity of the buildings, and the arrangement was made to have a one night's exhibition in the three different sections of the city. No charges will be made for witnessing these displays.

Inaugural ceremonies in connection with the world's congress auxiliary will also take place the night of October 21. President Harrison will be the honorary chairman for the occasion and Archbishop Ireland will deliver the oration.

Saturday, October 22, will wind up the ceremonies. Arrangements have been made to dedicate state buildings at Jackson park and for military maneuvers at Washington park.

Admission to Jackson park on dedication day will be by invitation only. Those invited are national, state and municipal officers throughout the country. The only way to secure invitation, if not included in the list, is to purchase exposition stock, which is sold at $10 a share. A purchaser is entitled to an invitation. Arrangements have been made for seating 90,000 people in the Manufactures building, and room for 35 000 more people will be provided. There will be 15,000 reserved seats for specially invited persons, whose tickets will indicate the portions of the hall where good. All other ticketholders, excepting 2,500 distinguished guests, will occupy seats in the order of first come first served

COLUMBUS HONORED.

The Six Days' Celebration in New York City Commences.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—After many months of preparation the great New York celebration of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus was ushered in Saturday by special services in the various synagogues of this city. The city in many quarters displays profuse decorations, and it is believed that by to-day hardly a house in the city will be without some semblance of decoration in honor of the great event.

The services in all the Hebrew temples were distinctively patriotic, differing only in this, that the synagogues adhering to the rigid ceremonials of the orthodox faith permitted no interior decorations to interfere with the severe simplicity of the services incident to the Feast of the Tabernacles.

Special services were held in most of the churches. The choirs in some of the churches were assisted by orchestras, and elaborate musical programmes were given. The pulpits and altars were adorned with flowers. All of the discourses were prepared with special consideration for the children, so that the youngest attendant could appreciate the importance of the services.

To-day the secular part of the celebration will be opened with the school and college parade, with over 20.000 in line. The parade has occupied the attention of its promoters for weeks.

Four Workmen Killed.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 10.—A shifting train on the new West Virginia & Pittsburgh railroad became unmanageable on a heavy grade near Weston Saturday evening and ran away. In rounding a sharp curve the wild train suddenly ran into a car on which were six men, striking it with such force that the men were hurled 60 feet and the most of them were shockingly mangled, four being killed.

Bureau of Engraving.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The annual report of Capt. W. M. Meredith, chief of the bureau of engraving and printing, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1892, shows that treasury notes, certificates, etc., were issued to the value of $709,760,800, and revenue stamps valued at $154,000,000. The total expenditures during the year were $1,210,585.

Thrown Over a Precipice.

CREEDE, Col., Oct. 8.—During the progress of a funeral procession with the body of a child here a coach containing the corpse and four mourners was thrown down an embankment 150 feet high and two of the occupants received fatal injuries.

An Editor Fatally Hurt.

BOSTON, Oct. 7.—George M. Wittaker, editor of the New England Farmer, was fatally injured by the overturning of a tally-ho near here. Several other persons were also more or less injured.

Burned to Death by His Crazy Wife.

COATESVILLE, Ind., Oct. 8.—Mrs. William Sharp poured kerosene oil over her husband while he was asleep and then applied a match, burning him to death. The woman was insane.

ADDIIONAL LOCAL.

New York city is turned topsy turvy this week with the Columbian celebration ceremonies.

Alvin McNeil, of Grass Lake, was visiting friends in town last week. He came to Tecumseh fifty-one years ago this fall and lived here eleven years.

The Union Temperance meeting at the friend's church, last Sunday evening was a rouser. The church was literally packed and scores of people were turned away unable to gain admission. The program was a very fine one, consisting of a poem by Miss Ethel Ryon, of Hanover; song by Rev. Mrs. Smith; quartette by the King family; address by Rev. Smith; prayer by Rev. Babbitt, benediction by Rev. Varner.

Clay on High Tariff Taxes.

Henry Clay was the author of the American System that is the great landmark of protection to labor, but the so-called protection taxes of to-day, as imposed by the McKinley tariff, are a grotesque perversion of the whole policy of protection as taught by Clay.

We ask the members of the Union League and Republican business men to read the following letter written by Henry Clay to S. F. Bronson, of Georgia September 13, 1843, one year after he had passed the protective tariff of 1842.

"I think there is no danger of a high tariff being established, that of 1828 was eminently deserving that denomination. I was not in Congress and did not vote for it, but with its history and the circumstances which gave it birth I am well acquainted. They were highly discreditable to American legislation and I hope, for its honor, will never be repeated.

My opinion that there is no danger hereafter of a high tariff is founded on the gratifying fact that our manufacturers have now taken a deep root and that even now some branches of them are able to maintain, in distant markets, successful competition with rival foreign manufacturers."

This letter was written one year after the enactment of the protective tariff of 1842, and Mr. Clay then promised safety from high tariff taxes because some of our manufacturers had already progressed to the extent of reaching foreign markets, and the fulfillment of his prophecy of 1833 that with nine years of protection, every American manufacturing industry could maintain itself without protection taxes.

The tariff of 1842 that Mr. Clay was apologizing for because of its high tariff taxes levied such taxes during its existence averaging 33 per cent. The Mills bill, that is denounced by McKinleyites as a free trade measure, levied taxes of over 40 per cent. long after our industries had been established, and now the McKinley bill levies over 50 per cent. of tariff taxes.—Philadelphia Times.

"This thing is worth looking into," murmured the pretty girl as she stood in front of her mirror.

The Widow: Do you think marriage is always a failure? Bulfinch: Always a failure! Well, I should say not. Why, I know a case where the wife fairly idolizes her husband, and he—why, he can't keep away from her a minute. The Widow: Bless me! How long have they been married? Bulfinch: Nearly a week.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 19th day of September, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of David Smeltzer, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Michael Smeltzer, executor of the last will and testament and upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred have been fully paid and that he is now ready to close said estate and to render his final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be assigned and distributed according to the terms of said will: that he may be discharged and his bond canceled, and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper,

It is ordered, That Monday, the 17th day of October, next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Venn Allen spent Sunday with his parents.

Election day comes two weeks from Tuesday, November 8th.

Mrs. Augusta Barrett visited Clinton friends the first of the week.

Several of our citizens attended the funeral of Vern Cook Sunday afternoon.

Geo. Frost and wife, of Macon, spent Sunday with their aunt, Mrs. John Arner.

Ernest Goodrich, of Ypsilanti, called at Mrs. Hall's Saturday on his return from Blissfield.

Quite a number from here went to Toledo Saturday, taking advantage of the Corbett excursion.

May Jones, Lovina and Blanche Wiggins spent Saturday at the home of Mrs. D. McNair, with friends.

Fred Repper, of Harmony, Pa., called on his aunts, Mrs. W. H. Arner and Mrs. Catherine Cox, last week.

Quite a large number from our village attended the pioneer meeting at Britton on Wednesday of last week.

Frank Potts, of Washington, D. C., arrived Monday for a visit with his wife and her mother, Mrs. L. V. Miller.

Mrs. Vie Frost, of Dundee, visited Mrs. Harriott, Mrs. Susan Clark and Mrs. John Arner during the past week.

Elder Yager delivered his illustrated temperance address at the M. E. church in Macon to a large audience Friday evening.

Mrs. Jacob Arner left for Walton Monday to spend a few days with her son, George Arner, whose wife is very poorly.

The home missionary society will give a public entertainment on next Sunday evening in place of the regular preaching service.

The L. C. S. will be held at the home of Mrs. S. P. Smith to-morrow evening, instead of at Mrs. Houseman's, as announced in last week's HERALD.

Dr. Frank Chase and wife, of Jackson, Leonard Cook and wife, of Plainville, and Lewis Brown and wife, of Saline, were in attendance at the funeral of their nephew, Vern Cook, Sunday.

Vern Cook, of Raisin, after an illness of four weeks with typhus rheumatic fever, died at his father's home on Thursday, October 13th, aged 20 years, 9 months and 14 days. He bore his long illness and suffering very patiently, never mourning or complaining. He was a person who made friends wherever he went, always being cheerful and ready to lend assistance to a friend in need. At home he was full of life and took an interest in the welfare of his parents and sisters. He was a member of Co. C. of Tecumseh. The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at the house, Rev. Babbitt, of Tecumseh, officiating. The gathering of neighbors and friends was very large. Co. C. and the Band were in attendance, having charge of the services at the house and the grave. The floral gifts were numerous and beautiful. A large procession of friends accompanied the remains to their final resting place in the cemetery at Tecumseh.

CARD OF THANKS.

Words fail to express our appreciation to the kind neighbors and friends who so readily and willingly assisted us during the long illness of our dear son; also to Co. C and the Band, and the Ridgeway friends for their singing, and for the beautiful floral tributes furnished by friends at the funeral.

MR. AND MRS. CASPAR COOK.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS

And the World's Parliament of Religions.

Rev. James Gorton of the Universalist Church spoke on the above subject at the church last Sunday evening. We give herewith a synopsis of his address.

Of either of the themes we can say but little of what might be said. During the past week the city of New York has celebrated the four-hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus. During the present week the same event will be celebrated in Chicago in connection with the dedication of the World's Fair buildings. The clergy of the land are requested to make this Sunday, a time for saying fitting words of Columbus of this four-hundredth anniversary, of this international exposition, and of the wonderful unfolding of human history and march of human progress during these years.

What theme could be more fitting, inspiring and instructive? Of Columbus, we can say but few things, to those who desire a fuller and more detained history of this illustrious man, we refer them to Irving's life of Washington, to the more modern work of Dr. Edward Everett Hale, to the article on Columbus in the Encyclopædia Britannica, and to a very finely written and beautifully illustrated article in the Nov. No. of Demorest's Magazine, by the Spaniard, Gaetous Verdi.

Columbus was born at Genoa about 1435, this was one hundred and thirty years before the birth of Galileo. No one then believed that the earth was round like an orange and that it turned on its axis every twenty-four hours. More than a hundred years after this time such a belief was regarded as countrary to the teachings of scripture and a dangerous religious heresy. The Priests and all the people, and probably even Columbus himself, believed that the earth was flat and motionless, and that all the other heavenly bodies revolved about it.

Columbus lived seventy years before Luther, he lived several years before printing was invented and books were published bp Johannes Guttenburg, so there were no printed papers, periodicals or books in his day.

It was printing that made the Luthern reformation possible that enabled Luther to scatter his thunderbolts which shook the foundations of the Catholic Church and made the protestant reformation possible. Columbus was born before the invention of the steam engine. In his day there were no steamboats, no railroads, no telegraphs or telephones, no gas lights, no electric lights, no electric railways; and a thousand other inventions, discoveries and improvements of our time were not even dreamed of in his day.

Then it took over two months to cross the Atlantic; now it takes less than six days.

A world's parliament of religions is to be held at Chicago next year in connection with the World's Fair. This is under the general department of the World's Fair Auxiliary, and Dr. Barrow's, Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Chicago, is chairman of the Committee, having this work in charge. He is a man of fine attainments, of large mind, of catholic spirit. All the great religions of the world and all of the great bible's of the World are to be represented in this World's Parliament of religous, Christian Mohammodan, confucians, Hindus, Brahmins from Persia, China, Japan, Farther India, the Islands of the sea, and from all quarters of the globe. These religions are each to be represented in this parliament by one or more of their most able and distinguished adherents. These religions are not to come together to display their diferences, or to show their relative merits. Nor are they to come together for any purpose of criticism or controversy. But they are to come together to find their agreements to find the principles, and spirit, the purpose and substance that are common to all religions.

The foremost minds in all the churches to day, and in all the sects and religions of the world very well know that there is a comparatively new but yet a well established and still developing science of comparative Religion.

Dr. James Freeman Clark's book on the ten great religions of the World is a good text book for those who would know something of the science of comparative religons. What now will this parliament find when it comes together, Will it not find that there is in all religions a recognition of God, of the immortal life, of the higher spiritual nature of man, of worship. Will it not recognize that, setting aside all dogma, and speculation, and ceremony, the substance and essence of all religion is love to God and love to man—is purity, righteousness and love? Will it not recognize that these essential and crowning elements of religion, are the universal elements, and are recognized as the essential and surpreme elements in all the religions of the world?

What will be the result of the general recognition of these essential, universal elements in all religions? Will it not promote larger and more practical ideas of human brotherhood? Will it not promote a larger and more real spirit of unity among all the churches and all the religions of the world for the largest and most practical ends of beneficence to man-kind? Will it not promote a larger and more realand practical unity of all religions in all questions of reform and of intellectual, ethical and social progress? Will it not finally change the attitude of all the churches, sects and religions of the World towards each other, so that instead of competition, there shall be universal cooperation—a real unity of thought and purpose and work and fellowship in the great essentials and the great universals of religion?

Shall America, and the World's Fair at Chicago, have the honor and the glory of ushering in such a beneficent and sublime achievement?

Speech of John Z. White.

A good sized audience filled the Opera House last Saturday evening to listen to the speech of Hon. John Z. White, of Chicago, Ills. Mr. White's theme was principally, "Is the tariff a tax?" His illustration was of the stove industry. Entering into the details of how the American manufacturer, who considers that he is not making enough money, when he if obliged to manufacture and sell his stoves in competition with those made in a free trade country, selling (for illustration) at $10.00 each; so he goes to Washington, gets the law-makers to place a duty of 50 per cent. upon imported stoves, then raises the price of his stoves to fourteen dollars and seventy-five cents (to benefit the American people), but people buy fewer stoves than before. Then some other person seeing that A—— is making a good thing out of his protected industry, does likewise, and places his stoves upon the market at a slightly reduced price. Then C——, seeing how well A—— and B—— are doing, goes into the manufacturing of stoves, and reduces the price still lower. Thus far the ideas of the Republican Party are fulfilled, but then A——, B—— and C—— get together and say "Why should we cut each other's throats? Let us pool our issues;" so they form a trust, and put the prices back to their former high water mark. He also talked about the protected borax and iron mills, of the production of tin, and the other living issues of the day. It was a good speech, setting forth the evils of tariff taxation in all its points. He sowed a good supply of prime political seed, and some of it will doubtless bear fruit on election day.

"My Florida Home", A Popular Song.

The Florida Central & Peninsular R. R. have issued a song composed by the well know litterateur J. M. Murphy. The music is by Mrs. Murphy. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy are residents of Florida, and the song and music are the spontaneous utterances of genuine feeling, such as gives rise to songs that "live." The title is

MY FLORIDA HOME,

and written, as it was, by a literary man, whose inspiration was drawn from his own home, down in the balmy regions of the Gulf Coast of Florida, on the banks of the placid Anclote,

"Within sound of the sea and in sight of its foam,"

(to quote the beautiful words of the song), it comes with that directness of actual experience that the sentiment at once achieves conviction.

There may be no ideal spot on earth that would be the ideal of every one, but there many who, seeking for a rest from cares and a climate where there is

"Neither turbulent tempest, nor harsh chilling winter,"

may take up the song's refain—

"I have roamed o'er many lands and seen their attractions,
From wild, dreary Alaska to classical
Rome,
But in none could I find, with their scenic distractions,
A spot with the charms of my dear
Florida home."

The song is gotten up on the best music paper, full size, engraved notes, with an artistic frontispiece, and on the back a picture of a hunting scene, at one of the towns on the F. C. & P. R. R. making six handsome pages.

It can be obtained for any address, cased in a mailing tube, by remitting 10 cents in stamps (to defray cost of distribution) to

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Programme for Dedication Day, October 21, 1892.

The Grandest Celebration Ever Conceived on American Soil—Principal Features of the Unparalleled Pageant—The Official Programme.

The splendor of the old Roman pageants, the magnificence of Cleopatra's triumphal parade, which were thought to outrival the morning sunrise, or an autumnal wood, will be found to have evoluted into a type of glory before unknown, when the sunrise salute thunders over Lake Michigan on the morning of October 21, from the Chicago shore; and when the first pageants of the world's exposition are brought to view.

The first act in this wonderful outdoor spectacular extravaganza will be a reception tendered on the evening of October 19, to the president of the United States, his cabinet and other distinguished guests, at the Auditorium.

The following day will be devoted to the civic celebration. An important procession, participated in by civic organizations gathered in from the four quarters of the globe, will be reviewed by the president of the United States, his cabinet, the congress and other guests.

Of these societies the Patriotic Sons of America have volunteered 10,000 members; the United Order of Foresters say they will have 15,000 men in line; the Catholic Order of Foresters offer

GROUP—"PEACE AND PROSPERITY."

10,000, and the Knights of Pythias have asked to be given a conspicuous position in the parade, saying they will send 30,000 knights. The Masonic order and the I. O. O. F. will also be there in large numbers. Many thousands of the national guards will be there then.

The national salute at sunrise will inaugurate the ceremonies of dedication day, Friday, October 21. The president of the United States, his cabinet, members of the supreme court, members of the senate and house of representatives, distinguished foreign guests and governors of the different states and territories with their official staffs, will be escorted by a guard of honor, composed of troops of the United States army, detachments of the United States naval forces and regiments from the various state national guards, to the Manufactures and Liberal Arts building, in which the dedicatory exercises will be held.

At one o'clock in the afternoon in this building the following dedicatory programme will be carried out under the direction of the director general:

1. Columbian March. Written for the occasion by Prof. John K. Paine.
2. Prayer by Bishop Charles H. Fowler, D. D., LL. D., of California.
3. Dedicatory Ode. Words by Miss Harriet Monroe, of Chicago; music by G. W. Chadwick, of Boston.
4. Presentation of the master artists of the exposition and their completed work by the chief of construction.
5. Report of the director general to the World's Columbian commission.
6. Presentation of the buildings for dedication by the president of the World's Columbian exposition to the president of the World's Columbian commission.
7. Chorus, "The Heavens Are Telling"—Haydn.
8. Presentation of the buildings for dedication by the president of the World's Columbian commission to the president of the United States.

GROUP—"THE FINE ARTS."

9. Chorus, "In praise of God"—Beethoven.
10. Dedication of the buildings by the president of the United States.
11. Hallelujah chorus from "The Messiah"—Handel.
12. Dedicatory oration, Hon. William C. P. Breckinridge, Kentucky.
13. "The Star Spangled Banner" and "Hail Columbia," with full chorus and orchestral accompaniment.
14. Columbian oration, Chauncey M. Depew, New York.
15. National salute.

At the close of this programme a special electric and pyrotechnic display will be given with a repetition of "The Procession of the Centuries."

A series of military maneuvers and parades will constitute the main portion of the programme on Saturday, October 22. In the evening attractive and appropriate celebrations will be provided, followed by a magnificent display of fireworks.

After the close of the ceremonies each night there will be magnificent pyrotechnic displays.

Jones Pain & Sons, of New York and London, have exhausted their ingenuity in the preparation of the plan of fireworks. They have evolved an elaborate and brilliant programme. It will be aquatic and aerial and embrace set pieces, some of which are the largest ever manufactured. One piece is to be 1,000 feet long and 100 feet high. It will represent Niagara in flames. The display will take place along the lake shore, east of the manufactures' building. The set pieces will be at the north end of the main portion of the park, near the pier which protects the government battle ship. At the south end of the space will be another pier.

The distance between the two points is about 2,000 feet. Along the entire distance will be planted submarine fireworks, which will be exploded by electricity and burst through the waves like volcanoes of fire.

Meanwhile there will be exploding bombs, gorgeous set pieces, and altogether a wonderful pyrotechnic display which is intended to light up the heavens for miles. One piece comprehends a salute of 100 bombs 4½ inches in diameter.

They will be fired at once from mortars with a terrific explosion and burst of flame.

One bomb has been manufactured 8 feet in diameter. It will rush skyward, leaving a column of fire in its wake, and, after attaining a height of several hundred feet, burst and throw out 10,000 stars.

EXPLORER BY INSTINCT.

Some of the Earlier and Less Famed Journeys of Columbus.

Besides the mental labors of Columbus in early life in chartography, so favorable to an intellectual development of which the influences were brightly apparent everywhere around him, he repeatedly engaged in practical voyages, thereby gaining experience and training in the art and office of an accomplished navigator. Thus he sailed up to the extreme north and down to the southern limits of the lands then known, visiting Guinea and Iceland.

The scientific purpose of all these voyages is found fully set forth in the notes written by Columbus himself, which tend to demonstrate the inhabitability of the various zones of the planet far beyond the bounds then assigned by popular superstition to the existence of human life.

"I sailed," he said, according to a writer in the Century, "in the year 1477, in the month of February, a hundred leagues beyond Thule island, whereof the austral part is distant 73 degrees from the equinoctial and not 63, as some say, and it is not within the line which bounds the occident, as Ptolemy says, but is much further to the westward; and to this island, which is as large as England, go the Englishmen with wares, especially those of Bristol; and at the time when I was there the sea was not congealed, but there were very great tides, so much so that in some places they rose twice in the day twenty-five fathoms in height and fell as much."

Largest Building in the World.

President Harrison will dedicate the world's fair in the largest building in the world. It is capable of seating 300,000 people. In the center of the building is an enormous hall without columns 386 feet wide by 1,275 feet long, covered with a roof formed by great iron arches springing from all sides and rising to a height of 210 feet above the floor. This magnificent space will be lighted by continuous clear story windows and by an enormous spread of glass in the roof covering. Around this enormous hall is run a system of continuous naves 197 feet wide and 115 feet high, which are also lighted by clear story windows and glazed roofs, and aisles on either side of these naves, 23 and 45 feet wide respectively, covered by galleries of the same dimensions. The building, including its galleries, has 40 acres of floor space.

Thousands of Soldiers.

The military feature of the dedicatory ceremonies at Chicago will be most interesting. Gen. Nelson A. Miles has been made marshal of the day for the direction of the military maneuvers and also the civic and industrial parade. Five regiments of United States infantry and cavalry will, by order of President Harrison, take part in the ceremonies. There will be 10,000 members of the national guard.

Three Thousand Voices.

The musical director of the Chicago exposition, Theodore Thomas, will conduct the music October 21. He will have a chorus of 2,000 voices, a supplemental children's chorus of 1,000, an orchestra of 120 and two military bands. The scene of the dedication will be the interior of the largest exposition building ever built—namely: the magnificent temple to manufactures and liberal arts.

Unique World's Fair Enterprise.

A creole kitchen, with native cooks and waiters, and dishes prepared in creole style, will be a striking adjunct to the exhibit which Louisiana will make at the world's fair.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free.

SHE WAS SICK BUT TWENTY MINUTES.

Six years have passed since my first confinement, at which I suffered both long and intensely. This time, although I had used only one bottle of "Mother's Friend," I suffered scarcely any pain, and was not sick more than twenty minutes, and did not afterward experience that weakness usual in such cases. MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS.

Over twelve years I was afflicted with a very serious female difficulty and for the last sixteen months was under treatment of three of the very best physicians that money could employ. Under their skillful treatment I gradually grew worse until they decided they could render me no permanent help. One of my friends pursuaded me to try a bottle of Dullam's Great German Uterine Tonic, and after taking three bottles, can say I am in better health than I have been for twenty years and am now sixty years old, but feel as young as at thirty.

That Pretty Evangeline.

We published recently under the head of "A Pretty Surprise" a notice of a new and very charming edition of Longfellow's most celebrated, "Evangeline." Upon examination, the book proves so delightful in every way that we believe it will be a favor to our readers to refer to it again. It is handsomely illustrated, mainly by Birket Foster, one of the most famous of English artists, and bound in exquisite taste in a combination of white and blue cloth, with gilt edges and ornaments, and is sold only by the publisher direct, at approximately the actual cost of manufacture by the hundred thousand—19 cents a copy, plus 6 cents postage, if by mail. His object is to place an example of his book making in the hands of a vast number of readers. He could certainly choose no more excellent volume, to please all people of good taste. His catalogue of books covering every department of literature, a veritable feast of good things for book lovers, and at a wonderfully low price, considerably over 100 pages in size, is sent post-paid for 2 cents. COLUMBUS' SHIPS.

They Will Be Reproduced for the Chicago Exposition.

The Flagship Santa Maria—How She Was Built and Equipped—Interest of the Spanish Government in the Enterprise.

The Santa Maria was the largest of the three vessels in the little fleet of Columbus. A reproduction of this vessel was launched at Carraca, Spain, June 26, 1892, and her appearance at the time is shown in the accompanying cut.

This vessel is being built at the expense of the Spanish government, and the two smaller vessels of the fleet are at the same time under construction in that country at the expense of our government, and under the supervision of United States officers, acting in conjunction with the Spanish committee.

The Santa Maria was built at the arsenal of Carraca, 63 days being taken for the construction of the vessel, under the direction of Engineer Leopoldi Puente, of Wilke. Her length between perpendiculars is 22.60 meters; length over all, 29.10 meters; extreme beam, 9.86 meters. The hull weighs 127 tons; it has five decks, and a mainmast, foremast, mizzenmast and bowsprit. The armament consists of six falconets and two lombards, the latter being on the main deck.

It was intended that all three of these vessels should be completed in time to take part in a celebration in Spain commemorative of the date of the sailing of Columbus, August 3, 1492.

The vessels are now to be sent to this country, arriving in New York in time to take part in the celebration which is to take place in October. The vessels will sail via the St. Lawrence and the lakes to Chicago where they will constitute a feature of the exposition.

The Spanish committee having the matter in charge have made careful examinations of all obtainable data to insure that the vessels shall be in every detail which can be definitely determined exact copies of the original Columbus vessels.

In connection with this subject a Madrid periodical says:

"A great deal of data of very varied character has been obtained, but nothing that would give the exact details sought, because, doubtless, the vessels of that time varied greatly, not only in the form of their hulls, but also in their rigging, as will be seen by an examination of the engravings and paintings of the fifteenth century, and as there was no ship that could bear the generic name of 'caravel,' great confusion was caused when the attempt was made to state, with a scientific certainty, what the caravels were."

The word "caravel" comes from the Italian car a bella; and with this ethnology it is safe to suppose that the name was applied to those vessels on account of the grace and beauty of their form, and finally was applied to the light vessels which went ahead of the fleets as dispatch boats. Nevertheless, we think we have very authentic data, perhaps all that is reliable in the letter of Juan de la Casa, Columbus' pilot. From his drawings and the descriptions of the days runs in the part marked "incidents of Columbus' log," it is ascertained that these vessels had two sets of sails, lateens for sailing with bowlines hauled, and with lines for sailing before the wind.

The same lateens serve for this double object, in bending the sails half way and hoisting them like yards by means of top ropes. Instead of having the points now used for reefing, these sails had bands of canvas called bowlines, which were unfastened when it was necessary to diminish the sails.

Would Be Worth a Fortune.

During a severe storm, on Columbus' return journey from the new land he had found, he, feeling that his frail ship must go down, committed a narrative of his discovery to the sea. What a rich treasure it would be if it could be fished up in its oil and tar envelope to-day, and given to the world.

Columbus' Second Voyage.

The oldest record of Columbus' second voyage to America, which occupied the time between September, 1493, and June, 1494, is a manuscript of the middle of the tenth century in the Academy of History at Madrid. It is the narrative of Dr. Chance, the physician of the expedition.

THE WIFE OF COLUMBUS.

She Was a Member of a Noble Italo-Portuguese Family.

Columbus allied himself by marriage with an Italo-Portuguese family. She whom he was to choose and take to wife was named Felipa Muniz Peretrello.

She belonged to a noble house associated with Dom Henry, of Ariz, in his explorations and discoveries as well because of their family station as by the grace of the infante.

Laws like those which in chemistry govern the affinity of combining atoms, in social intercourse produce personal affinities. The greatest of all discoverers was himself destined to wed the daughter of a discoverer.

Columbus often went to mass on Sundays and other obligatory days. His residence in Lisbon being near the convent of All Saints, he resorted thither to perform his devotions, and in his assiduous attendance there it was his fate to be attracted by Dona Felipa Muniz until he sought and obtained her in marriage.

The affection of Columbus for the young Lusitanian doubtless possessed practical features also in view of the sailor's desire to live for the realization in his riper age of the work already fully planned in the latter years of his exuberant youth. Moreover, crediting his contemporaries as we should, the incomparable pilot displayed two traits capable of turning the head I will not say of Dona Felipa but of every woman—eloquence and personal attractiveness.

His many graces captivated her senses, his eloquence, her mind. Felipa Muniz, daughter of Phillipone Peretrello, and Christopher Columbus were made one, in conformity with religion and law, in holy indissoluble wedlock, in the year 1471. The year following their union a son was born to them who was batized in Lisbon and named Diego.

PORTRAITS OF COLUMBUS.

They Are Almost as Numerous as the Sands by the Seashore.

The numerous portraits of Columbus, presenting such wide extremes of appearance as to seem absurd, yet have enough features in common to provide good material for creating a mental picture of Columbus. In person he was tall and shapely, long-faced and aquiline and had very pale gray eyes. In early life his complexion was very fine.

In the generally accepted historical pictures he is represented as possessed of mustache and pointed beard.

At thirty his hair was quite gray. He was temperate in eating, drinking and dress, and so strict in religious matters that for fasting and saying all divine offices, he might be thought professor in some religious order.

Notwithstanding all he has done for this country some American writers have recently sought to prove that his moral conduct would not stand the high test of a comparison with that of a New England Sunday school-teacher. He was really so devoutly religious that his signature is a cipher, said to mean "Servate—me, Xristus, Maria, Yosefus, Christoferens."

In his later years he suffered from gout, ophthalmia and other maladies which his many hardships brought on.

His sight and hearing were quick and his sense of smell extremely delicate, and he had a great fondness for perfumes. Even on his voyages he was fond of having his linen, which was very fine, and his gloves scented with essences or more often with dried flowers. Otherwise he was moderate and simple in diet and apparel from taste and on principle; he may be added to the list of great men who confined themselves as far as possible to vegetable diet and preferred water to wine. He was scrupulously careful of garb and person, even when he wore the garb of an associate of the order of St. Francis, as he did whenever circumstances permitted.

LENAWEE PIONEERS.

THE ANNUAL MEETING OF THE COUNTY PIONEER SOCIETY HELD AT BRITTON LAST WEDNESDAY.

Beautiful Weather, a bountiful Dinner, a Large Gathering and Two Very Interesting Programs—A Detailed Report of the Meeting.

If the committee on arrangements could have had a special dispensation from Old Probabilities himself, or had had it made upon plans and specifications drawn by themselves especially for the occasion, there could not have been a more beautiful day than the 12th of October, 1892, upon which it had been decided to hold the meeting of the Pioneer Society of Lenawee County. It was a perfect day of bright sunshine and balmy air.

The village of Britton, where it had been decided to hold this year's meeting, was full of old pioneers, shaking hands with old friends and greeting those they had not seen for years.

Promptly at eleven o'clock the meeting was called to order by the President, Thomas F. Moore. Exelby's Opera House was well filled and a neat and appropriate short address was given by the President.

First upon the program was a song by the Britton Glee Club, which was well rendered and well received by the audience. A selection was then given by the Britton Orchestra, after which Rev. Gulick asked the Divine blessing upon those there assembled.

Rev. F. G. Strickland, of Britton, then followed with an address of welcome, a short summary of which we give below: He spoke at length of the debt of gratitude that the rising generation owe to the pioneers; that they would be ungrateful indeed if they did not give them the respect and veneration that their gray hairs deserve; the advantages that the young men and women possess over those of long ago in the public schools, and of the great advantages with which they are blessed to-day; compared the beauty of old age to that of youth and said that the beauty of old age was that of well-tried beauty. That the hopefulness of the County belongs to the young man and woman he denied and said that if it was not for what the pioneers had done they would be helpless, and closed by bidding them all welcome to Britton, which is not a pioneer village, but one built by the pioneers of that section.

President Moore then responded to the address of welcome. He thanked Britton in behalf of the pioneers of Lenawee County, for the greeting they had received. He gave a short history of the pioneer life of Lenawee County; spoke of the reverence which was due to the pioneers; of the hardy men and women who came into the wild forest, where their nearest neighbors were the bears, wolves and snakes; compared the condition of the people of to-day with that of sixty years ago; of the forests that have disappeared and the fine farms and elegant homes that have taken their places. That they met there, not as partisans, but as pioneers, and that the Society should not be used for any political purpose, but to look at the hardships and privations that they suffered in laying the foundations of this civilization; that this County, which sixty years ago was a wilderness, stood to-day, not only at the head of all the counties of Michigan but the United States as well, in progress, education and products; that the pioneers should feel proud of this fact; that the work they performed was of no ordinary character, but the character of those who came into this wilderness to carve out homes for themselves, for their posterity to enjoy after them; that it took brave men and women to do this. He spoke of the churches and schools they had reared and the civilization wrought in the forests. He then gave a short history of the organization. He said it was organized twenty years ago and that its first president, Francis Dewey, of Cambridge, served in that capacity for eighteen years, until he passed away one year ago. Death had not been idle in their ranks in those years. Then the young men and women should do homage to those pioneers who planted this great civilization in the wilderness.

Music—Orchestra.

Miss Minnie Barrett then recited a poem, giving a peep behind the curtain of the house of a newly married couple, showing that it was not always as happy as it seemed on the outside. The trials of husband and wife as to who should get up and kindle the fire, etc. brought down the house.

Rev. James Wright then gave a short address, in which he spoke of the great changes between then and to-day; how the sickle and scythe had been superseded by reaper and mower; that it is less work to-day to gather forty or fifty acres of grain than one sixty years ago. What would the young people of to-day do if put back in their places? But it was for them to reap the benefits only, not the hardships.

Music—Orchestra.

A motion was then made that the meeting adjourn for dinner, which was not unnecessarily delayed by any person present.

The people then adjourned to G. A. R. Hall, where the ladies of Britton had assembled not only themselves but sundry evidences of their culinary ability, ranging from the good old pioneer dish—pork and beans—to pressed chicken, which certainly did not belong to the pioneer days, and from the exquisite pumpkin pie of our grandmother's make to the more modern invention, fearfully and wonderfully made. But all who sat down to the bounteous repast gave evidence of the quality by the quantity they managed to conceal beneath their vests.

The celery on the tables was donated by the Tecumseh Celery Co., for which they all were exceedingly grateful and return thanks to aforesaid Company.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

At 1:30 o'clock the meeting again convened and there was hardly standing room in the house.

A committee consisting of John Britton, Jacob G. Roberts and Justus Lowe was appointed by President Moore to name officers for the ensuing year and they reported as follows:

President—Thos. F. Moore.
Vice President—Rufus Baker.
Secretary—S. C. Stacy.
Treasurer—Horace Sayles.
Executive Com.—A. Lamb, Edson Walker, Wm. E. Doty, D. Sinclair.

President Moore gave a short sketch of pioneer life. When he and his wife settled in the forest their nearest neighbor was four miles away and Indians came through there frequently.

George W. Moore, of Medina, was called out and said that he came into the State in 1834 in company with three other young men, and went into Monroe county, then came to Adrian and from there started on a three days' tramp through the forest to Bean Creek. Their provisions consisted of one Ohio ham and six pounds of crackers. They had no shelter of any kind. There were only four families in the town of Seneca and not a clearing. They went three miles into the woods and took up land. Food was very scarce and their first crop consisted of about two and a half bushels of wheat. The first child in the township was born in 1834.

Next came a poem by Chas. Bowerman, a recitation by Miss Bertha Kniffin and music by the Ridgeway Glee Club. Then followed an historical sketch by Dr. George Howell, which was intensely interesting. We give it in full below.

DR. HOWELL'S SKETCH.

Mr. President and members of the Pioneer Society:—While it gives me pleasure to comply with the request of the Secretary, to write a short historical sketch for the society, I now find that I had not the leisure to prepare one to my own satisfaction.

All men are alike, and yet no two are exactly alike in anything. We remember James because of his peculiarities. We do not forget Peter because of his eccentricities, and we admire Henry because he so much more largely than other men possessed excellent traits of character.

Now among the early settlers of the township of Macon, there came men of as good blood and brain as were ever born in or came from the East. They were young men with strong bodies and vigorous mind. They had good qualities, were energetic, kind-hearted, generous, loyal and patriotic. They were representative men. They were loved, respected, honored, their names, household words and their virtues worthy of emulation. They now have nearly all passed away, but those of which I wish to write had peculiarities, eccentricities and marked traits of character that made them differ one from the other, and made them prominent in their day and among their associates. It was the good qualities in common and the marked traits of character in particular, that attracted Hannah (Britton) Dennis to Israel Pennington, Letitia VanDusen to Dr. Joseph Howell and Anna Collins to to Gabriel Mills and Serena Miller to Simeon Davidson. Now it is a knowledge of the peculiar traits of character, and incidents in the lives of those four men, Gabriel Mills, Israel Pennington, Simeon Davidson and Dr. Joseph Howell, that I wish to transmit to the society and to those who may come after us. In this I shall have to be exceedingly cautious, for once I came very near getting into great difficulty by writing up the eccentricities of a very excellent man.

Gabriel Mills was born at Barnegat, Feb. 14th, 1793. Fifty years ago there was no one living in Macon who did not know of Barnegat. Of the first settlers Uncle Jimmy Collins came from Barnegat, Heborn Camburn, Sen., came from Barnegat; so to did Ralph Mills, James Ellison, Eli Carter and others. There used to be a song entitled "Backside of Barnegat Shoals." Barnegat is a little village on Barnegat Bay, N. J. It is about six miles across the bay to the ocean. As I said, Gabriel Mills was born at Barnegat. In 1832 James Mills came to Michigan and bought of government several tracts of land in Macon for himself and for his brother Gabriel. The township was heavily timbered with oak, walnut, whitewood and other valuable timbers. The Macon flowed through the township from the N. W. to the S. E., and afforded sufficient water for a small saw-mill. On lands owned by Joseph Howell was a pretty good mill site. James Mills at once wrote Gabriel and advised him to purchase the lands and get a mill. Gabriel immediately purchased of Mr. Howell the east half of the southeast quarter of section 8, and the west half of southwest quarter of sec. 9, at $2.50 per acre, and in the spring and summer of 1833 James built for Gabriel thereon, the first saw-mill ever erected in the township. In Oct. 1834, Gabriel came from Barnegat, N. J., bringing with him his wife Hannah and his children, Mary, John and Isaac. They moved into their log-house, north of the Macon and east of the highway and about thirty rods north of the mill. To the settlers the mill was indeed a highly appreciated blessing. There was no mill nearer than Tecumseh, and the roads winding through the dense forest, were almost impassable. The mill was welcome, and the large hearted and generous owner more than welcome to the settlement. Mr. Mills was by far the wealthiest man in all the township. He was worth six thousand dollars. By his own liberality he built the first bridge on the highway over the Macon, by the mill; and also the first frame school-house built within the township. For the settlers he sawed lumber on shares and often loaned them small sums of money, with which to bridge over hard times. The benefit of such liberality can only be appreciated when we remember that in early times, in order to keep want from the door, the greatest economy was practiced, and then at times both ends would not meet. Even the ashes from the burned logheaps and brush piles was gathered and sold. The pond and the mill that stood by it, were places of historical interest. It was there we youngsters learned to swim, and on moonlight winter nights and winter holidays, skated. There the farmers washed their sheep in the spring before shearing. On the southeast part of the pond was where the unsafe raft went to pieces and James Wheeler was drowned, and but for Gabriel Mills, the expert swimmer, two others would also have drowned. It was just below the wastegate and above the bridge, that the Mormon Elder Sirrine baptised his Mormon converts.

Elder Mephibosheth Sirrine was converted to the mormon faith in the city of New York, under the preaching of Elder P. P. Pratt, a noted mormon evangelist. About the year 1835, Elder Sirrine and Mariah, his wife, came to Michigan and lived with James Wheeler, Mrs. Sirren's father, on the farm now owned by Cyrus Mead. He at once began with zeal to preach the Mormon faith. Among the converts were Mr. and Mrs. John Norton, Mr. and Mrs. Bangley, Mr. and Mrs. Lamb and Mr. and Mrs. Seth Jackson. It was a real live, active, zealous society. Once on a time, Elder Sirrine was holding a baptismal service just below the wastegate. The water being deep a plank was placed at the proper depth below the [illegible] on which the Elder and the [illegible] designed to wade, and the elder [illegible] dip candidate and return, [illegible] naughty boys on mischief bent [illegible] took the support from the deep water end of the plank, and when the unsuspecting Elder led out his faithful follower, the plank tipped and both were plunged into the deep water. Tradition says the boy's names were Steve—— and Will —— from New Jersey. I think they were from Barnegat. On another occasion, the Elder was baptizing a large and fleshy woman, I think she would weigh fully two hundred and sixty pounds. She was a weighty convert. The elder feeling uncertain of his grip when his hand was placed beneath her shoulders, tied a cloth girdle around her waist, and grasped the girdle with the hand that was to raise her from the water. Down, gracely down she went under the water. But, when the Elder lifted with all his strength, to raise her from the water, the knot slipped, and never in Macon, since the days of Mormonism, has there been seen such a floundering, such a snorting, such a kicking, and such an artistic arrangement of toilet. One more incident is worth recording: Seth Jackson was a doubting convert. He had a yoke of steers. They were the ideal of his heart. One day while cutting grass on the prairie a rattle-snake bit him. Alarmed, frightened and scared he ran trembling to Dr. Joseph Howell's, a distance of nearly three miles. The doctor was from home attending calls. Seth was greatly alarmed, and kneeling on a large, flat stone at the front door he prayed, prayed most earnestly: "Lord, O Lord, I'd give my yoke of steers to know if Mormonism is true, I would, O Lord I would." The mormons remained at Macon until the general movement of mormons to Nauvoo and thence to Salt Lake.

I was writing of Gabriel Mills. In politics he was a whig and a strong anti-slavery man. In religious faith he was a quaker. He held opinions at variance with the orthodox friends. He was a Hicksite Quaker. He was a good bible scholar and loved to converse much on matters of religion. He believed that the Sabbath was made for man. So when the rains filled his mill pond on Saturday, he utilized the water on Sunday. He was a very industrious, and at times an impetuous worker. Henry Sones used to say of him, that he would come into the chopping, throw off his hat, swing the ax tremendously for a half hour or so, and then be off to something else. He had a carriage built to order. It was somewhat after the pattern of one brought from N. J., by Uncle Sammy Satterthwaite of Tecumseh, although in reality it might be said to be the conception of his own brain. It was a seaman's idea of what a landsman's craft should be. It was as unlike an ordinary carriage as a full-fashioned quaker-bonnet is from a lady's fashionable hat. You remember the quaker bonnet was a marvel of inventive genius and artistic skill. To my juvenile imagination it was properly constructed to protect woman's sweet face from the too near approach of the broad brimed hat. It was a hinderance to worldly temptation, and in some unexplained way, a promoter of spiritual mindedness. The vehicle was fully as artistic as the quaker bonnet. In after years it came to be the property of Job. Burleson and was then called Job's Ark.

Mr. Mills possed rare conversational powers. Coming from the sea shore, and having been a seafaring man he seemed to have an inexhaustable fund of anecdotes, and being well read both in politics and religion, he was an entertaining talker, and he often interested his company until the small hours of night. Mr. Mills died, Feb. 1st, 1851. Six of his children are now living, Mary, John, Isaac, Grandville, Anna and Cassius. His wife, Mrs. Hannah (Collins) Mills, who was born Sept. 17th, 1805, and to whom he was married in 1827, 48 yet living at the age of eighty-seven years. In life Mr. Mills was greatly loved and respected, and we the children of the pioneers, who was acquainted with him, remember him with pleasure and revere his memory. He was buried on his own possessions on the hill beyond the Macon, toward the sunrising. Of the other three pioneers, Israel Pennington, Simeon Davidson, and Joseph Howell, I leave to an abler writer.

Medley of Old Time Songs—Ridgeway Glee Club.

By request, Miss Minnie Barrett gave a repetition of her recitation of the morning.

Recitation—Ella Exelby.

Music—Orchestra.

Paper, "In the Days of Yore"—Mrs. W. R. Wilson. It was one of Mrs. Wilson's best and we would be glad to reproduce it if space permitted.

Rev. E. Yager, of Ridgeway, then read a fine address. A lack of space renders it impossible for us to print it here, but we hope to present it to our readers at some future time.

Short speeches were then made by Hiram Raymond, Geo. Oliver, Michael Wilson and P. J. Van Vleet, after which the President thanked the ladies and gentlemen of Britton for the reception they had given the old pioneers and the meeting then adjourned after singing "America."

One of the interesting features of the affair was the collection of relics, a list of which is given below.

3 Vols. M. Rapins DeThoyrass' History of England, published in 1786-7-9; Josephus' Works, Vol. 2, 1775; Bible published in 1607, bound in board covers with brass ornaments; needle work made in 1814 and 1827; flax hetchel over 200 years old, all owned by Mrs. George Oliver.

Book of Presbyterian sermons, written by Rev. Isaac Ambrose in 1633; brought to America in 1720—G. W. Moore.

Copy of the Madisonian published in Tecumseh in 1838—Geo. Merritt.

Bible published in 1762—John Exelby.

Old flax hetchel—Frank Brown.

Collection of coins, Indian relics and curiosities from Florida—L. M. Hoagland.

Silver teapot 65 years old—John Britton.

Petrified pine, an old colonial plate, coins of 1797 and 1832, Bible published in 1746, old land grant, 1835, signed by Andrew Jackson; trowel 200 years old—John DuBois.

Large bowie knife taken from a rebel at Lexington, 1862; piece rebel shell fired at Fort Sumter April 12th or 13th, 1861; piece of oil-cloth from the floor where Col. Ellsworth was killed, at Alexandria, May 24, 1861; wooden spoon used by W. C. Moore while a prisoner in Libby and Columbia prisons; piece of wood from stockade of Andersonville prison; brick from cook house of Andersonville prison; stone from the grave of President Polk; claw of a Californian bear; buckle worn by Robert Moore at his wedding in London, 1748, all owned by G. W. Moore.

Piece of silk dress worn by great-grandmother of Horace Greeley at her wedding.

The following became members of the Society:

The meeting was an exceedingly enjoyable one to all who were present. The attendance was large, the program excellent, the dinner superb, the crowd good-natured, and everything conspired to render the gathering an unqualified success. The citizens of Britton did themselves proud by their perfect arrangements and unstinted hospitality.

Judge (to prisoner): Have you something to add for your defense? Prisoner: Yes, Judge, I desire to have the new law applied to me. Judge: I don't understand you. Prisoner: I ask to be expelled from the country. I recently came over from Hamburg, and have probably got cholera germs.

Chicago Mother: Dear me! What have you been doing? How did you get yourself so dirty? Little Son: Been making mud pies in the bath tub.

STATE OF MICHIGAN County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Monday, the 17th day of October, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Samuel Rundall deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of William Bunded, administrator, upon the estate of said deceased alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred, have been fully paid, and that he is now ready to close said estate and to render his final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be distributed to those persons by law entitled thereto, that he may be discharged and his bond canceled and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 14th day of November next at 9 o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

Bring along that wood at once.

Several Tecumseh people visited Toledo last Saturday to see the Champion, Jim Corbett.

Ten cords of four foot wood or block stove wood wanted at once. For particulars call at this office.

Parties who wish to pay for their subscription in wood must bring it now, during the pleasant weather.

Chas. R. Keeber, of Palmyra, Democratic candidate for Register of Deeds, was in town last Friday and gave the HERALD a call.

Ex-Mayor Hock, Sheriff Baldwin, A. J. Treat and other Adrian parties attended Mrs. Elliott Gray's funeral last Monday.

Stephen Martin, of Detroit, and Miss Ella Gray, of Gross Isle, were among those from abroad who came to attend the funeral of Mrs. Elliott Gray.

Hiram Raymond favored the HERALD with a call Tuesday. It is ten years since he visited Tecumseh and he finds that many changes have taken place during that time.

The Rev. D. J. Lewis, of Tecumseh, will address the people of Macon, on the political issues of the day from the Prohibition standpoint, at Grange Hall, Thursday eve., Oct. 27th, 1892. Everybody invited to come out and hear this eloquent orator.

The Democrats of Washtenaw County will hold a mass meeting and barbecue at Ann Arbor, next Monday, Oct. 24th. It will be a grand rally as Adlai E. Stevenson, of Illinois, Cleveland's running mate, will be present. Many people from this section will doubtless attend.

Mrs. Elliott Gray, who has been in failing health for some time, departed this life last Friday and the funeral obsequies were held at the residence on Monday afternoon, and were attended by a large concourse of neighbors and sympathizing friends. A noble wife and mother has gone to the better land. A suitable tribute to her memory will appear hereafter.

A letter from C. J. Hendershot, who is now living at Denver, indicates that he is prospering. He saw some of the Tecumseh folks during the conclave: A. Wright and wife, S. W. Anderson and Sam McClure; also James Erskine who now lives in Montana. Mr. Hendershot is a member of the Brotherhood of Carpenter's and Joiners, and has been secretary of the Denver Union for four terms.

The dedication of the new masonic temple at Milan, Wednesday evening, was the great event of that village. A large number of the order were present from Dundee, Ann Arbor, Ypsilanti, Tecumseh, and other places. The exercises were conducted by Grand Master Jones of Grand Rapids. After which a grand banquet was served in the opera house, for which tables were provided for 400 persons, which were occupied by the guests. A grand ball followed the banquet, the music being furnished by the famous Chequamegon orchestra of Ann Arbor. It was an affair long to be remembered by all present.

When a woman of such unquestionably high position in New York society as that occupied by Mrs. Burton Harrison consents to define the best and most useful social laws for girls, our young women can well afford to listen and remember. There is every indication for a most agreeable interest in the series of articles on "The Well-Bred Girl in Society," which Mrs. Harrison will begin in the November issue of The Ladies' Home Journal. Mrs. Harrison will, in this series, take up every phase of a girl's life in society, and point out to her principally the mistakes it is best for her to avoid.

Dr. Snyder went to Toledo last Monday.

The family of M. F. Marks expect to move soon to Rhienlander, Wis.

S. B. Terry and Mrs. P. J. Welling visited friends in Toledo last Monday.

R. A. Heesen went on a business trip to Coldwater the fore part of the week.

Rain is badly needed now. Pastures are drying up and wells are getting low.

Dr. L. G. North is attending the Sunday School Convention at Rollin this week.

J. W. Wightman and Chas. Burridge went to Adrian on legal business last Monday.

A brother of C. M. Minor's, living at Cleveland Ohio, is visiting Mr. Minor this week.

Guy Belding, who lived in Frank Davidson's family many years ago, was here on a visit last week.

The carpenters are rushing the work on Dolph Heesen's new house. It will be ready for occupancy before the snow flies.

An infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Theo. P. Wood, died last Saturday of cholera infantum. The funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon.

Rev. John Russell will address a prohibition meeting at Sutton's Opera House on Tuesday evening, Nov. 1st. He is a good talker and the house ought to be filled.

The venerable E. H. Custer of Monroe came her Monday to attend Mrs. Elliott Gray's funeral. He will remain a few days while here. His health is quite poorly at present.

Revs. Adkins and Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Lester, Mr. and Mrs. Coddington are the delegates of the Baptist church to attend the Baptist convention which meets at Benton Harbor this week.

Fred Landgraf is doing well at Toledo. He is now in the auditor's office of the Toledo & Ohio Central Railway. There are several railroad boys at Toledo from Tecumseh and vicinity and they are all prospering.

James Potter Jr., left yesterday for Rhienlander, Wis., where he thinks of locating in business, if the outlook seems favorable; his family will remain here till spring and then move, in case Mr. Potter decides to make that city his permanent home.

The Tecumseh Herald blossoms out with a new heading. It is a vast improvement, Mr. Stacy. Besides this, Scove drops into poetry and furnishes two campaign songs. Confidentially, they are not Republican campaign songs either, and for this reason they sing horribly out of tune.—Adrian Times.

Temple McClure & Co., are having a fine run of work this fall. Their new plant far excels the old one in facilities for turning out all kinds of finished work and their stock of rough and dressed lumber is larger than ever before. See their new announcement in another column.

The question in regard to opening the Columbian Exposition on Sunday which was supposed to have been decided, appears to be still agitated as if it had not been settled. The arguments in favor of closing the Exposition on Sunday will therefore be presented by the Pastor of the Presbyterian church at the 7:00 p. m., service next Sunday night in that church. All interested in the subject are invited to come.

The annual Sunday school convention of Lenawee county will be held at Rollin Center, Thursday and Friday, October 20 and 21, to which all Sunday school workers are invited and urged to be present. Good speakers and a good programme has been arranged, and entertainment will be provided for all who will go. Let every Sunday school in the county send delegates to this convention, that it may be the most successful of any held in this county.

The United States supreme court has affirmed the ruling of the Michigan state court in the case involving the constitutionality of the Minor election law. This decision is in favor of the democrats. The court has made short work of the contest. Without a dissenting voice it holds that the law is constitutional and valid, and that the coming presidential election in Michigan must be held under the terms of the new law.

Mr. William Hayden and his daughter Clara, started last Monday for New York City, where Miss Hayden will continue her trip across the Atlantic, and thence to Germany, where her sister Mabel is now stopping. The two sisters now expect to remain there about one year to prosecute their musical studies and will return home in the fall of 93. The best wishes of a host of Tecumseh friends will accompany Miss Hayden on her journey and during her sojourn there.

The Forum for November has a group of short papers from representative men not engaged in active politics telling for whom they will vote and why. The writers include two bank presidents, one clergyman (the Rev. Dr. Swing, of Chicago), one historian (Mr. James Schouler), two great merchants (Mr. John Claflin, of New York, and Mr. Franklin McVeagh, of Chicago), and the Hon. David Dudley Field. An interesting point about these brief and frank statements of political preference is that most of the men who represent what might be called vested interests favor Mr. Harrison, and those who do not, favor Mr. Cleveland.

Mrs. Fidelia Hanchett and Mrs. Louis Bass of Madison Co., N. Y., are visiting at Chas. Tefft's. They will remain about two weeks and then visit friends in Lawrence, Van Buren Co. before returning home.

The Fayette Normal University seems to be doing an excellent work. Many of the most talented young men and women of the country are attending there. Our readers should investigate the merits of this progressive school.

In excavating the trench on Chicago street, for the water mains, at the Lake Shore Crossing, the stringers and ties which composed the old strap railroad, the first railroad between Adrian and Tecumseh, were unearthed. The street at that time was nearly two feet lower than at present; they were in a good state of preservation.

About fifty of the neighbors and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Abner Wilson gave them a surprise one evening last week. Although taken unawares they proved themselves equal to the occasion. The guests were royally entertained, an elegant supper was served, and the hour was trespassing very closely upon midnight, when the company departed for their homes.

John Dillon's company put on the comedy "A Model Husband" at the Opera House last evening in a superb manner. Dillon himself is a host and the entire cast is a strong one. The comedy is replete with comical situations, and the audience was kept in a roar of laughter from the rise of the curtain to the final drop. Come again, Dilfon, and we will give you a crowded house.

I have been a sufferer from catarrh for over ten years; had it very bad, could hardly breath. Some nights I could not sleep and had to walk the floor. I purchased Ely's Cream Balm and am using it freely, it is working a cure surely. I have advised several friends to use it, and with happy results in every case. It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and it is worth its weight in gold. I thank God I have found a remedy I can use in safety and that does all that is claimed for it. It is curing my deafness. B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements that so much comfort for $1.00 (the price) is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Electric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt, and credit $3 on the price of new order. Remember the Electric Foot warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

VICTORIA WILL RUN.

Mrs. Martin Will Strive to Sit in the Presidential Chair.

She Makes Public Her Letter of Acceptance—All Good Women Urged to Persistently Demand the Right of Suffrage.

WANTS TO BE PRESIDENT.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—Mrs. Victoria Claflin Woodhull Martin, the candidate of the women suffragists for president of the United States, arrived here from her English home on the steamship Etruria, which, after a night at quarantine, reached her dock at 7:20 Sunday morning. Her husband, Mr. John Biddulph Martin, a London banker, who is a world's fair commissioner from Great Britain, accompanied the American presidential candidate. They will attend the dedicatory ceremonies at Chicago. Immediately after the ceremonies they will return to this city, where the arrangements will be completed for the campaign speeches which Mrs. Martin will deliver in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago and some other large cities.

Mrs. Martin gave out for publication her letter of acceptance of the nomination for president by the convention of woman suffragists. It is addressed to "Anna M. Parker and others, national nominating convention of women suffragists." A synopsis is as follows:

The letter begins by stating that the nomination upon a woman's suffrage platform commends itself to the writer especially from the fact that the issue is one which was originally raised and advocated by her and others as long ago as 1870, before congress, and was afterward maintained as the principal plank in the platform of the woman's suffrage campaign of 1872, "when my name was presented to the public as the first female candidate for president of the United States."

Mrs. Martin then quotes at length from her addresses delivered during that campaign, in which she argued that the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the constitution permitted this right of suffrage to women, and she earnestly commends all good women to persistently demand this right. The plank in the platform adopted at the convention of 1892 which declares that "by the united efforts of the women voters of this nation we will drive anarchy, crime, insanity and drunkenness from our midst by our humanitarian efforts, backed by the ballot," is next considered, and Mrs. Martin says:

"Old constitutions are incompetent to deal with the new conditions. The advance in science has shown personal conditions of physical unfitness of humanity itself to grapple with the various new conditions of progress. It is becoming just as necessary now to consider the important subject of breeding intelligence and physical culture in the human race as it is in the inferior animals. In order to accomplish such results, and I will add to overcome the conditions of crime, insanity and drunkenness referred to in your resolution, new regulations must be proposed for society. Nay more, we must go even further, and, investigating the physical degeneracy which breeds criminals, we must surround motherhood with the proper conditions of an enlightened age. It is to women, therefore, at the base, that we look for the regeneration of mankind."

Collapse of an Elevator.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—The Illinois grain elevator, just north of Madison street on the west branch of the river, collapsed Saturday afternoon. One hundred and thirty thousand bushels of grain were scattered over the railroad tracks and dumped into the river. What caused the collapse can only be conjectured. The structure was erected twenty-seven years ago, and has passed every inspection, the last being but three months ago. The loss will not exceed $20,000, as part of the grain can be saved. The employes were warned in time and all escaped in safety.

Polygamists Pardoned.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—The president has granted pardons to Gustave Anderson, Charles A. Anderson, L. H. Berg, Warren C. Child, Louis Fanstrup, Andrew Hauser, Peter Johnson, James L. Jensen, Ed D. Mills, Neil P. Nelson, W. S. Poppleton, all of Utah, and convicted of polygamy, on condition that in the future they abstain from unlawful cohabitation.

Mother and Daughter Killed.

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., Oct. 17.—Sarah and Ida Russell, mother and daughter, well-known residents of this place, were run down by an express train on the Pennsylvania railroad near Conemaugh station Saturday morning, and instantly killed. A heavy fog prevented their seeing the approaching train.

Most Valuable Cargo Ever Received.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 15.—The steamer Oceanic, which arrived from Hong Kong, via Yokohama, Friday morning, brings the most valuable cargo that ever came to San Francisco. It is valued at $3,000,000. Of that $2,000,000 is represented by silks and the remainder by tea and general merchandize.

Fatal to Both Men.

DIXON, Ky., Oct. 17.—Thursday night Edward Heron waylaid and mortally wounded John Winston. Heron attempted to escape and was shot while resisting arrest. They had previously quarreled about a misunderstanding between their brokers.

Two Killed in a Boiler Explosion.

MONTGOMERY, Tex., Oct. 15.—The boiler at Thorp's mills, near here, exploded Friday, killing Alex White, the engineer, and a boy and wounding a number of others. White's head was blown off and the boy was cut to pieces.

Given Twenty Lashes.

OWOSSO, Mich., Oct. 17.—John Palmer was dragged from his home here Saturday night by masked men, tied to a telegraph pole, given twenty lashes for repeatedly whipping his wife and then compelled to apologize to her.

Is Very Serious.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Mrs. Harrison's condition is becoming very serious. The president is much depressed in spirits at her steady decline, and no longer attempts to give attention to public affairs.

Wrecked in a Hurricane.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 17.—News has reached here that the Honduras schooner Stranger capsized in the gulf of Mexico during a hurricane and six-teen persons were drowned.

LYNCHED FOUR NEGROES.

A Wholesale Burning at the Stake Prevented by Hanging.

SUNNY SOUTH, Ala., Oct. 14.—It is learned that Wednesday night a mob of infuriated citizens stormed the jail at Monroeville and took therefrom Burrell Jones and his son Moses, with two accomplices, who were charged with murdering Mr. Richard L. Johnson and his daughter and burning their bodies at their residence at Davis Ferry on the Alabama river last Saturday night. The officials learned that a mob had been organized from the neighborhood of lower Beach Tree and were coming to the jail for the purpose of burning the four negroes at the stake. The prisoners were at once taken from the jail and an attempt made to spirit them away, but the officials ran into another mob, who took the four prisoners, and, after hanging them to a tree, filled their bodies with bullets. Burrell Jones made a full confession while in jail and said that the four men went to Johnson's for the purpose of robbery and the old man discovered them, whereupon he was murdered with an ax. The daughter came to the rescue of her father, and the villains, after assaulting, murdered her. The house was then set on fire to hide all traces of the crime. The mob that was to have burned the culprits expressed much dissatisfaction at being thwarted in their designs.

FOUND GUILTY OF BRIBERY.

The Boodling Charges Against Alderman Daly, of Toledo, Sustained.

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 17.—Councilman John Daly, of the Fourth ward, has been convicted of soliciting bribes to influence his vote on certain important ordinances. The jury was out but thirty minutes. The principal evidence against Daly went to show that with six other members of the board of councilmen he had formed an oath-bound organization to extort money from corporations and contractors for the passage of legislation favorable to them. Daly was shown to have solicited $10,000 from David Robinson, Jr., president of the Toledo Electric Street Railway Company, for eleven votes to kill an anti-Robison ordinance. Daly's attorneys will ask for a new trial. Meantime the defendant is out on bail of $10,000. The trial of Councilman Frank Tanner, who was one of the six indicted with Daly, will commence on Tuesday morning.

All the Shamokin Victims Recovered.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Oct. 15.—The number of men killed and injured by the explosion of gas at the Philadelphia and Reading Company's Sterling Run colliery at Shamokin is now known to be eleven. Of these five are dead and the remaining six so badly burned and mutilated that small hopes for their recovery exist. When the explosion occured it was accompanied by a heavy fall of coal, which entombed five of the miners. Early Friday morning the last body was reached and brought to the surface.

Must Die on the Gallows.

QUINCY, Ill., Oct. 17.—The motion for a new trial in the case of Dr. William Smith, alias William J. Jamison, found guilty of the murder of Charles Aaron, of Cliola, a wealthy farmer's son, last April, and whose punishment was fixed at death, was overruled Saturday and he was sentenced to be hanged November 25. Jamison's parents live at Nashville, Tenn. He committed the crime while demanding $300 which he claimed Aaron owed him. Insanity was the defense.

Blew Out the Gas.

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 15.—Mrs. Lizzie Stevens, of Missouri, Kan., was found dead in her room in a hotel Friday morning. She arrived Thursday night and blew out the gas. Her son, aged 27 years, occupied an adjoining room. He had also blown out the gas, but an open transom saved his life. He said when he recovered that neither he nor his mother had ever seen gaslights before.

More Money for the Professors.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 15.—The regents of the State university have adopted a suggestion made by President Angell that the salaries of professors be raised, to prevent other colleges from constantly robbing him of his best assistants. The raise is from $300 to $500 annually in each case, in accordance with the length of the term of service.

Rioters Sentenced to Death.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 15.—A large number of the men who were arrested for taking part in the cholera riot at Saratoff were tried by court-martial and judgment was rendered at Astrakan. Four of the rioters were sentenced to death, while many of the other prisoners were sentenced to exile in Siberia.

Dismissed the Case.

CHICAGO, Oct. 17.—The case of John Cudahy and A. M. Wright, who were arrested on complaint of Thomas J. Roush, charged with conspiracy to corner the market in short ribs, was on hearing in Justice Glennon's court Saturday afternoon, and resulted in the discharge of the defendants.

Thrown from a Train and Killed.

ANNA, Ill., Oct. 17.—John W. Hess was killed by being thrown from an Illinois Central train a few miles north of here. He was standing on the rear platform when the train, in rounding a curve, gave a sudden lurch, and he was pitched head foremost to the rock-ballasted track.

Building a New Bridge.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., Oct. 15.—The reorganized Pacific Short Line Bridge Company has commenced the erection of a $1,000,000 bridge across the Missouri river here.

TRADE IS GOOD.

Business Indications Throughout the Country Favorable.

Better Markets and Collections Reported from the Principal Cities—Increase in Exports—The Business Failures.

ENTIRELY PROMISING.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The Weekly Review of Trade says:

"Once more it must be said that trade indications are entirely favorable. Even the shrinkage in exports has ceased, an increase of $1,300,000 appearing here last week, while imports continue surprisingly large and foreign exchange declines. Boston reports active trade. At Philadelphia the iron market decidedly improves. Western orders for coal cannot be filled because the roads are blocked. Good orders for the spring trade are reported in dry goods, while the wool market continues active. Trade in jewelry is fair, and paints and oils are active. At Baltimore the infrequency of southern failures is gratifying and collections are more satisfactory. Pittsburgh reports a better market for pig iron and a good demand for manufactured products, with improving prospects in the glass business. Trade in boots and shoes and hats is satisfactory at Cincinnati. At Cleveland rolled iron is in large demand though pig is lower than ever in price. The boot and shoe trade at Indianapolis reports increased sales and at Fort Wayne sales of merchandise exceed last year's. Building is fair and manufacturing healthy. At Detroit manufacturers are full of orders and trade is good.

"Chicago again reports enormous increase in receipts, those of wheat, oats and barley having doubled, while receipts of corn are about fifteen times last year's. In wool a gain of 40 per cent. is reported; in cattle and hogs 25 per cent., and some increase in flour, dressed beef, butter and cheese. Business was never more prosperous and eastern shipments of merchandise are of enormous magnitude. Trade is remarkably strong at St. Louis, the corn crop proving larger than was anticipated. Business is larger than last year at Kansas City and good at Denver. At Minneapolis nearly all branches show an increase over last year and the output of flour, 230,000 barrels, is the largest ever known in a week. At St. Paul an increased movement in crops is seen. At Omaha trade is busy. Business at Nashville is improving, but at Little Rock still dull, though in dry goods better. At New Orleans business is active.

"Wheat is an eighth stronger than a week ago, but corn 1 cent lower; oats, 1¼ cents; hogs, 20 cents, and lard 15 cents per 100 pounds; cotton ⅛ lower, with sales of more than 1,100,000 bales for the week, and oil ¼ lower. Improved crop reports and heavy movement of products push prices downward.

"The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number 215. For the corresponding week of last year the figures were 259."

FATAL RAILROAD WRECK.

Five Men Killed by a Collision of Freight Trains Near New London, Conn.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Oct. 15.—The Boston express freight which left the city Friday morning at 5:40 o'clock collided with the Brattleboro freight, bound south, about 1,000 feet south of the flag station at Harrison's Landing, on the New London & Northern railroad. The engines came together head and head. The first car of the south-bound train contained four race horses bound for the races at Croton. Four of the five men in charge of the horses were killed outright and the other was so fearfully injured that he died a few minutes after reaching this city. None of the train hands suffered injury, other than that sustained in jumping from the trains. The train dispatcher of the road at Norwich is declared to be the person at fault and he has been placed under arrest.

President Pena Sworn In.

BUENOS AYRES, Oct. 15.—Senor Luis Saenz-Pena took the oath of office as president of Argentine Republic Thursday. Everything was quiet in the city despite the fears of trouble. Police and soldiers were on guard about the halls of congress and the whole city was well guarded and preparations were taken to prevent any rioting. President Pena announces that the right of local self-government in the provinces will not be interfered with except in cases where grave troubles arise.

Non-Partisan W. C. T. U. Convention.

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 15.—The third delegated convention of the Non-Partisan National Women's Christian Temperance union is to be held in Cleveland, November 15 to 18, inclusive, and promises to be the most notable assemblage of Christian workers that has yet gathered under the non-partisan temperance banner.

Hanged Himself in Jail.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 15. — Patrick Neary, who was yesterday sentenced to four years' imprisonment in the Eastern penitentiary by Judge Seeley, at Honesdale, for attempting to murder Thomas Finnerty, was found dead in the Wayne county jail, at 7 a.m., having hanged himself during the night.

Heavy Fire Loss at West Point, Miss.

WEST POINT, Miss., Oct. 15.—The most destructive fire that ever occurred in this place broke out at 2 o'clock Friday morning and before it could be got under control the finest business block in the city had been destroyed, the loss amounting to $70,000.

Imports Decreased.

PARIS, Oct. 15.—The returns issued by the board of trade show that during the month of September the imports decreased 50,000,000 francs and that the exports increased 21,099,000 francs as compared with the corresponding month last year.

Stock Cremated.

ERIE, Col., Oct. 15.—The barn on the dairy ranch of J. W. Horner, near here, was destroyed by fire yesterday, and sixty-five head of milch cows and five head of horses were consumed in the flames.

Killed While Hunting.

NEW YORK, Oct. 14.—Charles Lowndes Cottenet, one of New York's society leaders, was killed yesterday by falling from his horse while hunting with the Meadowbrook (L. I.) hounds.

A LITTLE GIRL'S EXPERIENCE IN A LIGHTHOUSE.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the Gov. lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones." Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and half bottles was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at J. J. Orr's drug store.

RIDICULED BY PRIESTS.

Christopher Columbus Before the Council of Salamanca.

His Grand Enterprise Carried Through in the Face of Vigorous Opposition—Queen Isabella's Trust in the Navigator.

The great picture, "Columbus Before the Council of Salamanca," by Barabino, is in the Orsini palace at Genoa, the birthplace of its subject.

The scene is one of the most humanly interesting in the history of the long struggle which Columbus had to convince those in authority of his sanity. While he was following the court of Ferdinand and Isabella like a mendicant he was introduced to the notice of the great Cardinal Pedro Gonzalez de Mendoza at Salamanca. The cardinal, who was rather pleased with his idea, though he said it savored of heterodoxy, obtained for him an audience with the king. His majesty referred him to Fernando de Talanera, who summoned a junta of astronomers and cosmographers, mostly ecclesiastics.

They met his arguments with Biblical texts and quotations from the great theologians, and finally ridiculed him and walked away from him, after indicating their belief in no polite way that he was of unsound mind.

They reported that his project was foolish, and that it did not become the king and queen to have anything to do with it. The junta met him in the church of San Sebastian at Salamanca.

Their view of the prophet was sustained by the king, but Isabella, more gentle, of higher and more devout nature, regretted that she might not give to the church of God new converts from new races, which might be secured in

ISABELLA THE CATHOLIC.

Asia, which land Columbus was to reach by sea.

But, as it happened, she had no money at hand. Her war with Granada, just concluded, had cost a prodigious sum. She found herself in debt even to her own servants. But finally the means were raised by pawning her jewels and borrowing money, and at last the lifelong cherished dream of the discoverer was realized.

His fleet, the Santa Maria, the Nina and the Pinta, set sail on Friday, Aug. 3, 1492. After a long and perilous voyage, not the least danger of which was the threatened mutiny of his sailors, as has since become historical, land was first sighted on the evening of October 11, 1492.

This date is according to the old style calendars; in the new it was the 21st of October, which latter date has been chosen for the opening of the great exposition, to be held in his honor 400 years later.

Spain has, therefore, been nine days ahead of time in celebrating the 400th anniversary of the great navigator's departure from Palos, on August 3, of this year.

After a bewildering and enchanting voyage of three months, the great admiral, leaving a fort on the Bay of Carracola, sailed January 4, 1493, for Spain, in the Nina, taking with him a number of natives and abundant products of the new land which he had found.

His royal reception in Spain, his triumphal march to court, when he returned weather-beaten and almost in rags, the thanksgiving of the good queen and the widespread wonder of all Europe have all become matters of history.

He made three other voyages to America, but he was doomed to suffering, disappointment, loss of royal favor and attacks by the envious.

To the eternal infamy of Bobadilla, a Spanish commissioner, Columbus was sent home in chains at the close of his third voyage. The king disclaimed this outrage and freed him; but the great navigator was wounded to the quick and he preserved the chains, as he said, "as relics and memorials of the reward of his services." They were in his chamber in Seville when he died.

Isabella and Elizabeth.

As for a comparison between the governments and sovereigns of Spain and England in Columbus' time the world may well honor Queen Isabella, that great and unselfish woman whose womanly faith saved history. She was not an angel—and the student of history is generally free to admit that she would be an exception if she were. But she was large minded and great hearted and womanly and need fear no comparison in any light with good Queen Bess. Her intellectuality and her humanity were an enduring monument.

Columbus as an Artist.

The specimens of Christopher Columbus' own attempts at illustrating his voyages are peculiarly interesting, though no high praise can be given them. They are alleged to have been inclosed by Columbus in a letter written by him to Don Raffaele Sanxis, treasurer of the king of Spain. One sketch which he calls "Oceanica Classis," is evidently a picture of his own ship, no other vessel of the fleet being visible. His ideas of drawing were very defective, but they served the purpose he intended.

COLUMBUS' DEATH.

He Expired Robed in the Somber Habit of a Franciscan.

The great world-finder, to whose memory much honor is due and given, was in his time variously known as Christopher Columbus, Cristobal Colon and Christophoro Colombo. Colon is the one which appears on the inner lid of the small leaden case which contains all that now is left of the mortal part of the great navigator.

He, worn out with age, hard work and bad treatment, died on May 20,

THE BONES OF COLUMBUS.

1506, at the age of 70, and was buried at Valladolid, in Spain.

The feast of the Ascension was the day of his death; and he died robed in a Franciscan habit, as his beloved queen and protector had done.

The cold and heartless Ferdinand gave Columbus a grand funeral, thinking to do himself honor by it, and seven years afterwards he reared to Columbus a marble tomb, whose inscription has since become famous, both for itself and the memory of him who lay beneath.

His remains were afterwards taken to Seville and placed with the body of his son Diego in the monastery of Las Cuevas.

In 1536 they were exhumed—those of father and son—and transported across the Atlantic to the island of San Domingo, which had been named by Columbus Hispaniola and was the principal settlement of his own discoveries in his own time.

In 1796, after the cession of San Domingo to the French, they were again dug up and placed in the cathedral of Havana. There they now repose under a peculiar monument. There is a claim that the real remains were not removed.

There would be poetic justice in placing the tomb of Columbus in San Domingo, the island with which his greatest activity as a discoverer is associated, and the place where with the timbers of his wrecked flagship he built the first European habitation in America. The chains placed on him by Babadilla during his imprisonment, and which he declared should be removed by no less authority than that of his royal master and mistress, he kept in his study afterwards as a memorial and ordered that they should be buried with him.

SPREADING THE NEWS.

The Enterprising Reporter Who "Wrote Up" Columbus' Journey.

The ubiquitous reporter seems to have been performing his function of news spreader in the days of Columbus as now. There was a bustling reporter at the Spanish court fond of letter-writing and having correspondents in different parts. To him we owe it probably that the news of the great discovery spread soon to some notable people. This was Peter Martyn d'Anghiera. He dated a letter—the first one—at Barcelona, in the ides of May mentioning the event, which he sent to Joseph Borromeo. He derived his information from Columbus himself, with whom he often talked. Some of these epistles are still extant.

The Pistols of Aaron Burr.

In Pike county, Ill., the identical pistols used by Aaron Burr upon the dueling field when he killed Alexander Hamilton have been found, and will be exhibited at the World's Columbian exposition. They will make good companion pieces for the articles once owned by Blennerhassett, with whom Burr afterward associated, which are to be placed on exhibition at the world's fair by the Ohio Historical society.

Oldest Engraving of Columbus.

The oldest engraved likeness of Columbus appears in a Latin literary work by Paolo Giovio (Paulus Jovius, in Latin form), dated 1575. This wood cut is thought to have been copied from a picture which Jovius had placed in a gallery of notable people which he had formed in his villa at Lake Como. The collection is now scattered, but the portrait is known to have figured in it.

Slavery on American Soil.

It is true that "Columbus made the first slaves in America," but he was promptly and severely rebuked by Spain, and in the matter of slavery England might well wish that its own blood had made half so clean a record in the new world as Spain did.

THE WESTERN BLIZZARD

Worst Experience for Years in Wyoming and Colorado.

Some Loss of Life Reported—All Railways Blocked by Snow—The Record for This Season of the Year Broken.

SNOW AND WIND.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Oct. 15.—For nearly two days the severest storm ever known on the Union Pacific railroad raged here and as far west as Ogden, Utah. In all directions telegraphic communication was cut off until late Thursday night, when this dispatch was sent through on a temporary wire. All railroads have been blocked, the cuts being filled with snow which in some places was piled up 18 feet. Rotary snow plows have been hard at work between Granite and Laramie, the snow being 5 feet deep on the level at the latter place. A half dozen westbound trains have been tied up here, but left after the return of the snow plow.

LIVE STOCK PERISH.

At Granite canyon Conductor Roberts was blown off the platform of a car and hurled down a 150-foot embankment, the deep snow saving his life. Reports are being received of immense loss of cattle and horses in northern Colorado and in Wyoming. Thousands of dollars' worth of these animals are known to have perished, and it is estimated that almost a third of the cattle and horses on the ranges have been destroyed by the storm. An unknown dead man was found by the side of the railroad track near Greely, Col. He had perished from the effects of the storm.

MEN KILLED.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Oct. 15.—Word was received in this city by Rock Island trainmen of damage and loss of life along that road between Colorado Springs and the Kansas line. Near Falcon the track-walker was overcome by the storm and sought refuge in a culvert, where he was frozen to death. Near Mattison a flock of 300 sheep were found dead and on further investigation the dead body of the herder was discovered about 100 yards away. He had evidently endeavored to find a house, but had perished in the attempt. Engineer Leeman, who was running the show plow, was seriously injured by a piece of the plow breaking off and, crashing through the cab, striking him in the breast. It is reported that 300 head of cattle were frozen to death between this city and Linon.

THE RECORD BROKEN.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 15.—The storm in Colorado has been the most terrible in its history, especially at this season of the year. At Palmer lake, on the divide, the snow is in places 30 feet deep, and rotary snow plows are necessary to bore holes through the drifts. Trains are at a standstill and the wires are all down. Accounts of fatal accidents are coming in slowly. Two wrecks occured at El Moro on the Union Pacific, the result of the blinding snow. In the first collision Conductor King had both arms broken and his skull fractured. A Rio Grande train was at the same place. F. H. Vaner, a brakeman, could not see the train on account of the snow. He was ground under the engine and fatally injured. An Australian miner named Boteze stepped into a shaft covered with snow at Central City and fell 80 feet. He was instantly killed.

MR. BLAINE SPEAKS.

His Audience a Large Crowd of the Neighbors of Whitelaw Reid.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Oct. 15.—James G. Blaine on Friday night raised his voice in support of republican principles, as he has done in every campaign for thirty years. He spoke to the neighbors of his host, Whitelaw Reid, and through them to the whole country. What he had to say was brief, but it was enough to show that his devotion to the party with whose history his own career is interwoven is undiminished. It is probably the last occasion on which the great leader will address the public on political issues.

Union College Secedes.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—The differences between Prof. Briggs, of the Union Theological seminary, and those who are opposed to his theological views and teachings, have caused fresh trouble at the seminary, the managers having decided to sever the relations existing between the institution and the general assembly, thus indorsing Dr. Briggs.

Millionaire Bell Killed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 17.—Thomas Bell met death Sunday morning by plunging headlong down a stairway. His fortune of $4,000,000 will go to his widow and six children. He came here in 1850 by way of Valparaiso and went into banking and rapidly acquired wealth. He was one of the incorporators of the Bank of California.

Killed at a Railroad Crossing.

KANKAKEE, Ill., Oct. 15.—Lucius Case, a prominent farmer residing near this city, was killed here by his horse becoming frightened at a switch engine at a railroad crossing. The engine came upon him quietly and there was no flagman at the crossing.

Death of Capt. Ross.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—Capt. Orlando H. Ross died here Thursday. He was a native of Bethel, O., and served in the army of the union during the war. He was a cousin of Gen. Grant and a member of his staff, the last survivor, it is said, of that body.

Fire at Frankfort, Mich.

FRANFORT, Mich., Oct. 17.—The most disastrous fire in the history of this place broke out in the barn of H. M. Lockhart, burning or damaging seven buildings. Losses aggregated $26,000.

Beat the Trotter.

SEDALIA, Mo., Oct. 14.—In a 10-mile race here yesterday on the half-mile track Jack Prince, an Omaha bicyclist, defeated Mary Howard, a trotter; time, 28 minutes 26 seconds.

GET THE BEST

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as everything else! By the universal satisfaction it has given, and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption has proven itself unequalled for Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Lungs and Chest. Do not experiment with any unheard of or untried article which you are told is "as good as Dr Fay's," for its equal does not exist, but be sure to get only Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption. Sold by all druggists, 50c., $1.00 and $3.00. Prepared only by Dr. O. J. Fay & Co, Chemists, Carleton, Mich.

PHYSICIANS CALLED IT CONSUMPTION.

Bristol Center, Ont. Co., N. Y., June 24th, 1892.

I sold Hamilton's Cough Balsam to John Worden for his daughter Delia, who was suffering from a severe lung disease following after a serious attack of typhoid pneumonia, four years ago in May. Physicians said she had Consumption and everything indicated they were not far from right. She came to my store resting upon pillows and could not sit up, with a bad cough and apparently not long to live. I persuaded her to take a sample bottle of Hamilton's Balsam. She took it and two regular sized bottles, and picked hops the next September, seemingly in good health and has been well and healthy since then.

Yours truly, E. W Burge Druggist.

Hamilton's Cough Balsam is sold by your druggist. Large bottles 25 cents. Extra large bottles 50 cents.

DO HORSES THINK?

If they do, they certainly think Parmelee's Condition Powders are the best medicine they get. Full pound 25 cts. Red wrappers.

TO ESCAPE THE CHOLERA.

Don't get scared. Keep clean in person and surroundings. Keep the system generally in vigorous tone Keep the secretions active. See to it that the stomach and bowels are in good condition. Especially have the liver, that great cleanser of the system, active and vigorous. If these points are carefully attended to there is little chance for disease germs to find lodgement in the system. These conditions are not difficult to produce. One of the simplest and best aids toward all this is Parmelee's Mandrake and Dandelion Bitters. Their action upon the stomach, liver and bowels, is such as to correct any irregularity or derangement and put them in normal, active condition. Only 25 cents a bottle at druggists.

GOOD FOR MAN! GOOD FOR BEAST!

Parmelee's Universal Liniment for all Bone, Flesh and Muscle Diseases. It is guaranteed to give relief. The best Liniment made. Sold by dealers.

The stamp of approval has been set upon Pearline by millions. If it needed any improvement, it wouldn't have been approved. It takes away dirt easily, and that is much; it cleans and washes everything while it harms nothing, and that is more. Pearline does what nothing else will do; nothing else will do when you have once tried Pearline.

Miss Mary Zimmerman is visiting friends in Toledo.

Oliver Wadsworth is working in an Adrian marble shop.

Mrs. John Schreder has been quite sick for several days.

Lewis Brooks, of Vermontville, visited friends here last week.

Born, Wednesday, Oct. 19th, to Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Gibson, a son.

Mrs. J. V. Amspoker and Mrs. Frank Scoville went to Tecumseh Wednesday.

Mrs. E. VanDeMark and Mrs. George Belding returned from Ionia last Friday.

Miss Turner was unable to teach last Monday. Mrs. Daniels filled the vacancy.

Roy Silvers, of Pittsford, visited friends here from Thursday until Tuesday of this week.

John Dunn and wife, of Saline, visited his brother, William Dunn, from Friday until Sunday.

Mrs. W. C. Hopkins and son Elwin, of Tecumseh, visited friends here from Saturday until Monday.

George Ulrich, who left here for Adrian a short time ago, is foreman in Henderson's marble works.

Dr. Blatchford's oldest son Frank is very sick. He was taken with malarial fever, which has developed into typhoid.

Henry and David Lancaster went to Toledo last week to visit their sister, Mrs. Schurtz. They came home Monday.

The woolen mill office is being painted on the outside, making a great improvement. Chas. House is doing the work.

Gracie Lane, who was reported very sick with typhoid fever last week, is gradually gaining and it is thought she will recover.

The Board of Supervisors have re-elected Prof. Daniels of Clinton as County School Inspector.

Prof. Daniels was re-elected school examiner by a vote of 14 to 11 for F. R. Hathaway, at last Thursday's meeting of the board of supervisors.

The contract for electric lighting was let Tuesday to the Fort Wayne Electric Light Co. It is expected that the plant will be in operation in about six weeks.

J. R. Blanchard and family went to Cleveland last Friday to visit Mrs. Blanchard's uncle, Mr. Rowell, who is in quite poor health. They returned Monday.

John Gillen, his mother and sister, Mrs. Agnes VanDuser, of Saline, and James Kelly and wife, of Manchester, were here to attend the funeral of Mrs. Morrisroe.

Willis G. Mann, of Newton, Iowa, arrived here last Friday. He returned home Wednesday, accompanied by his wife and daughter, who have been here about two weeks.

Dora Brownell, who has been sick for a year and a half with consumption, died last Friday at the home of her parents, three miles west of here. The funeral was held Sunday.

Henry Heying and Miss May Bachelor were united in marriage at the home of the bride in Stockbridge yesterday. They will commence housekeeping in the house recently vacated by George Seagraves.

W. S. Whittelsey and family came over from Ypsilanti last week. They leave here in a few days to spend the winter in the South. Their little girls will remain here and their little boy at Battle Creek.

Mrs. Kate Morrisroe, mother of Mrs. Martin Keusch, died last Saturday night at St. Joseph's Hospital, Adrian, aged 75 years. The remains were brought here Monday and the funeral services held at St. Dominic's church at 10 a. m.

A strong Democratic club was organized Wednesday evening and officered as follows with C. S. Burroughs President, C. D. Keyes Secretary, and Ed. Smith Treasurer. They promise good, efficient work for the party from now until the evening of Nov. 8th.

Another Democratic rally will take place on Saturday evening, Oct. 22nd, in the town hall, at which time Congressman Jas. S. Gorman will address the people of Clinton and vicinity on the political issues of the day. All who desire to hear an able discussion of the questions involved in this campaign should turn out and hear Mr. Gorman.

John McCook had quite an accident last Monday. He had been drawing gravel and sat holding his team in front of the Lancaster House, when suddenly one of the horses commenced kicking. They then wheeled around, throwing John out, and started up the street, and, running against a tree, broke the wagon tongue and freed themselves from the wagon. One of the horses was caught and the other ran home.

H. Martin Williams, of Missouri, will address the people of Clinton Saturday evening, Oct. 29th, at the town hall. Mr. Williams is one of the finest democratic orators in the country and those who heard him when he was here two years ago will remember that he gave the strongest speech on tariff reform over heard from a Clinton platform. He has given the subject many years' study and comes before his audience with anthentic proofs of every assertion he makes.

Col. John P. Irish, who was to have addressed the Democrats here last Saturday evening, was sent to the Upper Peninsula instead and Mr. Daniel Davis, of Pontiac, sent here in his place. No one had any reason to regret the change, however, as his handling of state issues and tariff reform was forcible and convincing. He talked for an hour and a half to a very attentive audience, republicans and democrats alike staying to hear his last word.

Scored by Grant.

Judge C. B. Grant, of the Michigan supreme court, addressed 1,500 people in the First Methodist church at Kalamazoo on "The Enforcement of Municipal Laws." He scored the city and county officers and the judge of the circuit court for not enforcing the liquor laws. His remarks caused a sensation, as they fell with force on the police and sheriff, and reflected on the manner of the present prosecuting attorney in disposing of liquor cases.

At the special meeting of the state board of health in Lansing, it was decided to continue the quarantine regulations now in force and apply them to all immigrants entering Michigan. Letters and telegrams were read from executive officers and state boards of health throughout the entire northwest, and all were of the same tenor, that the continuance of the inspection and disinfection at the border was absolutely necessary.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by sixty-seven observers in different parts of the state for the week ended October 8 indicated that cerebro-spinal meningitis and puerperal fever increased, and inflammation of the kidneys, scarlet fever and typho-malarial fever decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at twenty-seven places, scarlet fever at twenty-seven, typhoid fever at forty-eight and measles at one place.

Poured Down His Throat.

The coroner's jury at Lansing, in the case of Harry Hopkan, after several days of careful investigation, rendered a verdict to the effect that he came to his death from the effects of paris green administered in Central park by unknown parties. All the evidence tended to substantiate the antemortem statement of the deceased that he was assaulted by three men and the poison, which was diluted in whisky, poured down his throat.

Snatched a $500 Roll.

Hunger drove Charles Davis, of Chicago, to a crime that will land him behind prison bars. He saw Mrs. F. E. Booth walking along the street in Detroit with a bank book in her hand. He seized it and started to run, but a crowd of nearly 500 men and boys joined in the chase and he was soon captured. The bank book contained $500 in cash.

Death by Her Own Hand.

Emma Jagnaw, aged 22 years, died at her rooms in Jackson under suspicious circumstances. It was claimed she was taking medicine for an illegitimate purpose. John Thompson, an ex-prison convict, with whom she lived, left the room at 6 o'clock to get breakfast, and on his return at 6:30 o'clock she was dead.

Will Revolutionize Things.

The Lake Angeline mine management of Ishpeming, employing 500 men, have begun voluntarily eight-hour shifts. The movement, it is said, will revolutionize relations between capital and labor in the Lake Superior mining district.

Linnie Coryell, who has been slowly but surely closing life's mission here, and has been suffering with that dreadful disease, consumption, passed away about the noon hour Saturday, at the home of her father. Although her stay with us has been looked upon as short for some time the end came rather suddenly and was sad in the extreme. The funeral services were held at the M. E. Church in our village Monday afternoon. It was a beautiful autumn day. The attendance was very large, relatives, friends and school-mates from Ypsilanti, Clinton, Tecumseh, Macon, Britton and Ridgeway being present to pay their last respects to one who was dearly beloved. Rev. E. Yager officiated, assisted by Rev. Strickland of Britton. The casket stood beneath a beautiful arch of evergreen and flowers. At the head was placed an anchor and a basket of flowers; at the foot of the casket a pillow of flowers, furnished by Prof. Daniels, and the "Gates Ajar" stood back of the casket, which was surrounded by potted house plants and flowers. The singing was furnished by Mrs. Sarah Rappleye, Mrs. R. S. Houseman, Misses Ella Hall and Salome Clark, Kittie Clark at the organ. The bearers were Mrs. Marcie Baker, of Macon, and Misses Minnie Barrett, and Leila Sutton, of Ridgeway, and Misses Ella Exelby, Martha Ackley and Gertie Kniffin, of Britton. The remains were laid at rest in the village cemetery. The bereaved friends have the sympathy of their many friends and neighbors in their sad affliction.

Three colts owned by George Exelby, one owned by Ernest Hoagland and two belonging to Ed Millyard got out of the pasture Sunday night and wandering onto the Wabash railroad were run down by a freight about 11 p. m., killing four colts, only the two of Millyard's escaping, and one of them was severely cut on the hind leg. The engine was derailed and it was after 2 o'clock before the track was cleared.

A birthday surprise was given Miss Gertrude Kniffin at her home last Friday evening. The many friends present passed a very enjoyable evening.

On Tuesday, the 25th of October, it being the 59th birthday of Mrs. Elizabeth (Oliver) Gould, her friends decided to give her a surprise, and about 10 a. m. twenty-seven of them met at her home in Macon, with well-filled baskets. All but four of those present were descendants of the Oliver family, four generations being represented: Grandma Oliver in her 84th year, six children, seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild. Other relatives present were Mrs. Eugene Palmer and daughter, of Clinton, Mr. and Mrs. Dibble, Mrs. M. Gillen and children, of Britton. It was a very pleasant family gathering, some being present who had not met for several years. After partaking of a bountiful dinner and spending the afternoon in social converse the company separated to their respective homes, wishing her many happy returns of the day.

A DAY IN MORENCI.

Last Monday morning we took the early train for Lenawee Junction, and thence to Morenci, to fill an appointment to address a political meeting that evening. Arrived in town about eleven o'clock and went to the Hotel Saulsbury where we had an excellent dinner. The afternoon was pleasantly and profitably spent in renewing old acquaintance and forming new ones. It was four years since our last visit there and we were quite surprised to witness the growth which Morenci has experienced during that period. It is a bustling lively village and is making rapid strides to the front. At the last session of the Legislature they obtained a special charter which gives them a good city government and enables them to make local improvements which were impossible before. They have a fine public building, the lower story of which is used for an engine house and the upper story for a public hall. There are flag stone sidewalks and iron hitching posts in the business district and they are now laying cobble stone gutters in front of the stores. Three elegant brick blocks, one a double block, have been erected during the past two years and another store, with stone front, is now in course of construction. The Hotel Saulsbury, which is nearly as large as the Lilley House, is a fine three story structure, erected two years ago and would do credit to a city of ten thousand inhabitants. It is heated throughout by a furnace, is provided with electric call bells and all other modern conveniences. C. S. Saulsbury the owner runs the house himself and is a model landlord. There isn't a better kept hotel in Lenawee County to-day, and it is a great help to Morenci in a business point of view. The village contains four churches, three school buildings, two flouring mills, two saw mills, one brick and tile yard, a planing mill and foundry and several smaller manufacturing establishments. In the character of dwellings and her neatly kept streets, Morenci has made a marked improvement during the past few years and now presents quite a city appearance. They have an excellent fire department and two good banks, both on a sound financial basis. Their weekly newspaper, The Observer, is one of the best local sheets in Southern Michigan, and its job department is fully equipped to respond to all demands, that can be made upon it. It occupies good quarters on the ground floor and in a handy location. We passed a very pleasant half hour in the Observer sanctum. The Allen Brothers are evidently prospering and they deserve it too. The citizens of Morenci have reason to congratulate themselves upon the high character and excellent reputation of their local newspaper.

The evening meeting was held in Village Hall. The band was out, the hall was well filled and the audience was a very attentive and appreciative one. So far as it depended upon the Morenci people, the meeting was an unqualified success. Taking it altogether, we were much pleased with the trip and hope to visit our hustling thriving neighbor oftener in the future.

Another Good Nomination.

The Democrats of this section of the County are very fortunate in having candidates of high character and unqualified fitness to vote for. Their candidate for representative in this, the First District of Lenawee County, is Horace Holdridge, of Raisin. No better man could have been found within the confines of the district. Mr. Holdridge was born in the town of Raisin and has always made that township his home. Farming has been his principal avocation, and he is now the owner of one of the finest and most productive farms in southern Michigan. His father was a farmer before him, and Horace was brought up as most farmers' boys are; working at home summers and attending the district school winters. Upon arriving at the proper age he went to the old Raisin Institute for one year and afterwards attended several terms at Adrian College. He then began farming for himself, and has prospered, as but few men have, in that occupation. Although he has never sought any office, his fellow citizens of Raisin, recognizing his fitness for official station, have frequently called upon him to serve them. In 1877 he was elected supervisor of that town, and has held that office continuously up to the present time, with the exception of one year. His habits of industry, integrity and faithfulness to the interests of his constituents have enabled him to build up the reputation of being one of the very best supervisors in the County. His fellow citizens now have the opportunity to call him up higher, and they will be false to their own welfare if they fail to take advantage of it. His chances of election are exceedingly good, and he will fill his new office at Lansing with credit to himself and with honor to the district.

COUNCIL PROCEEDINGS.

Village of Tecumseh, Mich.
Council Room, Sept. 12, 1892.

Adjourned session. Present President Bills, Trustees Wright, Smith, Conklin, Bidwell and the recorder. Absent Trustees Shull and Bresie.

The committee appointed to negotiate bonds reported a contract with Spitzer & Co., of Toledo. On motion the report of the committee was accepted and adopted and referred back to the committee for further action.

The following resolution was offered by the recorder.

WHEREAS, The common council of the village of Tecumseh did by resolution passed the 15th day of August, 1892 fix the day of payment of certain bonds about to be issued by said village and

WHEREAS, Such bonds have not yet been sold or issued and it is considered advisable to change the times of payment of such bonds, therefore be it.

Resolved by said council that said resolutions be amended to read as follows: Whereas the common council of the village of Tecumseh did by ordinance passed on the 18th day of January A. D., 1892 submit to the electors of said village the question of raising by a loan a sum not to exceed thirty-five thousand dollars to be expended in constructing and establishing in said village a system of water works; therefore be it.

Resolved by the common council of said village bonds be issued in the sum of thirty-five thousand dollars payable as follows: $1,000, Jan. 1, 1896, and a like sum annually thereafter until the sum of $19,000 is paid; then $2,000 on the first day of January 1915 and a like sum thereafter until said sum of thirty-five thousand dollars is paid in full with interest at five per cent per annum payable on the first days of January and July of each year; such bonds to bear interest from Sept. 1, 1892, with interest payable at such place to be designated by purchaser at time of sale; such bonds to be of the denomination of one thousand dollars; the proceeds from the sale of which are to be used for the purpose before mentioned, and it is further.

Resolved, That the president and recorder of said village be and hereby are directed and instructed to fix thereto the corporate seal of said village.

Dated Sept. 12, 1892.

WALTER C. BURRIDGE, Recorder.

The above resolutions being supported were carried. Ayes and nays called. Ayes, Trustees Bills, Wright, Smith, Conklin, Bidwell and Burridge. Nays, none.

After some discussion a contract was entered into between the council and Spitzer & Co. and committee instructed to formally close the deal.

On motion the Council adjourned.

WALTER C. BURRIDGE, Recorder.

"I don't want to go to school," sobbed Walter. "Don't you want to learn to read?" asked his nurse. "What will you do when you grow to be a man if you can't read?" "Oh," said the little fellow, "you can read to me just the same."

STATE BUILDINGS.

They Are Dedicated at the World's Fair Grounds.

Simple Exercises Attend the Transfer of Those Built by New York, Ohio, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Florida.

IT WAS STATE DAY.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—New York, Ohio, Massachusetts, Kansas, Rhode Island, Florida and Iowa were the states whose buildings at the world's fair grounds were dedicated Saturday. New York and Ohio had militiamen and big music, but the exercises at the other places were simple in the extreme. The buildings that were dedicated are all that are completed of the little group at the north end of the park, almost out of sight from any of the central points of the grounds. Each represents the interest of the people of one commonwealth in the great Columbian enterprise. During the fair they will hold exhibits of the products of the various states, but each building will be chiefly used as a club house or meeting and resting place for the people of the state it represents.

THE NEW YORK BUILDING.

The exercises of the New York state building began about 2 o'clock. There was music by an orchestra and quartette singing, and then Rev. S. J. McPherson, pastor of the Second Presbyterian church, invoked the Divine blessing upon the assemblage. The address formally assigning the building to exposition purposes was made by Chauncey M. Depew. It was in the gifted New Yorker's happiest vein. Director General George R. Davis accepted the building on behalf of the exposition authorities in a few clear, pointed sentences. Gov. Flower's address followed. It was brief, but comprehensive, and was warmly received. The governor said that he was speaking for the citizens of New York, to give expression to the interest that the people of the Empire state felt in the Columbian exposition, which was in every sense a great national undertaking. Failing to get the exposition herself, New York had joined hands with Chicago to make it a great success. Archbishop Corrigan's address, which succeeded that of Gov. Flower, was an eloquent tribute to the genius of the great discoverer, and to the indomitable energy and perseverance of the American people in making the Columbian exposition possible. The dedication ode, composed and read by William H. McElroy, was entitled: "Two Pictures," and contrasted the mendicant at the gate of La Rabida with the honor-crowned discoverer of a continent.

THE OHIO BUILDING.

The Ohio people formally dedicated their state building at the world's fair grounds with a parade, speeches and music. Some of the most prominent men of the Buckeye region participated. The exercises were opened with music and a prayer by Rev. Dr. Day, chaplain of the Ohio state senate, after which President Peabody delivered a short address and turned the keys of the structure over to Gov. McKinley. In accepting them the governor also delivered a few appropriate words. Speeches were made by Senator Sherman, Senator Brice, and others of the dignitaries present. They were interspersed by instrumental and vocal music.

THE IOWA BUILDING.

Iowa's pretty building was formally dedicated by Gov. Boies, his staff and a small party of Iowans at 11 o'clock a. m. The party was escorted into the grounds by a picked detachment from the First brigade.

Shortly after the arrival of the gubernatorial party the dedicatory programme was begun. The interior of the room had been prettily decorated with flags and bunting. The audience that gathered was large in numbers. The Iowa State band opened the exercises with Rossini's "Barber of Seville" overture. Rev. T. E. Greene, chaplain of the First Iowa regiment, delivered the invocation. Then James O. Crosby, president of the Iowa Columbian exposition, in a few well chosen words presented the building to the governor, Horace Boies, who accepted it in an eloquent address and tendered it to the World's Columbian exposition. Director General George R. Davis in a happy speech formally accepted it, and a medley of national airs by the state band followed. A poem by Mrs. Lucia Gale Barber, an oration by E. P. Seeds the benediction and Fred Phenny's "Columbian March," played by the state band, closed the programme.

E. MASSACHUSETTS BUILDING.

Governor Russell, of Massachusetts, had a couple of company when the dedication ceremonies of the commonwealth's survey, the executive commissioner of the Massachusetts state board, made an address in which he tendered the building to the governor and offered it for the use of the state. Gov. Russell accepted it in a short address.

THE KANSAS BUILDING.

The dedicatory exercises at the Kansas state building began at 10:30 o'clock. The building is not yet completed, but it is sufficiently along in its construction to show that it will be a beautiful structure and a source of pride to the state. Short addresses were made by W. H. Smith, chairman of the Kansas state exposition board, Lieut.-Gov. Felt and others.

THE RHODE ISLAND BUILDING.

Gov. Brown dedicated the pretty little Rhode Island state house at 1 o'clock in the presence of his staff officers, a goodly little company of citizens of that state and a number of members of the Chicago Society of Sons of Rhode Island.

THE FLORIDA BUILDING.

Florida's state building, a reproduction of old Fort Marion, upon which so great amount of history is founded, was dedicated Saturday afternoon. There were not many Florida people present and the exercises were somewhat brief. The building is not yet completed, but its exterior looks exactly like the old fort which it is built to represent.

CATTLEMEN KILLED BY INDIANS.

Murders by Apaches Reported From Arizona Near the Mexican Line.

TUCSON, A. T., Oct. 24.—Several renegade Apaches, under the leadership of the notorious Kid, have murdered two cowboys on Eagle creek near Morencio. Three Apaches were seen recently coming back from Mexico. They forced a Mexican to show them the trail, and a few hours later they ambushed and shot Bill Meyer and John Gardinier, of the Turtle Cattle Company. The bodies were brought in to Morencio and buried. There were Indian signs all around the place where the bodies were found. Gardinier's horse was shot and Myer's was found covered with blood. The Indians are so cunning it is almost impossible to get evidence against them. They are probably back on the San Carlos reservation and will swear they never left it.

Shot and Killed Her Sweetheart.

GALLIPOLIS, O., Oct. 24.—Emma Morgan, who lives 5 miles back of Letart, shot and instantly killed her sweetheart, Harry Jones, Thursday night. They became involved in a quarrel over a young man named Richards, whom Jones claimed she favored. Miss Morgan excused herself and went to a rear room, where she procured her father's revolver. She came in the parlor door and shot Jones twice, through the right eye and through the abdomen. No arrest has yet been made.

A Sawmill Burned.

FLINT, Mich., Oct. 24.—About 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon fire broke out in Houran & Whitehead's sawmill, known as the old McFarlan mill, and it was completely destroyed. There being no fire in the mill during the day, no one knows how it originated. The loss on lumber, building and machinery is estimated at about $20,000; insurance about $5,000.

A Church Burned.

LYONS, Ia., Oct. 24.—In the midst of the services which were being held in the second floor Sunday the First M. E. church, a brick structure, was discovered to be in flames. The fire quickly destroyed the belfry and roof and gutted the interior. Every one escaped safely. The building was valued at $12,000, and was insured for $4,700.

Suffocated by Coal Gas.

WAYNE, Ia., Oct. 21.—At Swedesburg Wednesday night Mr. and Mrs. John Sells were suffocated by gas from a coal cooking stove. The body of Mr. Sells was found under the bed, where he had fallen in his struggle, and that of his wife lay on the floor at the door, where she had fallen in attempting to gain fresh air.

Van Loon Refused a New Trial.

LIMA, O., Oct. 24.—Unless the supreme court interferes Frank Van Loon, who robbed the Exchange bank at Columbus Grove and murdered the cashier while so doing, will be hanged next month, the circuit court refusing to grant a new trial on the petition in error.

Sentenced to Life Imprisonment.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 24.—Joseph B. Gordon, the colored man who killed his 6-year-old daughter Flora with a revolver July 6, was convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced by Judge Chambers to Jackson for life. The prisoner is 64 years old.

A Novel Contest.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—The piano playing contest in this city between James M. Waterbury and Miss Ada Melville resulted in victory for the former, he playing the instrument for seventeen consecutive hours. Miss Melville held out for sixteen hours.

Hart the Winner.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—In a six days walking contest in this city the score at the close was: Hart, 479 miles 7 laps; Moore, 476 miles 14 laps; Conners, 475 miles 13 laps; Guerrero, 459 miles 5 laps; Campana, 451 miles 1 lap; Dean, 403 miles 10 laps.

Froze to Death in a Storm.

DENVER, Col., Oct. 24.—The body of S. H. Coleman, a Denver attorney, was found in a mountain gulch near Morrison. He attempted to walk from the railway station to his ranch last Thursday and froze to death in the storm.

Fatal Railway Wreck.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—The Danville express on the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad was wrecked at Forty-ninth street, this city, and twenty-two persons were injured and Mrs. William McDonald was killed.

The Tea Crop Short.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Advices say that the present tea crop in Asam valley in India is the shortest on record, and the decrease in the outturn, compared with that of 1891, is 3,000,000 pounds.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness caused by catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

SHE WAS SICK BUT TWENTY MINUTES.

Six years have passed since my first confinement, at which I suffered both long and intensely. This time, although I had used only one bottle of "Mother's Friend," I suffered scarcely any pain, and was not sick more than twenty minutes, and did not afterward experience that weakness usual in such cases. Mrs. Anna Gage Lamar, Missouri, January 15, 1891.—Sold by Jno. Orr.

I HAVE, AS YOU KNOW, been selling Bradfield's Female Regulator for years and have had a steadily increasing demand for it; it gives the very best satisfaction. I frequently sell it to physicians, who use it in their practice with the most satisfactory results. R. THOMAS, M. D., Valdosta, Ga. Sold by Jno. Orr.

DON'T GET IMPOSED UPON.

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as in everything else. By the universal satisfaction it has given, and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished, Dullam's Great German Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidney Cure has proven itself unequalled for building up and cleansing your system and for all diseases arising from impure blood. Do not experiment with an unheard of or untried article which you are told is as good, but be sure and get Dullam's. All druggists keep it. For sale by Jno. Orr.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS.

Over twelve years I was afflicted with a very serious female difficulty and for the last sixteen months was under treatment of three of the very best physicians that money could employ. Under their skillful treatment I gradually grew worse until they decided they could render me no permanent help. One of my friends persuaded me to try a bottle of Dullam's Great German Uterine Tonic, and after taking three bottles, can say I am in better health than I have been for twenty years and am now sixty years old, but feel as young as at thirty.

That Pretty Evangeline.

We published recently under the head of "A Pretty Surprise" a notice of a new and very charming edition of Longfellow's most celebrated, "Evangeline." Upon examination, the book proves so delightful in every way that we believe it will be a favor to our readers to refer to it again. It is handsomely illustrated, mainly by Birket Foster, one of the most famous of English artists, and bound in exquisite taste in a combination of white and blue cloth, with gilt edges and ornaments, and is sold only by the publisher direct, at approximately the actual cost of manufacture by the hundred thousand—10 cents a copy, plus 6 cents postage, if by mail. His object is to place an example of his book making in the hands of a vast number of readers. He could certainly choose no more excellent volume, to please all people of good taste. His catalogue of books covering every department of literature, a veritable feast of good things for book lovers, and at a wonderfully low price, considerably over 100 pages in size, is sent post-paid for 2 cents. Address, John B. Alden, Publisher, 57 Rose St., N. Y.

THE OLD APPLE TREE.

There's a memory keeps a-runnin'
Thro' my weary head to-night,
An' I see a picture dancin'
In the fire-flames' ruddy light.
'Tis the picture of an orchard,
Wrapped in autumn's purple haze,
With the tender light about it
That I loved in other days.
An' a-standin' in a corner
Once again I seem to see
The verdant leaves an' branches
Of an old apple tree.

You perhaps would call it ugly,
An' I don't know but it's so
When you see the tree all over,
Unadorned by memory's glow;
For its boughs are gnarled and crooked
An' its leaves are gettin' thin,
And the apples of its bearin'
Wouldn't fill so large a bin
As they us't to, but I tell you,
When it comes to pleasin' me,
It's the dearest in the orchard—
Is that old apple tree.

I would hide within its shelter,
Settlin' in some cozy nook,
Where no calls or threats could stir me
From the pages of my book.
Oh that quiet, sweet seclusion,
In its fullness passeth words—
It was deeper than the deepest
That my sanctum now affords.
Why, the jay birds an' the robins
That was hand in glove with me
As they winked at me and warbled
In that old apple tree.

It was on its sturdy branches
That in summers, long ago,
I would tie my swing, and dangle,
In contentment, to and fro.
Idly dreamin' childish fancies,
Buildin' castles in the air,
Makin' of myself a hero
Of romances, rich an' rare.
I kin shet my eyes an' see it
Jest as plain as it can be,
That same old swing, a danglin'
To the old apple tree.

There's a rustic seat beneath it,
That I never kin forget.
It's the place where me an' Hallie—
Little sweetheart—us't to set,
When we'd wander to the orchard,
So's no listenin' ones could hear,
As I whispered sugared nonsense
In her little willin' ear.
Now my gray old wife is Hallie,
An' I'm grayer still than she,
But I'll not forget our courtin'
'Neath the old apple tree.

Life for us hain't all been summer,
But I guess we've had our share
Of its flittin' joys and pleasures,
An' a sprinklin' of its care.
Oft the skies have smiled upon us,
Then again we've seen 'em frown.
Tho' our load was ne'er so heavy
That we longed to lay it down.
But when Death does come a-callin',
This my last request shall be—
That they'll bury me and Hallie
'Neath the old apple tree.

—Paul Lawrence Dunbar, in Chicago News.

OLD BANJO.

A Faithful Stage Horse That Couldn't Stand the Whip.

This is a story of a horse and a man. That it posses es in large measure the demerit of truthfulnes s is not the fault of the writer.

"Yuh couldn't hev him at no price, pard," said Gilmer & Salisbury's superintendent, "only the comp'ny's goin' to pull off this route. It sure seems like sellin' my own father to sell Ole Banjo, but yuh kin hev him fer two hundred even plunks. More'n thet, the game don't perceed less'n yuh hire Banjo's Bob fer his hostler."

On the way back from Helena, as we sat in the cupola of a caboose, looking out over our trainload of horses, Banjo's Bob told me of his namesake.

"He ain't much fer purty, Banjo ain't, but he's gosh awful fer good. Fer twenty year now I've hed him in my string, an' he ain't a day older in his feelin's than he was in '63 down in Kansas. He's thet proud-sperrited I reckon he'd die right thar ef he felt the whip. Twict Ole Banjo an' me hed a race weth Injuns. Onct down on the Niobrary they hed my station held up fer twelve hours, an' me a-peckin' away weth my Sharp 50-150, an' minglin' lead weth their carcasses mighty free, an' then hed to make a break fer it weth Old Banjo. I jest give him the word, an' he went through them Comanches like a hunter's teeth through a buffler hump. I got this finger shot off, an' Ole Banjo got a bullet through the tip of his ear thet makes him look ez though he was swaller-forked. The Injuns chased us twenty mile, but they couldn't ketch Ole Banjo. His head an' tail was up, an' he jest nachully set the yearth on fire. I sure set a heap o' store by thet hoss. Another time I was hostler at an eatin' station on the Cheyanne route to the Black Hills, an' the Sioux got over there on a scalpin' tower. Ole Banjo was nigh led-hoss in a six team of the unbustedest broncos thet ever was strung out ahead of a stage. Well, sir, one day we heard the cluckety-cluck of the stage wheels about an hour before time, an' we knowed from the way the clucks was a-comin' so frequent thet somethin' was the matter. In another minute here she come around a little butte, Ole Banjo jest a-pawin' the air on a level trot, an' all the broncos on a dead run. They wa'n't no driver on the box, but Ole Banjo jest started a-circlin' round the station an' milled 'em till they come to a stop right in front of the door. Thet's on the dead thievin' square. I hain't tryin' to run no wheezer on yuh, fer I learned him thet trick way back in the sixties. When the coach stopped we seen the driver in the front boot all dobbled weth blood. He'd ben shot in the head from one o' them rifles the guvment donates to the Injuns fer sich amoosement. We jest started to git him out when round the butte come a hull war party of Sioux, a yellin' an' makin' medicine most onmusical. We hustled the team inter the station dinin'-room, an' begun turnin' loose on the Injuns. They was me an' the comp'ny blacksmith an' the eatin'-house man an' his wife an' babby an' Vic Smith, an ole buffler-hunter. We made it plenty onpleasant fer the Injuns, an' Vic he got his man every time but onct, an' then he got the Injun's cayuse. But the house wan't much pertection, an' ez the Injuns kep' pervadin' 'roun we sorter agreed thet one on us must go fer help. Ole Banjo hed jest come in fum an eighteen mile route, an' the last six miles a keepin' ahead of a gang of Injuns, but I knowed he was good fer forty mile more, an' begun gittin' him ready. His backbone an' ribs didn't stick out so free in them days, an' I jest thought I would go it bar'back an' weth on'y a hackamore roun' his nose. Yuh see, the hackamore was on'ly a hair rope weth no buckles to jingle. Well, it come along dark purty soon, an' I tore up a pair o' pants an' wropped 'em aroun' Ole Banjo's feet so his shoes wouldn't clink agin the gravel. When it come plum dark I got on Ole Banjo in the dinin'-room an' rode out toward Cheyanne. We hadn't gone fur when I see an Injun not five foot ahead. He hadn't no idee they was any one on the hoss' back, an' he jest thought things was a comin' too easy when good stage-hosses walked into him that-a-way. He put up his hand to ketch Ole Banjo by the fore-top, an' me all the time layin' along his neck weth my gun three inches ahead of Ole Banjo's nose. I wa'n't two feet away when I let the Injun hev it right betwcen the eyes. Well, they ain't much more to tell. I jest rode Ole Banjo like the devil a-beatin' tan-bark fer the forty mile into Cheyanne. I started fum the station at jest nine o'clock, an' rode into Cheyanne at twelve. In half an hour we was on our way back weth a squad of cavalry, an' a little arter four we rode up to the station. All the Injuns had gone 'ceptin' the one I hed located permanent an' three others which Vic hed made good, an' which the other Injuns hadn't kerried off. But I want yuh to notice thet Ole Banjo went thet eighty mile in seven hours, an' never missed his reg'lar trip over the route neither.

"Banjo's got a heap more sense than some folks has got hay. Lots o' times he has saved a coachful o' passengers fum goin' into a washout when the night was so dark the driver couldn't see the leaders. One night up in Montanny it was jest nachully stormin' pizen, an' Ole Banjo was on the Deer Lodge trail. Of course he was in the lead, but the driver was a new one an' hadn't been told thet Ole Banjo savvied his business better than any driver thet ever pulled a rein over him. The road wa'n't but eight foot wide in places, weth a mounting straight up on one side an' a precipice miles down on the other. The driver hadn't been over the road but once, an' then in the dark, and he felt mighty prayerful when a flash o' lightnin' would come an' let him look down in the yearth about seven mile. He sure didn't feel none gay at the vistas. But all at once Ole Banjo stopped, an' the rest o' the team knew enough not to make no bluff when Banjo asked fer a show down. The driver done his best tuh git the team tuh move, but they all waited to see Banjo's hand. Finally the driver waked up a passenger who was sleepin' in the front boot on the mail sack an' give him the ribbons to hold while he went ahead to spy out the trouble. He found a plenty, fer he was almost touchin' a big grizzly bar when a flash o' lightnin' showed him his mistake. Well, yuh see, the driver hadn't lost no bar, an' the man a-holt o' the lines swore he never touched but one high place tell he jumped on the box. The driver tole me he all to once weighed three ounces lighter'n a straw hat, an' jest flew over the team. They wa'n't no chance tuh turn the team er the coach, an' the hull outfit hed tuh stay thur an' shiver till it was light enough to see. Then they shot the bar an' found it had busted an inside surcingle er somethin' a-tumblin' down the mounting. But all the same, I want yuh to notice thet ary other hoss in the lead would a-jack-knifed the team, an' carried the hull outfit to kingdom come down the precipice. He's a sure good hoss, an' the man thet ever throws silk inter him er treats him bad hez got tuh make some medicine weth me, Joe Bush. He ain't never been outclassed in ary team he was ary into. He's worked in teams where yuh had to go up one side weth a broadax an' down the other weth a shovel a-knockin' 'em intuh the collar, but you bet yuh, Ole Banjo wa'n't never hit a clip. His tugs was allus a-drawin'."

One bitter cold day in January word came up the line that Old Banjo was dead. I jumped on the down coach, and as I dismounted at Cave Hill's station it was with a feeling of surprise rather than anger that Banjo's Bob was not at hand to grasp the bits of the led team. But this feeling changed wholly to one of grief as I saw on the sunny side of the station a rude mound surmounted by a headstone of rough boards. With harness dressing for paint, and his fingers for a brush, Banjo's Bob had subscribed the following epitaph:

HERE LIES OLE BANJO
The best stage hoss That ever
Looked thrue A Collar.
Murdered Jan. 3 1885 by Cheyann Bill
Throwin the silk into him.

I hastened into the station, half expecting to see the dead body of Banjo's Bob swinging from a rafter. But he was made of different stuff. He had used the boards of his bunk for a headstone of Banjo's grave, and burned his supply of fuel in thawing the clods which he had blasted out with dynamite to make a grave for his namesake.

"Howdy, boss? I'm goin' to quit yuh. I like yuh all right, but I hain't got nothin' tuh live fer now but tuh make medicine weth Cheyanne Bill. If yuh'll jest give me my time, I'll go up to Medory an' git my stuff an' start after him. Monday night a week the swing team come in lame, an' I had to send out a four team weth Cheyanne Bill. I knowed he was too free weth the silk, an' I tole him not to throw it inter Ole Banjo, not on no account whatever. Well, sir, he drove inter Middle Grand weth a spike team. My poor Ole Banjo was a-lyin' dead three mile back. They was a rattler in the road thet Ole Banjo must 'a' saw, an' he crowded over to the off side. Cheyanne Bill didn't take no notice 'ceptin' thet Banjo was out o' line, an' he raised his whip an' throwed the silk inter him. It ain't much to most hosses, an' it ain't nothin' to some, but it was murder to my ole hoss. He hadn't never felt the sting o' the silk, an' he knowed as well as a human thet he didn't ought to feel it. It broke his heart right thar. He jest give a spring in the air an' come down in a heap. He didn't suffer none 'ceptin' fer the one lick thet murdered him. Russ Wilson, foreman of the E6 outfit, come along next mornin', an' I hired a mule team of him fer eight dollars a day to haul my ole hoss beck to the station. Russ was mighty uppity about lettin' me hev the team at any price. But when I tole him it was to bury Ole Banjo he jest let me hev two teams fer nothin', an' sent me one of his cow-punchers to Deadwood to buy dynamite fer blastin' out the grave. More'n thet, he come all the way from the E6 an' brought every one of his boys to give a military funeral to my ole hoss. The obsquies was accordin' to Hoyle, you bet, an' the boys all fired a salute over the grave weth all the cartridges in their six-shooters. But I can't stay no longer in sight of his grave weth Cheyanne Bill on top of ground. It ud drive me locoed in a week. I've got enough stuff comin' to strike Bill's trail, an I'll never leave it tell I've made medicine weth him. I hear he didn't dast atop at the end of his run, but kep' a-goin', an' left the coach in the Bad Lands an' struck across country fer Mingusville. He'll sure make his first stop in Hele-naw, an' I may ketch up weth him thar. Anyways, I'll foller him tell I find him."

Yesterday, more than seven years after Old Banjo's death, I opened a paper sent me from Las Vegas, New Mexico. Huge black lines smelling of harness dressing were drawn about the following article:

"Cheyenne Bill was shot and instantly killed in the Maverick saloon yesterday by a man calling himself Banjo's Bob. The coroner's jury acquitted the prisoner, as it was shown that Cheyenne Bill had pulled his gun and turned loose at him as soon as he entered the door."

In defiance of Uncle Sam's postal laws there was scrawled immediately under the black line:

"I sed i wuld make Medecin weth Cheyann an i done it. BANJO'S BOB."

AN HISTORIC CURIO.

The Attempted Suicide of Napoleon I. at Fontainebleau.

It is not, perhaps, without interest at this moment, when President Carnot establishes his residence in the palace of Fontainebleau, to recall one of the most curious affairs of history attached to this famous house.

It was during the night of April 12, 1814. Already the allies occupied Paris. Napoleon, giving away on all sides under the formidable pressure of the enemy, took refuge at Fontainebleau, not knowing to what extremity to resort, and, on account of the despair of the master, the chateau was plunged into gloomy silence. Suddenly, in the middle of the night, the long corridors of the palace were all animation. The domestics of the chateau were ascending and descending, the lights of the departments were all lighted, the valets were on the "qui vive."

One knocked at the door of the room of Baron Yvan, surgeon of the emperor; one awoke the grand marshal, Bertrand; one called the Duke de Vicence; one ran to seek the Duke de Bassano, who dwelt at the chancery. All came and were admitted successively into the bedroom of the emperor. Groans and sobs escaped from the room and echoed along the gallery.

Finally Dr. Yvan came out, descended precipitately into the court, mounted a horse which was fastened to a post and galloped off.

What drama has just taken place?

The following is the report of an eye-witness:

"At the epoch of the retreat from Moscow Napoleon had procured in case of accident, the means of not falling alive into the hands of the enemy. Surgeon Yvan had put up for him a package of opium, which he wore on his neck when in danger; since then he had kept it in a secret drawer of his cabinet. That night it seemed to him no other source was left. The valet de chambre, who slept behind his half-opened door, heard him rise, and heard him stir something in a glass of water, drink, then lie down again. Soon pain wrung from Napoleon the confession of his approaching end. It was then he called the favorites of the court. Yvan, learning what had just happened, and hearing Napoleon complain that the action of the poison was not prompt enough, lost his head and fled quickly from Fontainebleau. A long drowsiness followed, and after a heavy sweat the pain ceased and the frightful symptoms died away. Whether the dose was insufficient or time had weakened the poison is unknown. Napoleon, astonished at finding himself living, said: 'God does not wish it,' and resigned himself to his destiny. This anecdote, related by Baron Fain, secretary of the emperor, merits being better known."—Boston Traveller.

When She Carves.

It is pleasant to see a woman carve, if she does it deftly; there seems to be something appropriate and almost Scriptural in a woman dispensing food to her household. English women nearly always carve, but in this country the work is almost invariably relegated to the men. To save strength, time and patience in carving it is absolutely necessary to have a sharp knife. As a general rule cut across the grain. A turkey should be placed with the head toward the right hand of the carver. The breast is generally cut in slices parallel to the breast bone; but if the turkey is large, first cut the wings off close to the body and then cut across. A good way to keep a knife perfectly sharp, and make your husband think you give him the tenderest joints, is to use a "rifle," such as the farmers sharpen their scythes upon. A few turns on this will give an edge that will cut through anything.—N. Y. Tribune.

—Not to Be Expected.—"Pshaw," exclaimed the professor to the student, who was rehearsing his Latin oration, "you are too solemn. There's no life in your speaking at all." "Of course not," responded the student, lively enough, "you don't expect it in a dead language, do you?"—Detroit Free Press.

THE DAYS OF LONG AGO.

Paper Read at the Meeting of the County Pioneer Society by Rev. E. Yager.

On an occasion like this our minds naturally revert to the past, instead of taking prospective views of the future, for it is certain that the days upon which the old pioneer loves to meditate are not so much the golden autumn days of his life, although these may be truly gratifying, but he loves to live over in memory those bright summer days of long ago, when things were not as they now are, and although he may be as happy as a king in his modern house, with all its modern improvements, yet at times he longs for the old log house and the merry times he enjoyed around the old fire-place with his family and neighbors; when there was no music so sweet to his ear as the ring of the ax in the native forest, and the good house-wife spun and sung, and the old wheel and loom kept sweet time to her cheerful voice and happy heart. What is the piano or organ to such music as that which these pioneer housewives and mothers made with the hum of the little flax wheel or the old hetchel, as they beat the flax and then spun it into the fine linen, like the good old Jewish mothers in preparing for the Tabernacle. Do not talk to these pioneer fathers and mothers of the good times which we now have, for they will tell you that we know nothing about good times. There was more real and genuine enjoyment in yoking up old Buck and Bright, or Dandy and Berry to the ox-sled, with a good supply of straw and quilts, and with their family, and their neighbor's family, and all the other families, and with all the babies in the neighborhood,—and they were not so scarce an article in those good old pioneer days as they are now,—and start off for the old log house to meeting to worship God in the good old way, with heart in their worship and music in their voices. They made the woods ring with the melody of true worship, and while they pray and listen to the good old Gospel, their hearts feel the Spirit's power and loud and hearty amens unite with the cry of penitent souls, and the old log school-house becomes another upper room like that at Jesusalem, for the people are of one accord and God is there.

They did not go to meeting in those good old pioneer days to see Sally Jones' new bonnet, or to see the latest fashions, for there was but the one style,—the old home-made flannel and the home-made hood, for each was her own dressmaker and milliner. If summer, it was a calico or home-made linen, with the yoke sunbonnet.

Those quaint old sunbonnets used to cover brains that thought on higher things than feathers and flowers and paint and powder. They did not spend the time after church soliciting eggs, milk etc. for ice cream socials, or cakes and pies for church suppers. No, they did not have those things in the old pioneer days. They talked together of the goodness of the Lord or how to help some poor family through the pinching winter.

In the old pioneer days each neighbor felt an interest in his neighbor's welfare and brotherly sympathy and love bound the people very near to each other, for all alike were poor and one common bond united all.

Pioneer fathers, you have not forgotten the old logging bees, and the husking bees, when neighbors met together to help each other and have a jollification. Talk about our modern political jollifications or a Fourth of July jollification! An old pioneer logging bee or husking bee had more jollification in it than half a dozen political meetings or modern Fourth of Julys. Our modern civilization thinks that a good time consists in getting together to see two bullies like Sullivan and Corbett pound each other until they fall in the ring weltering in their own blood, and the one that can pound the other the hardest gets the prize.

Let me say to you, my hearers, this kind of thing is no advancement over the good old pioneer days, but it takes us back into the dark and brutal days of pagan Rome, when men and women met to see the gladiators fight in the arena, and if this thing is allowed to go on the time is not far distant when the cry will be for the reacting of the bloody scenes of the old pagan days. If this is modern progress I prefer to go back and live in the good old pioneer days, when man loved his brother man and had no desire to win a name by beating one another into pudding. If this is a sample of the future I should desire to see the sentiment of the poet fulfilled when he sings,—

"Backward, turn backward, Oh Time in thy flight!"

Better a thousand times over go back to the old log school-house, and the old log cabin, and the old wheel and loom as types of civilization than to the prize ring, where men fight like brute beasts and are lauded as the great heroes of the hour. I am glad to say we did not learn such things from the pioneers of this country.

While the pioneer had much in his life which modern refinement would term crude and unpolished, yet there was that in his character which was noble, true, humane and Christlike. The father and husband felling the native forest and the good wife and mother caring for the wants of the family, spinning, weaving and cooking over the old fireplace and sharing their simple meal with the needy stranger, presents to my mind much more that is noble and refined than I find in what may be termed fashionable society.

I have often wished that some of our dudes and dudesses could have been under the training of some of these good old pioneer fathers and mothers. One thing is certain: much that is palmed off to-day as Young America's smartness in the use of slang would never have been taught then. The speech of the early pioneer might have been sadly at fault as to the rules of grammar but it was a great deal more refined than the slang of to-day.

The homes of the pioneers were the best colleges of the day and some of our best statesmen have come from what is often termed Old Brush College, when by the light of the old tallow dip, or the dim light of the fire-place, the boy laid the foundation of knowledge, which has given him a place among the honored and great.

But the life of these pioneers was not all sunshine. There came the dark days when it was often a struggle to keep the wolf from the door. It was no easy task for the father and mother on the new farm to clothe, feed and shoe the growing family. We but poorly appreciate the struggles of these early pioneers. We often complain of hard times. Go back fifty or sixty years ago, when the country was new, and the early settler had nothing but his hands to begin with and wheat 50 cents per bushel, and then had to be drawn thirty or forty miles with an ox team, and often threshed with a flail, and a load of wheat would scarcely buy enough groceries to last a quarter. I tell you it did not mean a new dress, and a new bonnet or hat, or a new suit every few weeks. Father or the older ones used to get the first wear out of the suit and then it was handed down along the line and woe be to the last fellow if there were many ahead of him. By the time little Tom got father's breeches they looked like the relic of a barbaric age.

Death used to creep into the old log cabin and snatch the babe from the cradle, and the light would seem to have gone out of the cabin as they bore the little lamb to the lone cemetery and rolled logs upon its grave to keep the wild beasts from devouring it. Sometimes death took father or mother and then the struggle was harder than ever to keep home going and the wolf away. But out of these battles and struggles the pioneers of this country have come; and they have cleared away the forests, they have built the highways, they have opened up the markets for the products of the country, they have laid out their towns and cities, and "have made the wilderness and solitary places to rejoice and blossom as the rose." Ah! what do the boys and girls, and young men and women of to-day know of hard work and sacrifice and self-denial? I know these aged pioneers, whose hands are calloused by toil and whose brows are wrinkled by age and care, and it makes my heart sad to think how fast they are leaving us. Each year thins their ranks and soon the last pioneer of this country will be gone and none will be left to tell the story of the past. But they leave to us a bright legacy. When they came to this country to battle with poverty and the opposing elements of nature our land was under the awful curse of slavery. Many of these early pioneers gave their lives to free our land from this brutal wrong, and they gave to us that are younger a government which recognizes the principles of equality between the white and the black as citizens of this great republic.

Let us take this trust and keep it sacred, recognizing the principle of Divine truth that God has "made of one blood all nations to dwell upon the face of the earth," and that every citizen, whether black or white, as long as he is true and law-abiding and helps to maintain the interest of the government, shall have the protective rights of the government. The Revolutionary fathers gave to the pioneer fathers of this country a land free from British rule and tyranny, and how well they preserved that trust we all know; so we can say to-day that we owe allegiance to no foreign power and stand as the greatest Republic the sun ever shone upon.

But have these Revolutionary and pioneer fathers left us nothing to do only to sit down in our ease and enjoy these hard-earned liberties and improvements? Pioneer fathers and mothers, we appreciate all you have done for us in the gift of these beautiful farms and homes and schools and churches, and I feel, for one, that I would be ungrateful and unworthy to enjoy these blessings were I to do nothing to improve society or help to make the future better than the past or present. I pray God that none of us who are younger will ever forget how much we owe to these early pioneers, who not only felled the forest and made for us these pleasant farms and homes, but laid the foundations of the church, the school and the Republic.

And again I say, God bless these pioneers and may the mantle of all that is true and noble and Godlike fall upon us who are to fill their places.

COLUMBUS DAY.

The Celebration of the Anniversary by the G. A. R. and Tecumseh Schools.

At 8 o'clock last Friday evening, Oct. 21st, a large audience had assembled in the Opera House to commemorate the discovery of America upon the four hundredth anniversary of that event under the auspices of the Tecumseh Union Schools.

The program was opened with a song by small school children. Rev. J. P. Varner then followed with an invocation appropriate to the great event. The pupils of the Fourth grade were then heard in a Columbian Chorus, after which Miss Edith Ingersoll read a paper entitled "The First Voyage of Columbus," touching upon his early life, his marriage and how he went to the court of Spain; his cold reception and disappointments; how at length Queen Isabella pledged her jewels to procure the necessary funds; how he sailed away with his three small ships; of the discovery of San Salvador and his return to Spain.

The small children again appeared and made themselves heard in a Columbian Ode Chorus.

Walter Burnett then gave a declamation entitled, "Anniversary of the Discovery of America." He spoke of this being the anniversary of one of the greatest events the world had ever seen; of the fresh impetus given to exploration by this great achievement; compared the early days with to-day; beginning of the free schools, which are the triumph of a great world; that the coming century gives promise of being the greatest and grandest ever yet passed.

Miss Jessie Millis read a paper, commenting on Columbus; on the age in which he lived: that the 15th and 16th centuries were those of discovery; the compass was made known by the Chinese, which enabled the mariner to venture far out upon the open seas: of the great maritime industry of Spain and Portugal; of the change of direction of the voyages that the discovery of America caused; of the discovery and passage of the Cape of Good Hope and Straits of Magellan and the Pacific Ocean, and other great events of the times.

A very neat and unique chorus, which was performed with flags and bells by children attired in appropriate costumes, followed.

Recitation, "Christopher Columbus"—Florence Temple.

A unique flag drill was then given by young ladies, which was encored, and they responded by singing a verse of "Ta-ra-ra Boom de ay," which was received with vociferous applause.

Reading, "The Discovery"—Clarence Hurry.

Columbian Chorus—Children.

Dr. Barnes then made a few brief and appropriate remarks, which was followed by a chorus, "Our Sailor King," rendered by young ladies and gentlemen. Dr. Geo. Howell, in behalf of the School Board, then made brief and appropriate remarks. "America" was then sung by the audience and Rev. Wm. H. Babbitt pronounced the benediction.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Eliza Anderson was born July 15th, 1819, at Craigs, Antrim county, Ireland. She lived at home with her parents until her marriage to William Anderson in 1842. She united with the Presbyterian Church in May, 1838, at Cullybacky, where she taught a class in the Sabbath School for years. After their marriage they removed to a home of their own, where they lived twenty years. Eight children were born to them, six daughters and two sons. Of these three died in childhood. Five are still living, four daughters and one son, Mrs. Thos. Murphy, of Macon, Mrs. Thos. Elliott, of Tecumseh, Samuel J. Anderson, of Macon, and Mrs. Albert Nace and Ella E. Anderson, who still live in the old homestead.

In 1862 they sold out, intending to come to America, but on account of the failing health of their eldest daughter were compelled to remain until September, 1863. Their daughter having died they then sailed for America, landing in New York the following month. Her husband's health, already poor, began to fail rapidly and ten months later he died, leaving Mrs. Anderson and family in a strange land among strangers. But with Christian faith and her strong, independent disposition she strove to keep her children together, and by her good management and industry they lived comfortably. Her death occurred October 9th, 1892, at the age of seventy-four years. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. I. Gulick of Macon.

What sensations crowd upon our troubled hearts
Since thou wert covered in thy shroud and we were forced to part!
But hope oft whispers to our souls that we shall meet again
When mortal life shall meet the goal that frees us all from pain.
But Oh, that tongue that counsel gave!—that ministering hand,
Now dignifies thy silent grave by Death's severe command.
And we are doomed no more to share the benediction given.
That oftentimes thy pious prayers craved from indulgent Heaven.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to return our heartfelt thanks to our many kind neighbors and friends for their kindness and assistance during our bereavement; also for the many floral gifts, and to the ladies and gentlemen of Macon and Ridgeway for singing.

MRS. ANDERSON'S FAMILY.

"She's a very upright young lady." "Yes, but she's bent on matrimony."

School Sketches.

English Literature have began the study of Macbeth.

Mrs. H. A. Hoag visited the ninth grade, Friday morning.

General English II are commencing Scots Lady of the Lake.

Several are absent from the High School Course by the popular measles in their respective families.

The Scholars that have had to remain after school for the last week are getting tired of it and say they would like a change.

The Primary School in the East branch, are indulging in the measles by the wholesale; over forty being absent for that cause.

Grace Gillespie and Lizzie Russell visited the High School during chapel Thursday morning, and Guy Davidson Monday afternoon.

Have you been vaccinated for the measles? querried a member of the High School lately. Wonder what Pathology he has been studying.

Anxious Parent: Julius has been taking lessons a whole year now, Professor, and I should like to know how he is progressing. Do you think he has a good ear for music? Musical Instructor; Your son, madam, has a very-ershapely ear, one of the most shapely ears, madam, I have ever seen.

Dinklespiel: You know dot Hoffheim, dot great talker? He was arrested yesterday. Guggenheim: For vot? Dinkelspiel: He vos makin' a sbeech to a growd on de corner, undt a boliceman took him in for hafin a chinmill open on Sunday.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

Bert Tribou, of Detroit, was in town over Sunday.

Wm. C. Rogers, of Clinton, was in town Tuesday.

Hyers Company to-morrow and Saturday evening.

O. P. Bills took a business trip to Toledo last Tuesday.

The Ladies of St. Peter's Guild will meet Thursday, Nov. 3d. with Mrs. E. Tate.

Eugene Clarkson, of Detroit, spent last Saturday and Sunday at his old Macon home.

Ten cords of four foot wood or block stove wood wanted immediately. Call at this office,

Go and hear the Hyer's Comedy Company at the opera house to-morrow and Saturday evening.

Web Anderson started last Friday on a trip to New York, expecting to be gone about two weeks.

Waterman, Wiggins & Wood, the three "double-yous" stand a good show for getting there this fall.

R. S. Browster and wife, of Coldwater, are visiting at G. W. Mead's and J. F. Bowen's for a couple of weeks.

Our inside pages this week contain a very full account of the Columbian dedication exercises at Chicago last week.

The next regular meeting of Tecumseh Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, will be Thursday Evening, Nov. 3d. A full attendance is desired.

A very heavy brick vault has been constructed in Bills' bank, which will be fitted with heavy iron doors, which cost more than double their safe capacity.

Mrs. J. K. Waldron and committee will entertain the ladies social at the Christ church parlors, Thursday, Nov. 3. Supper served from 5 to 7. Everybody invited.

The Columbian exercises held at the opera house last Friday evening, was one of the finest programs that a Tecumseh audience has listened to in many a day.

The Hyers Comedy Company give first class entertainments. They will appear at the opera house to-morrow and Saturday evenings with a change of program each evening.

H. Bramble left at our sanctum this week, two samples of Canada Victor potatoes, which weighed two and three pounds. He attributes this wonderful growth to the McKinley bill.

A small audience greeted Mark S. Dwyer, of Pontiac, Mich, last Tuesday evening, who talked to an audience of Republicans and Democrats; his speech mollified the members of the G. O. P., who were present, from a Republican standpoint.

Mrs. E. Gray, wife of Elliott Gray, died at their home, Oct. 14, 1892. She was born in Ireland, Jan. 16, 1834, and came to America with her father when she was fourteen years old. At that time she had already become a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and continued such until the end of her life. She always maintained a consistent Christian character, which fact is held in grateful remembrance by her husband and children who now mourn on account of her absence.

The best souvenir of the New York Columbian Celebration is the number of Harper's Weekly dated October 22d. The important features of the celebration are described by the most competent writers, and the illustrations, which are numerous, include a frontispiece picture of the banquet at Lenox Room, a double-page view of the military parade, and a four-page panorama of the naval review. The next number, dated October 29th, will contain an equally full and graphic description of the dedication ceremonies at Chicago. The number will be bound in a specially designed cover, and its illustrations, by the best artists and photographers, include views of all the most interesting features of the occasion.

John Primrose is at home this week.

Bring along that wood while the roads are good.

John Margeson and wife are visiting friends in Ohio this week.

Dr. White and C. D. Keyes were in town yesterday afternoon.

Old papers for sale at this office. Just the thing to put under carpets.

Mrs. J. M. Getchell, of Marshall, is visiting friends in Tecumseh this week.

Met Conklin helped make up the throng that invaded Chicago last week.

Mrs. Abbie Fisher is spending the present week with friends at Lafayette, Ind.

Mrs. Mac G. Fritz has returned from a long visit with her parents in Grand Ledge.

Editor Kempton, of the Addison Courier, has been on the sick list for the past few days.

F. R. Stebbins, of Adrian, has a new ad on the eighth page to which we invite attention.

If you wish to laugh and grow fat go and hear the Hyers' Comedy Company to-morrow evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Hall rejoice in the advent of a son, who happened around last Saturday night.

Dr. Snyder and Hannibal Osborn went to Ann Arbor last Monday to attend the Democratic mass meeting and barbecue.

"Our President" and the "K.O. T. M." are Cotton's new brands of cigars. They are wholesaled by D. L. Whitenack & Co.

Mrs. John Heesen, Grace Heesen and Mrs. Henry Nyland are visiting friends at Ypsilanti, and are expected home to-morrow.

The Prohibitionists will hold a meeting at Sutton's opera house next Tuesday evening, Nov. 1st. Speaking by Rev. John Russell.

The W. C. T. U. will have a social at Mrs. Jehiel Davidson's on Friday of this week. Supper will be served from 5:30 to 6:30. Everybody invited.

Wm. Hayden has over 26,000 bushels of wheat now in the Globe Mill, awaiting the grinding process, and the rollers are kept running night and day.

Wm. H. Osborn has been very ill for the past few days, but we are glad to know that he is now on the mend and will doubtless be about again soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Buechner, of Battle Creek, are rejoicing over the advent of a young son, born Oct. 16th. Mother and son are doing finely and Mr. B is kept busy receiving congratulations.

The examination of James Pickett, charged with arson, was held before Justice Davidson Tuesday the 25th. The defendant waived his defence and was bound over to the circuit court for trial. He was released upon bail.

Mrs. H. C. Lowe and Mrs. Hagaman of Colorado Springs, who have been visiting Wm. H. Osborn's family and other friends for several weeks past, left for home yesterday. They will stop a few days in Chicago on their return.

Rev. C. E. Hulbert, of Detroit, Field Secretary of the committee on Christian Unity, Chicago will speak on Christian and Church Unity, in the lecture room of the M. E. church, Monday evening. The subject will be presented in a practical, familiar and fraternal manner.

One of the features of the North American Review for November will be an article on "The Democratic Outlook," by the Hon. W. F. Harrity, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee. He writes dispassionately, and urges many reasons for the belief that the Democratic party will be restored to power.

President Harrison sits in the shadow of a great domestic affliction. The heart of every true American citizen will reach out in sympathy towards the President in this hour of his bereavement, softening the asperities of political strife. Once before in our history has the White House been darkened by the death of the "first lady of the land," President Tyler having lost his wife in 1842, during his Presidential term. The funeral of Mrs. Harrison will be held to-morrow at Indianapolis.

The last Republican Rally, in Tecumseh during the political campaign of 1892, will be held in Sutton's Opera House on Friday evening, Nov. 4th. The speaker will be Grant Fellows, of Hudson, an eloquent young son of Lenawee county, who has a State reputation as a campaign orator. This meeting is especially designed for the younger element in the Republican party, but all citizens, irrespective of age, sex, creed, or political affiliation are cordially invited to be present. The meeting will be enlivened with good music by the Glee Club.

The Farmers' Social Club will meet at John Schreeder's, Tuesday eve'g., Nov. 1st. The meeting of Oct. 11 having been postponed on account of sickness. It is hoped that there will be a large attendance. The following program will be presented:

Singing by the Club.
Rec.—May Garlinghouse.
Reading—Mrs. J. K. Waldron.
Dec.—Garland Gillespie.
Poem—Ellen Fisher.
Duet—Mr. and Mrs. A. Harding.
Charade—Mrs. John Schreder.
Question—What we know about Columbus? Led by O. B. Finch and followed by every member of the club. Let the house be filled after the long vacation.

Mrs. Wm. Ross is visiting her daughters in Battle Creek.

Albert Hyde, Sr., was visiting friends in Marcellus last week.

Rev. F. Adkins will soon move his family to Granville, Ohio.

Be sure and enroll in the Fayette Normal University on Monday.

Buy your lecture tickets at once, if you have not already done so.

Season tickets for the lecture course are now on sale at the usual places.

The Co. C boys received their pay last week for their service in camp.

Hudson Conkling, Robe Hosmer, and E. M. Coller went to Chicago last week.

Secure your lecture tickets for the Star course at once, or you may be too late.

Dr. & Mrs. G. D. Perry are spending a couple of weeks with friends in Marshall and Chicago.

The boiler house for the water works is now enclosed and the two boilers to be placed therein have arrived.

The first lecture for the Star course will be given by Geo. W. Cable, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 16th.

The Board of Supervisors have chosen Wm. M. Corbett, of Blissfield, to succeed S. M. Hamilton as County Superintendent of the poor.

Lew Priest has opened a shoe shop in the building just South of Nyland's shoe store, where he would be pleased to see all his old friends.

The HERALD job rooms have turned out this week a business pamphlet for Heesen Bros. & Co., being a descriptive price list of their hollow ware. We claim it to be the neatest pamphlet job ever issued from a Tecumseh office.

S. W. Temple is building a coal shed, adjoining his office building on Shawnee street. A portion of the shed will serve as a covering for the platform of the wagon scales and the balance for storing coal for the retail trade.

Rev. Jas. Gorton will preach next Sunday evening in favor of opening the World's Fair on Sunday. We have heard the other side. That is well. Now let us hear this side, and then judge where the weight of argument lies.

A late copy of the San Jose Herald contains this announcement: "Mrs. S. B. Anderson, who has been dangerously ill for the past eight weeks, goes to the Fabiola Hospital, Oakland, Saturday morning to undergo a surgical operation."

We dropped into Moreland Bros. & Crane's the other day while at Adrian, and found them rushed with business as usual. They seem to be equally at home selling oil and cigars or managing amateur theatricals. We are inclined to think however that they make the most money out of the oil and tobacco department.

The Tecumseh Herald has had "a head" put on it. We felt it in our bones that something of some kind was going to happen to the Herald for its editor has been grinding out campaign poetry during the past few weeks. However we like the Herald better both for the new head and the campaign poetry. —Adrian Press.

Heesen Bro's & Co., are putting up a large extension to their factory. It extends from the west end of the present shop entirely across the lot to Pearl street, being 75 feet in length by 24 feet in width, and two stories high. Their hollow ware trade has grown so rapidly during the past year that they found more room in which to finish and store their goods an absolute necessity.

We call attention to the appearance of the original S. B. Hyers Colored Musical Comedy Co., at Sutton's opera house, Friday and Saturday, Oct. 28 and 29th with a change of program each evening. You will see May C. Hyers the only colored actress with a wonderful contralto voice. Chas. T. Small, basso; the man that makes double flat. Two black star comedians, Geo. Dudley, and Tom Davis, supported by 10 colored artists. 25 and 35cts. Seats on sale at Adamson's.

Sheriff Baldwin is the champion fisherman. He is responsible for bringing to the city the largest pickerel caught in Wampler's lake in many seasons. So large was it that his family and seventeen prisoners made a meal off half of the monsters. His head when cut off was as big as a dog's head, and spreading his jaws, the sheriff placed the end of a two foot log in his month. The real truth of the matter is, however that the fish weighed just eight and a half pounds, and was a beauty.—Adrian Times.

The drawing of the "boom" lots took place at the Croswell opera house Monday evening. The committee having charge of the sale appointed a committee from among the purchasers to conduct the drawing. Much enthusiasm was manifested, plats were distributed through the audience and they soon became familiar with the numbers and watched the drawing with intense interest. C. D. Hardy drew the barn with three lots, and Miss Amelia Biehl was the fortunate one who drew the $500 prize with her lot, the money to be used for no other purpose than the erection of a house on her lot. This prize took the place of the house that was understood to be in the drawing, but on account of the number of lots that were sold that tract was not kept by the improvement company, but allowed to revert to the former owner.—The Messenger.

Dress Goods in all the new Novelties at ANDERSON & Co's.

The Tecumseh post office has been draped in mourning by reason of the death of Mrs. Harrison.

Take your poultry and eggs to L. D. Dewey on Railroad street, where you get the highest market price for them.

The first social dance of the season will be held at the Armory Hall, on Wednesday Nov. 9th; all cordially invited to attend.

The latest novelty for men is a cane that holds ten drinks of liquor and has a little silver cup screwed on top. A sort of a stick with a stick in it, as it were.

Last Sunday the water was drawn from the "Red" pond, in Brownville, and the water mains placed across the pond. The work occupied the entire day. The pipe laying was begun upon the north side of the pond and the ends of the pipe buoyed up with casks and drawn across to the south side; when nearly across the pipe broke away and went to the bottom, making it necessary to drag it by main force. The water works people were ably assisted by a large gathering of the irrepressible small boy.

A word of caution to the Democrats of this legislative district may not be out of place. We have an even chance of carrying the legislature, and can easily elect Horace Holdridge if every Democrat therein does his duty. A vote for Mr. Holdridge means a vote for a Democratic U. S. Senator. This district may hold the balance in the State legislature. A Democratic gain of a Senator in Michigan may change the political complexion of the U. S. Senate. A few votes, therefore, in this legislative district may have a far reaching effect. Personal preferences should be held in abeyance on this office. No trading on the legislative ticket should be the watchword of every Democrat on election day.

Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance company, of Lenawee county, to elect a president and five directors, and to transact such other business as may properly come before it, will be held in Dean's opera house, in the city of Adrian, on Monday the 31st day of October, at 8:30 o'clock legal time.

"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Rapid and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgments that so much comfort for $1.00 the price is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate injury. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial support. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Oily sins are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Electric Belt, which is selling very rapidly, and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt), and credit $3 on the price of new order. Remember the Electric Foot warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

DEDICATION DAY.

Festivities at the Opening of Chicago's Great Show.

The Big Reception with Which Society Will Entertain Its Many Distinguished Guests—Military and Civic Parades—Impressive Public Ceremonies.

[COPYRIGHT, 1892.]

It is perhaps characteristic of Chicago that, although but three weeks remain before the formal dedication of the world's fair takes place, detailed plans for that eventful ceremony have not yet been entirely completed. Chicagoans are in the habit of doing things with a mighty rush, and hours are sufficient in the western metropolis to accomplish what would require days in a less energetic city. Despite the lack of preparation, which is more apparent than real, no one, in the light of past events, would have the hardihood to predict anything but the most successful outcome of the plans of the exposition directors. Although the arrangements for the reception and entertainment of visitors have as yet been made only in a general way, experienced managers are at work upon the details, and it is confidently expected that none of them will have cause to complain.

Beginning October 19, the dedicatory exercises will last three days—the first devoted to society, the second to Chicago and the last the formal transfer of the buildings and grounds to the METROPOLITAN.

United States commission, to the nation. The members of the committee on ceremonies, which have charge of all the exercises, are wise men in their generation, and when it came to the question of deciding upon nice social functions they warily held aloof. It was not for them to rush in where angels feared to tread, and, rather than attempt to classify Chicago society into eligibles and ineligibles, they decided to omit the ball and reception. This was more than Chicago society could stand. Dedicatory exercises without an inaugural ball would be like a twenty-story building without a foundation. A Macedonian cry went up from hundreds of drawing-rooms, and the appeal was not in vain. With courage worthy of a great cause, part of which may have been derived from his recent investiture with the consular decorations of Spain, Hobart Chatfield Taylor, Chicago's McAllister, jumped into the breach and society was appeased. The committee gladly availed itself of his services, and upon his shoulders now rests the responsibility for society's part in the ceremonies. Mayor Washburne, Marshall Field, George M. Pullman and others are associated with him in preparing for the reception by the elite to President Harrison and his cabinet. The ball will be given in the Auditorium the evening of October 20, and will doubtless be the most brilliant event in the annals of Chicago society.

HORTICULTURAL.

Adjoining the Auditorium on the south stands the big carriage warehouse of the Studebaker Brothers. Connection between the two will be obtained by means of a corridor, and the supper will be served on the third floor of the warehouse and in the dancing room of the hotel proper, seats being provided for two thousand one hundred and one people. The immense floor of the Auditorium will be used for dancing, and distinguished guests will look upon the brilliant scene from forty boxes arranged in the form of a horseshoe on the stage. The only criticism of Mr. Taylor's management so far heard is that he has been too exclusive in sending out the invitations and that the price of the tickets, twenty-five dollars, is too high. It is argued that a ball and reception given in honor of the president of a republic should be a popular affair. Artists are already at work upon designs for the decoration of the ball room and there is no doubt that a magnificent spectacle will be presented when the music starts up for the grand march.

AGRICULTURAL.

Although the ball marks the actual opening of the ceremonies, not until the next day will Chicago really bestir itself. This will be the city's occasion to celebrate, and from dawn till dusk the streets will be filled with bodies of uniformed men and cars will be split with civic parade, which takes place October 20, is in charge of Gen. Nelson A. Miles and Gen. Joseph A. Stockton, veterans in such service. Seventy thousand men will be in the line of march. Miles of thoroughfare will be traversed by the mighty host, marching between solid masses of people filling sidewalks, windows and house tops. The procession will start in the morning and not until late in the afternoon will the last man pass in review before President Harrison and the cabinet on the Lake Front park. On that day Chicago will don her festal robes. Smoke begrimed buildings will be radiant in bunting and streamers; triumphant arches, gayly bedecked with ribbons, will span the streets; cheers will ring out from every window, and as hearty welcome will be given to the paraders as that which greeted Sherman's battle-scarred veterans as they marched down Pennsylvania avenue a quarter of a century ago. Grand army men will turn out in force; Odd Fellows, Knights Templar and Pythians in brilliant regalia will be in the line; Italian, German, French and Spanish societies will be represented, and representatives from every civic society in the country will march and countermarch along the boulevards till their feet are blistered by the pavement.

Chicago is already taking pride in the decorations for that day. There will be no bad combinations of colors to mar the artistic effect. The decorations will be upon one general plan, which

MINING.

Francis Millet, the artist, is now preparing. Red, white and blue will doubtless predominate, but an effort will be made to have the minor shades combined with these cardinal colors so that perfect harmony will prevail. The arches and other street decorations are being designed by Henry Ives Cobb, whose work on the Fisheries building has given him high rank as an architect. He and Millet are working together, and the result is expected to be something unique in the way of municipal decoration.

But all this is preliminary to the main event of the week—the dedication itself. The relentless calendar has compelled the exposition managers to cast superstitions to the winds, and the national commission will take charge of the grounds and buildings on Friday. The attendant ceremony will be impressive in the extreme. The exercises will be held in the Liberal Arts building, the largest structure covered by one roof ever erected. Noted statesmen, diplomats, scientists, authors and men renowned in business circles from all over the world will be present. President Harrison will be the guest of President Higginbotham of the exposition association, and Vice President Morton will be entertained by Ferdinand W. Peck.

ART.

Friday morning President Harrison will be driven from Mr. Higginbotham's house on Michigan avenue to the Auditorium hotel, where an escort of regular cavalry and artillery will be in waiting. The start for the grounds will be made from that point, the president and his escort being followed by the governors of thirty-five states with their staffs in full uniform. South on Michigan avenue, past magnificent residences on either side, the cavalcade will pass to Washington park via Drexel boulevard. At the park the regular infantry and state militia, 20,000 men in all, will be picked up. Then the route to the fair grounds will be resumed. Entering at Fifty-seventh street the procession will pass the Art building on the left and march on through the grounds, obtaining a close view of the Fisheries and Government buildings as they rear their stately piles between the possden and the lake, and can contrast them with the Woman's, Horticultural, Transportation and Machinery buildings on the other side. The president will enter the Liberal Arts building by the main entrance on the south side.

One hundred thousand people, stretching in tiers back as far almost as the eye can reach and perched in galleries one hundred feet overhead, will comprise the audience which will greet Director General Davis as he steps forward to the front of the platform to announce that the work of preparing the buildings and grounds has been completed. Upon the stage in his rear will be seated twenty-five hundred of the most distinguished men and women of the century. Every country on the globe will have its representatives on hand. There will be gathered the brains of the world anxious to see what the new-four hundred years of existence. A list of those who have signified their intention of being present and whose names are household words would fill columns of space; it would embrace the names of those renowned for great achievements the world over. Directly in front of the director general, as he makes the opening address, and extending part way across the hall, are the seven hundred and fifty seats of the press representatives. The ablest journalists and best descriptive writers in the United States will fill these. Back of this will be the distinguished guests for whom room cannot be found on the stage. These will number about five thousand. But the most impressive sight will be the vast throng of people whose places are back of the reporters and distinguished guests. Here will be seated those who receive the ordinary invitations to the ceremony. They will muster one hundred thousand strong; no speaker ever had an audience like this.

As Col. Davis takes his seat a short, florid-faced young man, with close cropped, bristling mustache, will step forward and tender the freedom of the city to its distinguished guest. The short young man is Mayor Washburne, whose distinguished ancestry and own action in municipal affairs have made him the mark for far more than local criticism. Then President Higginbotham, for the local directors, will turn over the work to President Palmer of the national commission, and the latter will announce to President Harrison that everything has been done in accordance with the acts of congress creating the fair. President Harrison will in turn accept the buildings, in the name of the United States, and formally dedicate them to the use of the World's Columbian exposition.

FORESTRY.

There will be two set orations, one by W. C. P. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, and the other by Chauncey M. Depew, of New York. Mr. Breckinridge's action in congress, where he worked and voted against legislation favorable to the fair, has subjected him to a great deal of adverse criticism, and considerable pressure was brought to bear upon the officials to induce them to withdraw this invitation to the eloquent Kentuckian. However, being gentlemen rather than politicians, they paid no attention to the popular clamor and will receive the oratory with courtesy and warmth. Mr. Breckenridge will speak of the scope of the exposition and the moral and educational effect upon the world. He will be followed by Chauncey M. Depew, who is down on the programme for the "Columbian Oration." This is expected to be the effort of Mr. Depew's life, and an address full of patriotic fervor is expected to fall from his lips. Some time during the exercises a portion of the dedicatory ode written by Mrs. Harriet Monroe, a Chicago woman, will be read. The benediction will be pronounced by Cardinal Gibbons, Bishop Fowler, of California, making the opening prayer. Of course, there will be music in abundance, a chorus of five thousand voices being now in rehearsal under the direction of Prof. Tomlins. The dedicatory ceremonies will close in the evening, when the world's congress auxiliaries will hold a meeting in the Auditorium, at which Archbishop Ireland will deliver the principal address.

Perhaps the most striking feature of the affair, from one point of view, is the fact that the directors have given to Charles A. Dana his choice of the whole ten thousand seats. After following the Scriptural advice so closely it is thought the dedication cannot be a failure.

Silk Petticoats.

There are some new designs in silk petticoats. A soft black silk is now recommended instead of glace. Most of the new petticoats are gored in the back and tied with ribbons half way down the back. Gray silk petticoats are trimmed with flounces of canary-colored silk. Beautiful white silk petticoats are trimmed with pink cut flounces veiled with black lace and headed by ruching of black silk. Among a host of beautiful trimmings are some embroideries, with lace stitches placed on silk over colors. Charming underpetticoats are made of soft washing silks in cream colors made up over cashmere and trimmed with lace and "baby" ribbons.—Once a Week.

Origin of a Popular Saying.

According to the historian Hume the prince of Orange, afterward king of England, is responsible for the proverbial expression about "dying in the last ditch." When Holland was so beleaguered by her enemies that the salvation of the country from annihilation seemed impossible the duke of Buckingham remonstrated with William on his course and asked him to change it, alleging that the country was on the verge of ruin. "There is one means," the prince answered, "by which I can be sure not to see my country's ruin.

Columbian Exposition Buildings Presented to the Nation.

A Summary of the Addresses Made by T. F. Palmer, Vice President Morton, Henry Watterson and Chauncey M. Depew.

THEY ARE DEDICATED.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—The empty structures of the World's Columbian exposition were yesterday dedicated to the purposes for which they have been designed. The exercises took place in the Manufactures building, where seats had been provided for the floor for 100,000 participants. Every chair had its occupant and an immense crowd, variously estimated at from 10,000 to 15,000, was fain to be content with standing room.

In his address of welcome Mayor Washburne acknowledged the honor shown the city of Chicago in her choice as the world's fair city, and announced that "she accepts the sacred trust with rivalry towards none and fellowship for all. She stands ready to fulfill the pledges she has made."

In presenting the buildings to the vice president of the United States for dedication, President T. F. Palmer, of the World's Columbian exposition, said in part:

"It was a happy thought to have linked with the achievements of Columbus and Pinzon, which doubled the area of the habitable globe, an undertaking whereby we hope to illustrate the fact that they also made possible more than a duplication of blessings to mankind. As these great men died ignorant of the magnitude of their work, may we not hope that this exposition will accomplish a greater good than will be revealed to us of to-day, be its outcome never so brilliant? May we not hope that lessons here learned, transmitted to the future, will be potent forces long after the multitudes which will throng these aisles shall have measured their span and faded away?

"There are no more continents to discover, but there is much to do to make both hemispheres the home of intelligence, virtue and consequent happiness. To that end no one material thing can contribute more than expositions to which are invited, in a fraternal spirit, all nations, tribes and peoples, where each shall give and receive according to their respective capacities. The foundations of civilization have been laid. Universal enlightenment, now acknowledged as the safe substructure of every state, receives an added impulse from the commingling of peoples and the fraternization of races, such as are ushered in by the pageant of to-day."

THE VICE PRESIDENT.

In accepting and dedicating the buildings Vice President Morton said, among other things:

"Deep, indeed, must be the sorrow which prohibits the president of the United States from being the central figure in these ceremonials." Realizing from these sumptuous surroundings, the extent of design, the adequacy of execution and the vastness of results, we may imagine how ardently he has aspired to be officially and personally connected with this great work, so linked to the past and to the present of America. With what eloquent words he would have spoken of the heroic achievements and radiant future of his beloved country. While profoundly anguished in his most tender earthly affection, he would not have us delay or falter in these dedicatory services, and we can only offer to support his courage by a profound and universal sympathy.

"I am not here to recount the wonderful story of this city's rise and advancement, of the matchless courage of her people, of her second birth out of the ashes of the most notable conflagration of modern times, nor of the eminent position she has conquered in manufactures, in science and in the arts. These are known of all men who keep pace with the world's progress. I am here in behalf of the government of the United States, in behalf of all the people to bid all hail to Chicago, all hail to the Columbian exposition. From the St. Lawrence to the gulf, and from the peerless cosmopolitan capital by the sea to the Golden Gate of California, there is no longer a rival city to Chicago, except to emulate her in promoting the success of this work.

"What a spectacle is presented to us here. As we gaze upon these munificent erections, with their columns and arches, their entablatures and adornments, when we consider their beauty and rapidity of realization, they would seem to be evoked at a wizard's touch of Aladdin's lamp. Praise for the organization and accomplishment for the architect and builder, for the artist and artisan, may not now detain me, for in the year to come, in the mouths of all men it will be instituted. These are worthy shrines to record the achievements of the two Americas, and to place them side by side with the arts and industries of the elder world, to the end that we may be stimulated and encouraged to new endeavors."

"Mr. President, in the name of the government of the United States, I hereby dedicate these buildings and their appurtenances, intended by the Congress of the United States for the use of the World's Columbian Exposition, to the world's progress in art, in science, in agriculture, and in manufactures. I dedicate them to humanity. God save the United States of America.

HENRY WATTERSON.

The dedicatory oration was delivered by Hon. Henry Watterson, of Kentucky. Mr. Watterson indulged in a glowing tribute to the United States and the many trials through which the country had successfully passed.

With reference to the abolition of slavery he said, in part:

"The curse of slavery is gone. It was a joint heritage of woe, to be wiped out and expiated in blood and flame. The mirage of the confederacy has vanished. It was essentially bucolic, a vision of Arcadia, the dream of a most attractive economic fallacy. The constitution is no longer a rope of sand. The exact relations of the states to the federal government, left open to double construction by the authors of our organic being because they could not agree among themselves and union was the paramount object, has been clearly and definitely fixed by the last three amendments to the original chart, which constitute the real treaty of peace between the north for better than these we have nothing to exhibit. They, indeed, are our crown jewels; the truest, though the inevitable, offsprings of our civilization and development; the representatives of a manhood vitalized and invigorated by toil and care, of a womanhood elevated and inspired by liberty and education. God bless the children and their mothers! God bless our country's flag! And God be with us now and ever, God in the roof-tree's shade and God on the highway, God in the winds and waves, and God in all our hearts."

MR. DEPEW'S ORATION.

The following are extracts taken from the Columbian oration delivered by Chauncey M. Depew:

"This day belongs not to America, but to the world. The results of the event it commemorates are the heritage of the peoples of every race and clime. We celebrate the emancipation of man. The preparation was the work of almost countless centuries, the realization was the revelation of one. The Cross on Calvary was hope; the cross raised on San Salvador was opportunity. But for the first, Columbus would never have sailed, but for the second, there would have been no place for the planting, the nurture and the expansion of civil and religious liberty.

"The spirit of the equality of all men before God and the law, moved westward from Calvary with its revolutionary influence upon old institutions, to the Atlantic ocean. Columbus carried it westward across the seas. The emigrants from England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, from Germany and Holland, from Sweden and Denmark, from France and Italy, have, under its guidance and inspiration, moved west and again west, building states and founding cities until the Pacific limited their march. The exhibition of arts and sciences, of industries and inventions, of education and civilization, which the republic of the United States will here present, and to which, through its chief magistrate, it invites all nations, condenses and displays the flower and fruitage of this transcendent miracle.

"God always has in training some commanding genius for the control of great crises in the affairs of nations and peoples. The number of these leaders are less than the centuries, but their lives are the history of human progress. Though Cæsar and Charlemagne, and Hildebrand, and Luther, and William the Conqueror, and Oliver Cromwell, and all the epoch makers prepared Europe for the event and contributed to the result, the lights which illumine our firmament to-day are Columbus the discoverer, Washington the founder and Lincoln the savior."

Mr. Depew then depicted in glowing words the tenacity with which Columbus clung to his belief in the existence of a new world, and gradually evolved a theory, which became in his mind so fixed a fact that he could inspire others with his own passionate beliefs.

"To secure the means to test the truth of his speculations, this poor and unknown dreamer must win the support of kings and overcome the hostility of the church. He never doubted his ability to do both, though he knew of no man living who was so great in power or lineage, or learning that he could accomplish either. Unaided and alone he succeeded in arousing the jealousies of sovereigns and dividing the councils of the ecclesiastics. To conquer the prejudices of the clergy, to win the approval and financial support of the state, to venture upon that unknown ocean, which, according to the beliefs of the age, was peopled with demons and savage beasts of frightful shape, and from which there was no possibility of return, required the zeal of Peter the Hermit, the chivalric courage of the Cid, and the imagination of Dante. Columbus belonged to that high order of cranks, who confidently walk where 'angels fear to tread,' and often become the benefactors of their country, or their kind.

"It was a happy omen of the position which woman was to hold in America that the only person who comprehended the majestic scope of [illegible] genius was the able and gracious queen of Castile. Isabella alone, of all the dignitaries of that age, shares with Columbus the honors of his great achievement. She arrayed her kingdom and her private fortune behind the enthusiasm of this mystic mariner, and posterity pays homage to her wisdom and faith.

"The overthrow of the Mohammedan power in Spain would have been a forgotten scene, in one of the innumerable acts in the grand drama of history, had not Isabella conferred immortality upon herself, her husband and their dual crown by her recognition of Columbus. The devout spirit of the queen, and the high purpose of the explorer, inspired the voyage, subdued the mutinous crew and prevailed over the raging storms.

"The mighty soul of the great admiral was undaunted by the pusillanimity of princes, and the hostility of the people, by imprisonment and neglect. He died as he was securing the means, and preparing a campaign, for the rescue of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem from the infidel. He did not know what time has revealed, that while the mission of the crusaders of Godfrey of Boullion and Richard of the Lion Heart was a bloody and fruitless romance, the discovery of America was the salvation of the world. The one was the symbol, the other the spirit; the one death, the other life. The tomb of the Saviour was a narrow and empty vault, precious only for its memories of the supreme tragedy of the centuries; but the new continent was to be the home and temple of the living God."

At great length the orator then pictured the growth of civilization, liberty and prosperity in the new world, and as is to be represented at the great exposition whose buildings were this day being dedicated, and continued:

"The time has arrived for both a closer union and greater distance between the Old World and the New. The former indiscriminate welcome to our prairies, and the present invitation to these palaces of art and industry, mark the passing period. Unwatched and unhealthy immigration can no longer be permitted to our shores. We must have a national quarantine against disease, pauperism and crime. We do not want candidates for our hospitals, our poor houses or our jails. We cannot admit those who come to undermine our institutions and subvert our laws. But we will gladly throw wide our gates for, and receive with open arms, those who by intelligence and virtue, by thrift and loyalty, are worthy of receiving the equal advantages of the priceless gift of American citizenship. The spirit and object of this exhibition are peace and kinship.

"Three millions of Germans, who are among the best citizens of the republic, send greeting to the fatherland, their pride in its glorious history, its ripe literature, its traditions and associations. Irish, equal in number to those who still remain upon the Emerald Isle, who have illustrated their devotion to their adopted country on many a battlefield fighting for the union and its perpetuity, have rather intensified than diminished their love for the land of the shamrock, and their sympathy with the aspirations of their brethren at home. The Italian, the Spaniard and the Frenchman, the Norwegian, the Swede and the Dane, the English, the Scotch and the Welsh are none the less loyal and devoted Americans, because in this congress of their kin the tendrils of affection draw them closer to the hills and valleys, the legends and the loves associated with their youth.

"If interest in the affairs of this world are vouchsafed to those who have gone before, the spirit of Columbus hovers over us to-day. Only by celestial intelligence can it grasp the full significance of this spectacle and ceremonial.

"From the first century to the fifteenth counts for little in the history of progress, but in the period between the fifteenth and twentieth is crowded the romance and reality of human development. Life has been prolonged, and its enjoyment intensified. The powers of the air and water, the resistless forces of the elements, which in the time of the discoverer were the visible terrors of the wrath of God, have been subdued to the service of man. Art and luxuries which could be possessed and enjoyed only by the rich and noble, the works of genius which were read and understood by the learned few, domestic comforts and surroundings beyond the reach of lord or bishop, now adorn and illumine the homes of our citizens. Serfs are sovereigns and the people are kings. The trophies and splendors of their reign are commonwealths, rich in every attribute of great states, and united in a republic whose power and prosperity and liberty and enlightenment are the wonder and admiration of the world.

"All hail, Columbus, discoverer, dreamer, hero and apostle. We here, of every race and country, recognize the horizon which bounded his vision and the infinite scope of his genius. The voice of gratitude and praise for all the blessings which have been showered upon mankind by his adventure is limited to no language, but is uttered in every tongue. Neither marble nor brass can fitly form his statue. Continents are his monuments, and unnumbered millions, past, present, and to come, who enjoy in their liberties and their happiness the fruits of his faith, will reverently guard and preserve, from century to century, his name and fame."

THE MULTITUDE DEPARTS.

It was nearly dark when the programme of exercises had been concluded, and the immense crowd, which had been gradually thinning out, at once wended its way home.

In the evening grand displays of fireworks were made on the South, North and West sides.

A Victim of Heart Disease.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—George Howland, for more than thirty years connected with the city public schools—for twelve years as superintendent—and one of Chicago's best-known citizens, died of heart disease at his home, 735 West Monroe street, on Saturday night at 11 o'clock.

Seven Drowned.

MARSHALL, Tex., Oct. 24.—Seven negroes were drowned while crossing Elliott's ferry, 12 miles south of here, Friday. The rope broke in midstream and all were thrown into the river, only one person being saved. The bodies have not been recovered.

Crossed the Dark River.

PARIS, Ill., Oct. 22.—Dennis F. Hanks, the early tutor and life-long friend of the martyred president, Abraham Lincoln, died at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Nancy Shoaff, in this city, aged 93 years 5 months and 6 days.

Jumped Into the Cistern.

LAWRENCE, Kan., Oct. 24.—Nelson Johnson, a well-known citizen of this city, arose from his bed and committed suicide by throwing himself into his cistern. He had been confined to his bed since July. He was the owner of considerable property.

Will Keep His Seat.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 24.—Senator Stanford says he has reconsidered his determination to resign from the United States senate. His health, he says, has greatly improved, and he desires to remain in the senate to push his land loan bill.

Dropped Dead After a Race.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—During the bicycle meet yesterday at Point Breeze track of the South End wheelmen William H. Marrott, aged 56 years, dropped dead from heart disease ten minutes after finishing a race.

Short on Seals.

TORONTO, Ont., Oct. 22.—It is estimated that the total catch of the Canadian sealers this year will reach about 45,000 skins, which, as compared with the catch of last year, shows a falling off of 15 per cent.

Twelve Persons Killed.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 22.—During a fire-works exhibition last night a six-inch gas pipe loaded with gunpowder exploded, killing twelve people and wounding many others.

Two Children Perish in a Fire.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 22.—The house of Michael Hansas, a mail-carrier at Manannah, Minn., was burned yesterday and two of his children perished.

CARLETON, Mich., Aug. 25, 1890.

To whom it may concern: "After an acquaintance with Dr. O. J. Fay extending over a period of eighteen years, I can cheerfully testify to his sincerity of purpose, integrity and high social and professional standing in this, the county of his residence. Having used the New Treatment for Consumption in my family for coughs and colds, I find that it possesses more real merit than any other medicines we have used for these complaints, and heartily recommend its use as a family medicine.

Dasher: Has the major portion of the procession gone by. Jogson: Yes, but the Generals and the biggest half of the fellows that are marchin' are comin now.

Lady: Where is my trunk? Baggageman: I couldn't find any trunk, mum, but I've got the handle with the check on.

PHYSICIANS CALLED IT CONSUMPTION.

Bristol Center, Ont. Co., N. Y., June 24th, 1892.

I sold Hamilton's Cough Balsam to John Worden for his daughter Delia, who was suffering from a severe lung disease following after a serious attack of typhoid pneumonia, four years ago in May. Physicians said she had Consumption and everything indicated they were not far from right. She came to my store resting upon pillows and could not sit up, with a bad cough and apparently not long to live. I persuaded her to take a sample bottle of Hamilton's Balsam. She took it and two regular sized bottles, and picked hops the next September, seemingly in good health and has been well and healthy since then.

Yours truly, E. W Burge Druggist.

Hamilton's Cough Balsam is sold by your druggist. Large bottles 25 cents. Extra large bottles 50 cents.

DO HORSES THINK?

If they do, they certainly think Parmelee's Condition Powders are the best medicine they get. Full pound 25 cts. Red wrappers.

TO ESCAPE THE CHOLERA.

Don't get scared. Keep clean in person and surroundings. Keep the system generally in vigorous tone Keep the secretions active. See to it that the stomach and bowels are in good condition. Especially have the liver, that great cleanser of the system, active and vigorous. If these points are carefully attended to there is little chance for disease germs to find lodgement in the system. These conditions are not difficult to produce. One of the simplest and best aids toward all this is Parmelee's Mandrake and Dandelion Bitters. Their action upon the stomach, liver and bowels, is such as to correct any irregularity or derangement and put them in normal, active condition. Only 25 cents a bottle at druggists.

GOOD FOR MAN! GOOD FOR BEAST!

Parmelee's Universal Liniment for all Bone, Flesh and Muscle Diseases. It is guaranteed to give relief. The best Liniment made. Sold by dealers.

Regular features of every "wash day" are clothes torn, twisted and rubbed out of shape; and an aching back. You can't have any of these if you use Pearline. It cleans the house or hands, as well as it washes clothes. It injures nothing except dirt. Your heart will be heavy 'till you get it; your labor will be light when you have it.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing—send it back. 223 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.

CURE
Sick Headache and relieve all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

SICK
Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD
Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head is the bane of so many lives that here is where we make our great boast. Our pills cure it while others do not.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are very small and very easy to take. One or two pills make a dose. They are strictly vegetable and do not gripe or purge, but by their gentle action please all who use them. In vials at 25 cents; five for $1. Sold by druggists everywhere, or sent by mail.

CARTER MEDICINE CO., New York.
SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE.

RECOVERS HIS SPEECH.

Alphonce Hempbling, of Summitt township, Butler Co., Penn'a made an affidavit that his twelve-year-old son, who had St. Vitus Dance for twelve years, lost his speech, was completely cured after using three bottles of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and recovered his speech. Thousands testify to wonderful cures from using it for nervous diseases, dyspepsia, nervous debility, dullness, confusion of mind, headache, etc. Four doses of this Nervine cured Mrs. W. E. Burns, South Bend, Ind. who had been suffering with constant headache for three months. Sold by Baker & Hall.

Lane's Family Medicine moves the bowels each day. Most people need to use it.

The little Democrats of Clinton, ranging from 8 to 15 years of age, went to the woods last Saturday, cut a 70-foot hickory pole, brought it in and with the assistance of a few of the older ones raised it on the corner opposite the Lancaster House. A Cleveland banner floats proudly to the breeze.

The friends of Miss Maude Lapham, of Iron Creek, were greatly shocked at hearing of her death, which occurred last Friday. She had been in poor health for some time and it was known that she had serious lung trouble, but her death was not looked for so soon. The funeral was held Monday. Miss Lapham was a bright, lovable girl and during her residence here a few years ago won many friends. Mrs. Lapham has been sorely afflicted during the last year by the death of her husband and daughter and loss of property. She has the sympathy of all.

Hon. James S. Gorman addressed the people of Clinton last Saturday evening. The town hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, many being obliged to go away, as there was not even standing room. Mr. Gorman said it was but a fair sample of audiences which he met everywhere, showing the deep interest that people are taking in the questions of the day. After complimenting the little boys on the exhibition of patriotism and loyalty which they had made that day, he commenced one of the most practical and comprehensive arguments for tariff reform that we have ever heard here, only closing when warned that the train he was obliged to take was due.

—Although large numbers have enrolled for the new term of the Fayette Normal University yet the accommodations are still ample. RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Mary Nelson and May Jones visited friends in Dundee Saturday.

Undertaker S. P. Smith was in Detroit on business last Thursday.

W. P. Clack made a business call in Toledo last week Thursday.

W. P. Cadmus, of Harvey, is spending the present time with friends here.

B. F. DePuy, wife and daughter returned from their eastern trip last week.

Prof. Richardson, of Blissfield, was the guest of Elder Yager over the Sabbath.

Lulu Rappleye closed the fall term of school in the Easlick district, Macon, Friday.

Fred Barrett, having secured work at the Clinton woolen mill, left for his work Saturday.

F. E. Pocklington is home from Chicago, being called here by the severe illness of his son.

Mrs. W. H. Arner spent a portion of the week with her brother, Israel Schreder, near Clinton.

Miss Florence Mize, of Tecumseh, was the guest of Leila Sutton from Thursday until Saturday.

Elmer Pocklington, who was very sick the past week, with but little hope of recovery, is improving.

George Wilber, of Ypsilanti, visited his nephews, F. E. and James Pocklington, the first of the week.

The long-looked-for and much needed rain at last put in an appearance, which makes wheat and grass look fresh.

James Reynolds and daughter Anna, of La Salle, visited his daughter, Mrs. F. J. Temple, last week several days.

Mrs. Jacob Arner returned Thursday from a visit with her son and wife at Walton, leaving her daughter improved in health.

Mrs. Mary Arner, who has been spending several months at Petoskey with her son, S. A. Arner, returned home Thursday.

One would think, by the signs of the times, that our entire orange grove would burst forth in full bloom before the season of flowers again.

Hiram Raymond and wife, who have been spending several weeks with his sister, Mrs. Hall, left for their home at Dixon the first of the week.

Those who went to Britton Tuesday night to hear Hon. H. Martin Williams, of Missouri, on tariff taxation, speak of him in the highest of terms.

There was a good attendance at Cottage Hall Friday evening to hear V. K. VanDeVenter speak on political issues from a Prohibition standpoint.

It is expected that the pulpit will be occupied Sunday morning and evening by Reverend gentlemen from the Christian Conference now in session at Britton.

Several of the ladies of the W. C. T. U. enjoyed a very pleasant afternoon at the home of Mrs. Jehiel Davidson in Tecumseh, on Friday, with ladies of the Union at that place.

Mr. and Mrs. Fenner Palmer and granddaughters, Maggie and Emma Cheever, have left for an indefinite stay with Mrs. Palmer's brother, Elisha Gifford, of Dallas, Texas.

From twelve rows, fourteen rods long, of Amber sugar cane, D. W. Smith had 55 gallons of molasses of superior quality, the work of the Gripton brothers, whose facilities for the work are first-class in every respect.

W. F. Clack, having sold his mercantile business to A. J. Sutton and J. D. Arner, will be pleased to have those indebted to him call at his former place of business and settle up. The new firm will endeavor to carry a full line of fresh groceries and an assortment of dry goods, etc., and desire their neighbors and friends to give them a call.

Delegates throughout the county to the W. C. T. U. county convention to be held here Nov. 15-16-17 will arrive here from the west on the C. J. & M. at 9:02 a. m. and 3:23 p. m. Delegates over the Wabash will make connection at Britton with the C. J. & M. west bound trains, arriving here at 8:35 a. m. A committee from the Union will meet the delegates at the trains. Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop, Michigan's talented lady orator, will address the convention on the evening of Nov. 17th.

The November Magazine of American History will be greatly prized as a souvenir of New York's monster celebration of the discovery of America by Columbus. The graphic account is from the editor's own pen, and it touches forcibly upon all the principal features of the five days' jubilee, while brilliant illustrations are very cleverly and effectively presented. Mrs. Lamb says, "The great commercial capital stands in its glory-to-day a living, bustling, instructive monument to the honor of the pioneer of modern civilization;" and in pertinent connection with the bold scheme of Columbus to find the land of riches for Spain, a contrasting picture is given of a vault in New York City containing $72,000,000 in gold, with the title, "They dreamed of wealth, and here it is beyond imagination's furthest limit." The first two days of the celebration were appropriately devoted to religious exercises, and the three following to civic, military, and naval processions, banquets and orations, all of which are admirably pictured with pen and camera for future reference.

BRITTON BUDGET.

Many have completed their jobs on the big drain.

E. W. Lenardson and wife visited at Milan last Sunday.

Some talk of a flour and feed store to open up here in the near future.

W. P. Cadmus, of Harvey, was in town last Tuesday and Wednesday.

The Christian Conference is in session this week at the Christian Church.

We congratulate Rev. F. G. Strickland on the arrival of a little son last week.

Henry Miller sings the song, "I'm the daddy of a little fat poy.' A cigar, please.

E. W. Osgood will close his cider mill this week. He has a few barrels of A No. 1 juice which he wishes to dispose of.

On account of the stormy night the Democratic turnout to hear Williams last Tuesday evening was not very large.

The young people took our friend, Ernest Dubois, by surprise last Tuesday evening. Although a stormy night many were present and enjoyed a very pleasant time.

Mrs. P. B. Hardy arrived here from Eagle Village, N. Y., last Thursday evening. The Doctor has rented the Hendershot residence and will go to housekeeping.

Senator Morrow was present at the Williams speech last Tuesday and delivered a few telling remarks—on the insane hospital and other reformatory institutions for weak-minded voters.

The lamp drawing at Lenardson's will take place Friday evening, Nov. 25th, at 8 o'clock. Spend all the money you can with them before then, that you may have a better chance. A six, five, two and three and one-half dollar lamp will be given away.

Jim Barlow escorted one of our townsmen home last Saturday night. We don't know whether there was a convention up town or not, but our comrade was chock-full of politics or suthin', or in a trance. Perhaps he might have been betting pretty heavily on election. Anyhow, he kept rather uncommonly quiet for a man of his calibre. Maybe a forewarning from the Maccabee goat has reached him.

MACON MUSIC.

Born on Sunday, Oct. 23, to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Avery a son.

Mrs. Luther Britton and son Bertie, of Jackson, are visiting relatives in Macon.

Misses Hattie and May Osgood left on Friday for a two weeks visit at St. Johns, Mich.

Miss Lucy Hopper, of Iowa, is visiting her old schoolmate, Mrs. Isaiah Hendershot.

Mrs. Ed Harrison, of Ridgeway, spent several days of last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ace Smith.

Mrs. Fred Beland died very suddenly of heart disease on Saturday afternoon, at her home in South Macon.

Mrs. James Hatch and Miss Lizzie Ellison spent Saturday and Sunday with Joseph Collins and family of Raisin.

David Lewis drew out a fine house on Thursday evening of last week. A number were heard to say it was the best speech of the season.

The W. C. T. U., will hold their monthly tea meeting at the home of Mrs. Isaac Smith on Friday afternoon of this week, Nov. 4. Remember the date.

The Prohibition club meeting at Mr. Osgood's was well attended. These meetings have become an interesting feature in the society of Macon, increasing in attendance. The next one is appointed at the Rev. Mr. Gulick's in four weeks.

On Thursday afternoon of last week several ladies met at the home of Mrs. Ann Hendershot to celebrate the 82d birthday of aunt Hannah Pennington, who left on Tuesday of this week for Missouri, where she will spend the winter with her daughter Mrs. Joel Booth.

MOTHER'S FRIEND is the greatest blessing ever offered child-bearing women. I have been a midwife many years, and in each case where Mother's Friend has been used, it has accomplished wonders and relieved much suffering. Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

W. C. T. U., Convention.

The 15th Annual Convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, of Lenawee county, will be held at Ridgeway the 15th, 16th, and 17th of Nov., commencing at 4 p. m., Tuesday. Send names of all delegates to chairman of entertainment committee, Mrs. S. L. Rappleye, Ridgeway. A full program has been prepared. Papers on the questions of the hour followed by discussions will be one of the interesting features of the convention. Come early and stay to the close.

WORLD'S FAIR SOUVENIRS.

How you can get one of the Columbian Half Dollars.

The World's Fair souvenir coins are "going like hot cakes," and those who want to get one or more of them will have to bestir themselves or they will be too late. The desire for one of these mementos of the Exposition seems to be almost as universal as is the interest in the Exposition itself, and orders for them have been sent in from all parts of the United States and also from foreign countries.

This souvenir half dollar, it is reported from Washington, will be the most artistic coin ever issued from the mint. On the obverse side will appear the head of Columbus, designed from the Lotto portrait, and surrounding it the words, "World's Columbian Exposition Chicago, 1892." On the reverse side will appear a caravel, representing Columbus' flag-ship, and beneath it two hemispheres. Above the caravel will be "United States of America," and beneath the hemispheres, "Columbian Half Dollar." There is no doubt that this coin will be regarded as the most distinctive and highest prized cheap souvenir of the World's Fair.

All of these souvenir coins, except five, are being sold at a uniform price of one dollar each. For the first coin struck off $10,000 has already been offered, and various prices have been bid for the 400th, 1492d, 1892d and the last coin. Desiring that these souvenirs be distributed as widely as possible among the people, and that all, irrespective of locality, have an equal chance to obtain them, the Exposition authorities have sought to prevent syndicates and others from purchasing large quantities and thus "cornering" the sale. On the contrary, they have arranged to supply banks, business houses and individuals in all parts of the country with as many as they may desire to distribute among their patrons, customers or friends. They require only that the orders must be for fifty coins, or some multiple of fifty, and that the order be accompanied by the cash, at the rate of one dollar for each coin. A great many banks and business firms have gladly complied with these conditions and ordered each from 50 to 20,000 of the coins.

Notwithstanding these conditions have been widely published, still a vast number of inquiries by letter has been received at Exposition headquarters asking how the coins may be obtained. The best way is to get them through local banks, all of which are no doubt willing to accommodate in that way their patrons and the residents of the city or town in which they are doing business. If, however, for any reason it is desired to obtain them otherwise, the proper method is to form a club of subscribers for fifty coins', or some multiple of fifty, and select some one member of the club to send on the order and money and to distribute the coins when received. Orders should be addressed to A. F. Seeberger, Treasurer World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago.

It is probable that the coins will not be ready for distribution until some time in December. But the orders are being sent in rapidly, and will be filled in the order of being received. Therefore it is important that all who desire coins should put in their orders as soon as possible.

Farmers' Mutual Ins. Co.

The 31st annual meeting of the Lenawee County Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company was held in Dean's Opera House, Adrian, on Monday last, and was called to order by President Judson, at 3:30 o'clock standard. By direction of the board of directors the election of president for the ensuing two years was proceeded with by ballot. A. L. VanAuken and H. E. Yarick of Ridge, and J. E. Jacklin of Palmyra, were appointed tellers. The candidates for the presidency were the present incumbent, J. M. Judson, and Z. Cook and S. M. Hamilton. The interest manifested was shown by the fact that over 500 votes were cast in the forenoon. After an hour's recess the voting began again with undiminished interest. While the voting was going on the directors, five in number, were chosen by the five districts which are divided into separate sections for the purpose. The following persons were elected for their respective districts:

1st District, M. E. Farmer.
2nd " Ezra Bertram.
3rd " Rufus Baker.
4th " R. H. Hill.
5th " Dale Munson.

The report of the board of directors showed 133 losses, being the most disastrous year in the company's history. $23,184.94 insurance was paid. 195 new members were added during the year.

Over $17,000 loss was caused by lightning.

The secretary then read his annual report.

Whole number of losses, 133. Total losses, $23,184.94.

The rate of assessment for the year is $2.26 on each $1,000.

The treasurer made his report, which was adopted. The secretary called for the vote by saying, "those in favor will give the usual sign of the order," which was received with shouts of laughter.

The contest for president and treasurer was very close. A strong following was well satisfied that the management of Z. Cook for so many years was the best ever known and better than the past year. As a result a warm contest was made in his behalf and it was a close shave for Judson, who was re-elected with a plurality of but 3 votes, the ballot standing: Judson, 302; Cook, 299; Hamilton 185.

George R. Cochran, who has made a very efficient officer, was re-elected secretary.

Short Tariff Chats—Who Pays?

Who pay tariff taxes? Governor McKinley and Importer Blackenburg say that the foreign producers pay them.

Merchant Blackenburg adds tariff taxes with other expenses and his profits to the foreign cost of every article he imports; the American retailer thus pays it and adds his expenses and profits, and then the consumer pays the whole bill. Who pays these tariff taxes?

Ask the hundreds of thousands of cigar smokers in this city who pay tariff taxes, and they will answer with emphasis. They pay tariff taxes and they know it.

Ask the Philadelphia tobacco workers who pay tariff taxes, and they will answer in unmistakable terms. They will say that the increased tariff taxes on tobacco have increased the cost largely to consumers, and especially depressed the American tobacco workers and diminished their wages. They don't theorize; they know the facts.

Ask the thousands of tin workers in this city who pay tariff taxes, and there will come a shout from every shop and from every house roof where American consumers and American workmen pay them. They don't theorize on the subject; they pay the taxes and they know it.

Ask the women who go shopping for the commonly worn articles of women's dress, who pay tariff taxes, and they will declare as with one voice that they pay them because they know it. On some of most unused articles of women's wear the McKinley tariff scored up tariff taxes to from 100 to 175 per cent., while the more costly luxuries in dress were but little changed if any. They don't speculate on the subject; they pay the taxes and they know it.—Philadelphia Times.

JUDGE COOLEY'S POSITION.

The Detroit Free Press gives what is without doubt an accurate and very probably an authentic statement of the attitude of Hon. Thomas M. Cooley, an eminent jurist, toward the two parties and candidates involved in the pending campaign. Judge Cooley holds, in common with Judge Gresham, that it would be a transgression of the bounds of propriety for a Federal Judge to take an active part in a political campaign, except under conditions which proved great and imminent danger to the country, but as Judge Cooley is not now on the Bench he would [illegible] from participation on this score. The condition of the country, however, is such as to preclude any doubt of any kind and it is not expected that he will write a letter defining his position. There is no doubt, however, as to what his position is. The Free Press says:

It can be stated, in the most positive and unequivocal terms, that Judge Cooley is able to go to the polls and will vote for Grover Cleveland. Like many other distinguished Republicans he has always been opposed to the policy of using the power of taxation for the benefit of individuals, a policy which has been carried to the extreme in the McKinley bill. His views on this great question are clearly and fully expressed in his published works, than which there are no higher authorities on the subjects considered. Judge Cooley believed in a tariff for revenue only long before he was a Republican, and, although he was never much of a politician, it was a source of no small concern to him to see the party to which he was so long attached drift further and further away from the true principle, as he regarded it.

The centralizing measures of the Republican party, especially the force bill, have not been looked upon with favor by Judge Cooley, and he finds himself in close accord with the views of ex-President Cleveland on all the great questions of the day.

Moved by a high sense of duty Judge Cooley will, therefore, vote for the election of Grover Cleveland as President of the United States.

There can be no doubt that Judge Cooley's feeling is shared by a large number of the more thoughtful Republicans in the Northwest, and there is equally little doubt that his example will be extensively followed. The number of these men who will do what Judge Gresham and Judge Cooley have determined to do cannot be measured by the number of those who make public proclamation of their intentions. They will content themselves with a vest pocket vote, and indications are not wanting that the vest pocket vote, in conjunction with the stay-at-home vote will be the determining factor in one of the greatest political revolutions in the history of American politics.—St. Republic.

HAVE TAKEN SEVERAL.

Five bottles of Dullam's Great German Remedies.—GENTLEMEN: I have for the past two years been troubled with serious and very severe liver and stomach difficulty. Have had advice and medicine from our very best physicians, and only to be temporarily relieved. Some of my friends persuaded me to try your Great German Remedy for the Blood, Stomach and Kidneys, and to my surprise after using three bottles, I feel like a new man. If you desire you can use my name in print or by reference in any of the Grand Rapids Michigan papers, or any other papers in the States, to convince the afflicted that it is the best blood, liver and kidney medicine on earth. I feel like a new man. I have lived here over 40 years.

THE APPOINTMENT OF ELECTORS.

The Supreme Court has once more been called on to decide that the Constitution of the United States is constitutional; that it means just what it says and not something else that somebody thinks it ought to say. The only surprising feature of the decision upholding the Michigan electoral law is that there could exist so much ignorance of the Constitution or such wilful partizan blindness as to make a decision necessary upon a point so clear and indisputable.

In the convention that framed the Constitution of the United States there was a long debate on the best way of electing the President and when the system of electors was decided upon, it was then a question how the electors were to be appointed. It was finally decided to leave this to the several States, and the Constitution accordingly provides that "each State shall appoint, in such manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in Congress." Nothing could be plainer than this.

In some States the Legislature itself appointed the electors. This was the case in South Carolina down to 1868 and the electors of Colorado were appointed in this way in 1876. But in a majority of the states the electors were chosen by districts, in the same manner as members of Congress. This was the general custom in the lifetime of the men who framed the Constitution, and it was maintained in many of the States until a comparatively recent period. Gradually, as party power increased, the custom prevailed of choosing the electors on a general ticket, but no one ever questioned or could question the power of the Legislature in any State to adopt another method.

No matter what the immediate partisan object, the return by the Legislature of Michigan to the earlier method of choosing electors by Congressional districts has been recognized by thoughtful persons as a step toward a much needed reform. It brings the actual election of the President much nearer to the people, and if generally followed it would make the electoral vote correspond more nearly with the popular vote, rendering it almost impossible for the President to be chosen by a minority. It would also do away with the mischief of "pivotal States," since the contest would be distributed over the whole country, and it would be impracticable to concentrate the "boodle" in a few districts.

The Supreme Court, however, had nothing to do with the advantages or disadvantages of the Michigan plan. It was simply called upon to say that it was within the constitutional discretion of the Michigan Legislature to direct the manner of appointing the electors for that State, and that in the MINER act, as had been already ruled by the Supreme Court of Michigan, it had not exceeded its powers. There never was any real question on this point except among the ignorant, and the spectacle of the Attorney Gen. of the United States appearing as counsel in a political suit to argue against the plain letter of the constitution is a scandal such as has not been known before and we may hope will never be repeated.—Philadelphia Times.

Mr. Cleveland's Manliness.

[illegible] at least a fair indication of the spirit of human kindness in the heart of Mr. Grover Cleveland [illegible] to be present as an honorary [illegible] at the Yale-Cornell [illegible] exhibition [illegible]. No partisan [illegible] as to believe that the latter is not sincere, no one will be so utterly [illegible] of Mr. Cleveland's honesty [illegible] say it is a mere device to attract public attention. We do not propose [illegible] to pay [illegible] or condemn [illegible] to make the assertion that we believe Mr. Cleveland entirely sincere in his courteous [illegible] and who is [illegible] the history of the [illegible] And we further believe [illegible] manliness which influenced Mr. Cleveland to [illegible] the chance to turn a [illegible] that to Chicago into a [illegible] We are well assured [illegible] a partisan press will on one side [illegible] in fulsome terms and on the other sneer or maintain silence concerning this letter, which illustrates the character of Mr. Cleveland. To heartily commend and fully appreciate the manliness of an action like that under discussion, is, therefore, a pleasing privilege of the independent press and all honest people whether partisans or not.—Columbus Dispatch.

Whispering 250 Miles.

Chicago, Oct. 19.—The telephone between New York and this city was tested yesterday afternoon, and found to work perfectly. A cornet solo played in New York was heard by a dozen full of gentlemen, in the office of the American Telephone Co., here. Mayor Grant and Mayor Washburne exchanged greetings and compliments.

A number of experiments showed the power of the line. A watch was held to the transmitter in New York and the ticking was plainly heard in this city. Words uttered in a whisper were also heard without trouble.

The system will be completed as rapidly as possible, and it is expected that [illegible] will be connected with Chicago, New York and other eastern cities with[illegible] a few weeks.

Coal Should be on the Free List.

In the recent [illegible] argument against McKinley by [illegible] Mechanic of the Pittsburgh Times, the colored [illegible] on the subject of free coal. He had consulted one of the largest [illegible] in Pennsylvania soft coal and [illegible]

[illegible] the conditions warrants an [illegible] against the idea of [illegible] that they could not [illegible] any [illegible] of tariff [illegible] coal. [illegible] to quarrel in print [illegible] he declared that the tariff tax on coal was not only an [illegible] absurdity as a matter of protection, but [illegible] unfortunately [illegible] very seriously in obtaining the markets for our bituminous coal abroad. Canada imposes a reciprocity tax on coal equal to ours, and it would be made free there any time that it is made free here, and he told me that if we had open doors to the Canadian markets, while New England might obtain 500,000 to 800,000 tons of Nova Scotia coal that would greatly benefit their industries, we would sell 3,000,000 tons of our coal in the Canadian markets. What is called protection on coal, therefore, is simply a hindrance to the enlargement of our trade and a hindrance to the enlargement of labor."

for which she found little help. She has tried many things that promised well but performed little. Last fall a friend gave her a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It seems surprising what simply one bottle could and did do for her. The attacks of headache decreased in number and were less violent in their intensity, while her general health has been improved. Her appetite has also been better. From our experience with

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I have no hesitation in endorsing its merits." A. A. WILLIAMS.

A Spectacle Without a Parallel.

A most striking thing about the three glorious October days of universal festivity which ended last night, is the fact that no such wonderful demonstration was expected. It was known that the city would be gay with bunting, that the streets would be full of people, and that drums would keep time to the steps of marching thousands; all in honor of Columbus. That the affair would turn out to be a demonstration without a parallel in the history of this town, and consequently without an equal in the experience of any American city, is a surprise and a source of immense satisfaction to everybody.

It is over now, barring the eating of a big dinner, and a few other minor if not interesting items, and New York may well be proud of the results. In plan and execution the whole celebration has been a marval of good management; but what made it a success beyond all previous calculations or expectations, was the sudden, spontaneous, and almost universal popular interest [illegible] asm evoked by the occasion. That could not be counted on beforehand. It has manifested itself, and it has held possession of the town for three days, culminating in yesterday's unequalled jubilee.

The existence in genuine fervor of the Columbian holiday spirit promises well for the success of the undertaking of our Chicago friends. The experience this week in New York shows that the promoters of the Columbian Exposition of 1893 can bank upon public interest in any scheme to celebrate the memory of Columbus.—N. Y. Sun.

APPEALS FOR MORSE.

A Colored Man on the Judge's Record.

C. Fabe Martin's Address — Burning Word's Uttered on the Famous Civil Rights Decision.

C. Fabe Martin, a life-long republican, is the colored man who drew the civil rights bill of 1885 and who pushed it through the legislature. He was delighted, as were all lovers of equal rights, with Chief Justice Morse's decision sustaining the bill, and will vote for him for governor. Mr. Martin thinks that every other colored man in Michigan should do likewise, and he sent the following letter to the Detroit News addressed to the colored voters of Michigan. After quoting the most interesting portion of Judge Morse's decision sustaining the law in the case of Ferguson vs. Gies, Mr. Martin says:

Judge Morse are noble words; the greatest that have ever been uttered from a judicial standpoint since the birth of the nation; greater than Lincoln's because not bound by conditions; a million times greater than any uttered by the supreme court of the United States, which in 1884 judicially declared that this great nation in its civil rights, and that court was a republican one.

COULD NOT PROTECT ITS CITIZENS

"We must have done with the foolery of so much as listening to the story of slavery and the issues of the war. We must cry for justice now.

"The slogan of the republican, when a negro becomes dissatisfied with his treatment, is: 'Did not the republican party give you liberty?' Does liberty mean that because a man is a negro he shall have every right but that of political and civil right; that in politics he shall be the servant of the party? No! By the decision of this democratic judge it means that our rights should be the same as those of all American citizens. His decision means that true liberty is that which makes us the exact equal, politically and civilly, of every other American citizen. In its fullness its means that we should have the right to vote, and not only to vote but to hold office, not vicariously, but on the foundation of intelligence, honesty and integrity, and to be protected in all our civil rights fully.

"The republicans freed the negro to save themselves. They enfranchised us for a like end. They left us untrained, untaught, unfed, in the hands of a host of greedy plunderers. And when these plunderers were at last thrust forth, instead of making haste to atone for past neglect, to shoulder their responsibilities toward the poor victims and wards of the nation, they GREW WEARY OF THE MORAL FIGHT.

They said the negro question was settled, and now for protection for the east, free silver for the west and south and civil service reform for the whited sepulcher.

"The negro wants justice. We must fight for it. We must beat the republican party, the whited sepulchers whose slaves we have been. We must beat them, since humanity learns lessons of justice by the suffering endured. It is the degraded labor of the south that is hampering the honest labor of the north. It is the disfranchised blacks thrust to the background that have left the old masters at the front to crack the whip over northern industry and forge chains for northern enterprise. No good can ever come to the party that crucifies our rights.

"What will win?

"We have been for years demanding our rights, both civil and political, and clothed with the power of our highest tribunal guaranteeing them now and forever.

HERE STEPS FORTH A MAN

"Can there be any other way for us to do than to support for, and work for, his elevation to the governor's chair?

"No!

"We as negroes must give him such a vote that the world will understand once for all that we stand for our friends, and the friends of humanity, no difference what party they belong to, and that we will submit to the inevitable. Judge A. B. Morse is one who is far in advance of the issues of protection, civil service reform and the currency. He is a man who recognizes ours as not the case of Uncle Tom, but of Uncle Tom's children.

"In words burning with warm humanity

HE HAS GIVEN US ALL that we have asked by a decision that should live along by the side of the declaration that 'all men are born free and equal,' and the emancipation that had to be given to save the life of the nation.

"We must to a man support him in his candidacy for governor, and in duty bound we must as well work for his election. We must do this or forever after hold our peace in regard to our rights, whether born here in Michigan or there in Mississippi.

"I, for one, propose to do

ALL IN MY POWER TO ELECT HIM

and I would that it were for the higher place, the presidency, for here is the one man, in all our American politics, who dares to do the right, without it being for policy's sake, to save a party, or to secure votes. His act was one of pure humanity and justice. All honor to him. And any colored voter who does not support him wholly should never again prate about his or any of his race's curtailed rights.

"Negro voters! vote for him; work for him.

"Ring out false pride in place and blood;
The civic slander and the spite;
Ring in the love of truth and right;
Ring in the common love of good.

Ring in the valiant man and free,
The larger heart, the kindlier hand."

C. FABE MARTIN.

ANSWER IT, REPUBLICANS.

Here Is the Resume of Democratic Economy.

Every State Department Accounted For.

A brief statement of the work of the present democratic state officials in comparison with their immediate republican predecessors furnishes the best proof of the economy of the present state administration. Following is a brief summary, covering the several departments:

ECONOMY BY DEPARTMENTS.

The republican expenditure in the auditor general's office in 1890:

For salaries	$67,621 26
For office supplies	10,937 49	$78,559 26
In 1891, democratic expenditure:
For salaries	$54,405 96
For office supplies	5,282 85	$60,688 81
A difference in favor of the present administration in one year's salaries and office expenditures of		$17,870 75

In the office of the secretary of state there has been little difference in supplies, printing or compiling the laws, manuals, etc. There is, however, a saving of something like twelve hundred dollars in salaries, comparing 1890 with 1891. The revenue from this department has been largely increased. First, the sale of books, laws, manuals, etc., has amounted to more, and the franchise fee—which is collected under a law passed by the democratic legislature of 1891, has provided a revenue of twenty-six thousand dollars the first year. Altogether about thirty thousand dollars more has been received into the state treasury through the secretary of state's office than in any year previous.

In the department of the commissioner of state land office, comparing his expenses with the last year under the republican administration, he has saved on extra clerks, postage, extra work, printing and binding, stationery, newspapers and other periodicals, $1,469.12.

In the executive office there was saved in one year about $1,000, principally in office expenses and the salary formerly paid a stenographer.

The attorney general has conducted his office in a most economical manner. Matters in which the state is interested have been looked after by him and his assistants without hiring outside attorneys; and, while he has been paid more than any previous attorney general, yet, in the expenses of his office, he has saved the first year something over $11,000, as compared with the fiscal year of 1890. This will make in the various departments about $35,000 to the credit of the first year of the democratic administration.

The state treasurer has exercised much care in the conduct of his department. The fees of licenses, owing to his vigilance, have more than doubled, while the funds of the state have been so well managed as to return a revenue of $48,598.73 from interest paid by the banks where state funds are deposited. This exceeds the revenue from this source collected in 1890 by $15,000.

The state oil inspector has also turned into the treasury in fees during the last fiscal year $26,000, as against $13,500 the year before.

As to the expense of the various legislative sessions, the following statement is conclusive:

Session of 1889, 183 days, total expenses	$149,249 03
Session of 1891, 179 days, total expenses	140,591 56

For the special session of four days the expenses were $6,161.50 to which should be added $15 for the publishing of the proceedings by any and all newspapers published in the state that desire to do so. Up to date 230 have filed applications which will finally entitle them to $15 each, amounting in all to $3,450.

A TYPICAL ARGUMENT.

One of McKinley's Reasons Analyzed.

Maj. McKinley recently said: "Whenever the other nations of the world will bring their labor and social conditions up to ours we will meet them in the neutral markets of the world, and it will be the survival of the fittest."

Some of their labor is up to ours, or ours is down to theirs, for we have the official report of United States Consul Schoenhof made to our government on August 28, 1886, in which he gives these as the prices actually paid for spinning cotton yarn in Massachusetts and in Lancashire, England:

YARN.	Lancashire.	Massachusetts.
No. 13	[illegible]	0 43
No. 20	0 [illegible]	0 45
No. 28	0 61	0 63
No. 32	0 73 3/4	0 79
No. 40	1 01	0 98
No. 46	1 12	1 11
No. 50	1 23	1 29

The same consul further reported in 1888, that:

"In the manufacture of ingrain carpets the United States pays 7.92 cents per yard for labor. England 8.26 cents."

Why do we not meet England with these articles in the neutral markets? Our labor is less, but the major says: "Their social conditions must come up to ours." What does he mean by that? Must Europe abolish her noble lord, and substitute the American protected baron?

$250,000 A YEAR.

The Additional Tax Placed on Corporations by Democratic Laws.

Under the Richardson railroad law, passed by the democratic legislature in 1891, if the gross receipts for the next year equal those of the last one or two, the railroad companies in Michigan will be required to pay something like $1,000,000 in specific taxes. For this and last year they paid a trifle less than $500,000, showing a gain in revenue from this source of $900,000. It is safe to say that this, with the Barkworth Franchise fee law, will tax corporations $250,000 annually more than they were taxed under republican laws.

This money when collected is available only for the support of our educational institutions, including primary schools. But it relieves taxation just the same as though passed to the general fund and used in paying current expenses of the state.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a common pimple to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons and establishes a sound constitution

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

D. RANSOM, SON & CO., Proprietors, BUFFALO N. Y.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

A WORD FOR GEN. F. B. WOOD

The nominee for Prosecuting Attorney on the Democratic county ticket, Gen. Fred B. Wood, is making a quiet but winning canvass. The voters of northern Lenawee county naturally feel an interest in his success, and he will pole not only the full strength of his party vote but will also win many votes from the other side.

Fred B. Wood was born in Tecumseh in 1858 and has always made this village his home until his removal to Adrian four years ago. He graduated from our [illegible] years at the State University, but was compelled to leave on account of his eyes. He worked on the farm one year, thereby recuperating his health, and then worked nearly a year in Wm. McCowen's furniture store. He then entered the Law School at the University, graduating therefrom in the spring of '84. He took the official census of Tecumseh township in June 1884. He then entered the law office of his father the late Edwin B. Wood, with whom he formed a legal partnership, entitled E. B. & F. B. Wood. During his father's long illness he was in almost constant attendance upon him, and after his father's death he continued the practice of the law alone. In December 1888 he removed to Adrian and since has associated with Mr. Millard and Mr. Bird in the practice of the law. He was elected Prosecutor in November 1890, leading every other candidate on the ticket. He has been connected with the Michigan State Troops for many years and has become known as one of the most efficient officers in the State service. He served as Capt. of Co. C. 1st Reg. from Sept. '83 until promoted to the position of Brig. Gen. and Quartermaster Gen. in Feb. 1891. Of his qualifications to fill the office of Prosecutor there can be no question. He is eminently fitted for the place, both in legal training and personal character. The only criticism passed upon him during the past two years—that his military duties absorbed too much of his time and attention—will have no weight hereafter, as he has fully determined to relinquish his military office at the close of the present year.

During the canvass now closing Gen. Wood has been quite closely confined to his duties as prosecutor and hence has been on the stump but very little. His opponent on the Republican ticket has had an advantage in this regard which he has not been slow to avail himself of, but no sensible voter will allow this fact to weigh against Gen. Wood. He has prosecuted his canvass, so far as his official duties would permit him to do so, and he leaves the rest with the people. The friends of the late Edwin B. Wood, who have always voted for "Fred," will vote for him again this fall to a man. His experience for the last two years is a strong point in his favor, and in legal qualifications he is certainly the best equipped candidate in the field.

If the voters of Lenawee County shall consult their own best interests, they will keep him in the Prosecutor's office for another term.

The Illustrated World's Fair.

The Dedicatory Edition of The Illustrated World's Fair is furnished with a beautiful cover, which carries accurate portraits of all Chiefs of Departments and the great officers. There are a hundred pages in the issue, and leading article is written by Carter Harrison. The articles illustrated by the portraits of the authors number fifteen, including Joachim, while the water scenes and panoramic views leave nothing to be desired in the way of illustration. All the main buildings, and numerous State buildings, are photographed as they now appear. About twenty pages are filled with the short and sprightly articles that have given the magazine a high place in periodical literature. Sampson, Low, Marston & Co., of London have assumed the publication of the magazine for Great Brittain and her colonies, and this connection also assures a wider distribution in Europe. Prince Bismark has written an article for The Illustrated World's Fair about the Exposition, and articles by Henry Waterson, Sara Bernhardt and Alphonzo Daudet, are in prospect. The present issue of this journal demonstrates that Chicago can produce the highest form of periodical. The price is one dollar a copy, and the issue forms a proper souvenir of the dedication. Part second contains reprints of the articles and portraits of Patti, Col. Ingersoll, President Hayes, Max O'Rell, Lyman J. Gage, Director General Davis, Chief Handy, David Swing, Col. Norton, Dr. Meloy, and a dozen other famous people. Jewell N. Halligan, McVicker's Theatre, Chicago. The regular (25 cent) issue contains thirty-two large pages of original articles and pictures. Every page of this journal is illustrated.

DEATH OF DR. J. N. BOYD.

The following notice is taken from the Madison, Wis., Times, of recent date and will be of interest to many of our older citizens who knew the deceased during his residence in Tecumseh.

"The sad announcement of the death of Dr. James N. Boyd was made last evening. The deceased has been a patient sufferer from asthma for a number of years and could find no relief from the dread disease. A year ago he went to the northern part of the state in the hope of bettering his failing health. He improved rapidly and soon returned to the city. Again the fatal hand of death hung o'er him and his sickness returned within a worse form. The doctor could find relief in an atmosphere cool and dry of a high latitude and his friends had urged him many times to change his place of residence and thus insure him good health. His answer to such entreaties was always that he must die sometime, and he wished to depart this life [illegible]

Last evening at about five o'clock the end came. The doctor was out at the fair grounds Friday and while not feeling well was in very good spirits. The disease, however, had his life in an unrelenting grasp. Yesterday he felt worse than usual and was confined to his bed most of the day sleeping peacefully away as evening drew near. The death was doubly sad from the fact that yesterday was his forty-first birthday.

Dr. Boyd has been known for many years as one of Madison's most popular citizens, a staunch friend, kind and true, a loving husband and father and business man of unspotted character. He was eminently a self-made man. He was born at Tecumseh, Michigan, on September 10, 1851. Coming to this state while yet a boy, after working for some years on his uncle's farm he came to this city. He attended the Rush medical college, graduating therefrom in 1881. He came to this city and began the practice of medicine, associated with Dr. Fox. A few years later he married Miss Nellie Gilman, daughter of Geo. W. Gilman, of North Hamilton street. Two years ago he in connection with Dr. W. W. Gill started the city hospital, and they have since superintended that institution.

Dr. Boyd in his long residence in this city has made hosts of friends to whom the sad announcement of his death will be most unwelcome. He leaves a wife and one child, a little girl of four years, to mourn the loss of husband and father. To them as well as to his many friends near and dear his taking away is a sad bereavement. Dr. Boyd's aged mother who resides at the old homestead at Tecumseh, Mich., and an uncle, D. B. Boyd, living at Mt. Vernon, Iowa, were telegraphed for last evening and will arrive in the city on the first trains. These are the only near relatives that can be reached.

The announcement of the funeral will be made later, but in all probability it will occur on Monday afternoon. It will be under the auspices of Madison Lodge No. 5, F. & A. M. of which order the deceased was a member.

Christian and Church Unity Discussed.

Christian and Church Unity is the subject being presented from place to place by Rev. C. E. Hulbert, of Detroit, Field Secretary of the Committee on Christian Unity, whose headquarters are at Chicago. On Monday evening Mr. Hulbert spoke in the lecture room of the M. E. Church in this village. The night being rainy and the attendance small, composed entirely of men, the speaker presented the subject in an informal manner, giving opportunity for interrogations all along the line of discourse. Rev. W. H. Babbitt and Rev. James Gorton being present, the question as to the latitude of the Church Unity movement was naturally and pleasantly discussed: whether in its practical working anything more could be accomplished than to effect "denominational comity;" each denomination agreeing with the other denominations not to enter small fields already fully occupied by some evangelical church, and to withdraw from fields already over-churched and let the strongest denominational church absorb the membership of the weaker churches. Rev. Babbitt said he represented "denominational comity." Rev. Gorton criticised the exclusiveness of denominational churches and thought them so taken up with their own interests as to overlook and neglect the intervening and non-church-going population and contended that the conditions of recognized membership should be made more liberal.

Mr. Hulbert, in a frank and friendly manner, then raised the question as to whether the Universalist and Unitarian bodies could rightfully be included in the present Church Unity movement. Both these bodies had representation in the Church Congresses held in Hartford and in Cleveland a few years ago. The three clergymen agreed that there were radical differences between the evangelical denominations and the Universalist and Unitarian bodies, and the discussion closed by common consent.

Mr. Hulbert said that while personally he preferred the union of weak churches on a common Christian unity basis, yet where a union could only be effected on the basis of "denominational comity" he advocated and encouraged such a union,—any way to save the cause of evangelical Christianity in the villages and rural districts.

Lenawee Horticulturalists.

The next meeting of the Lenawee County Horticultural Society will be held at the court house on Wednesday, Nov. 9, 1892. Subject, "Do apple orchards pay in this vicinity? If not, why not?" A favorite dish for a Thanksgiving dinner is requested from each lady present. Many such dishes will be served at the dinner hour. Visitors are cordially invited.

Fannie Adkins has left school. She removes to Ohio with her parents. Both teachers and pupils regret her departure and she carries with her the good wishes of all.

Uena Stewart and Rosa Wilson reentered the high school last Monday—measles you know.

Dr. Frost furnishes a fine specimen of coral for the Physical Geography to study on.

Over ninety pupils have left school during the past month because of the measles. Many are returning to work, however, as the disease disappears.

The last examination gave a majority of the high school a test last Friday.

Latin II will soon begin Caesar; they have been reading easy prose so far this term.

The General History class is finding Ancient Greece interesting at present.

The Philosophy class finds mechanics interestingly troublesome these days.

At Rest.

Robert Service, a well-known citizen of Clinton township, died October 26th at his residence, after an illness of two weeks, occasioned by a fall from an apple tree.

Mr. Service was born in Clinton township May 12, 1843, making him, at the time of his death, 49 years, 5 months and 14 days old. On the 17th day of September, 1870, he was united in marriage to Martha McKinney, who died ten years later, leaving four children. He was again united in marriage on the 12th of February, 1882, to Miss Mary Gregg, who, with his four children and aged mother live to mourn his loss.

He was a loving father, a devoted husband, a kind neighbor and a good citizen. He was widely known as a genial, companiable man, and was loved and respected by a large circle of relatives and friends. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. David J. Lewis, and were attended by a large company, who followed his remains to the Tecumseh cemetery, where they were interred.

Resolutions of Respect.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to take from her earthly home our beloved friend and schoolmate, Linnie Coryell, it is hereby

RESOLVED, That by her death the school sustains a loss that words cannot express and we mourn the departure of one whose qualities as a friend and school-mate won our admiration and love.

RESOLVED, That we deem the life of Linnie full of valuable lessons and worthy of imitation in its devotion to duty and in its manifestations of Christian character.

RESOLVED, That we extend to the bereaved parents our most sincere sympathy and our condolence, and we pray our Heavenly Father to be very near to them in their bereavement.

RESOLVED, That these resolutions be published in the Clinton Local and Tecumseh papers and a copy be placed in the hands of the bereaved parents.

In Memoriam.

WHEREAS, It has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from the loved circle of our Home missionary Society one of our members, therefore,

RESOLVED, That while we mourn the departure of Mrs. Eliza Gray and shall greatly miss her cheerful help in our society, we will strive the more earnestly to do the work the Master bids us do until we too are called home.

RESOLVED, That in our relation as a home missionary society to Mrs. Eliza Gray we deeply feel our loss and shall ever sacredly cherish her memory, and we do hereby tender to the bereaved family our loving sympathy and pray that in this hour of trial they may be comforted by trusting in the Saviour, who alone can sustain them.

The Union Gospel Temperance meeting Sat. eve. Nov. 6th, will be held in the Opera House. Everybody is invited.

The Coiled Spring Hustler for October, issued by the Page Fence Company, is on our desk. It is lively and spicy as ever.

A. B. Clark, of Elkhart, was shaking hands with his Tecumseh friends last Friday and favored the HERALD with a call.

Miss Ida Pilbeam closed a very successful term of school in the Wilson district on Friday and returned to her home in Tecumseh.—Addison Courier.

Next Saturday Nov. 5th, a matched race will be trotted over the Milan driving Park between Phoenix and Furlout. Race will be called at one o'clock, sharp.

Married at the groom's residence, on Tuesday evening of Tuesday, Nov. 1, 1892, by Rev. Charles A. McNeil of Tecumseh, Mr. Mrs. Betsy Middlebrook of Clinton; officiator H. A. Smith, officiating. Congratulations are in order.

The state musical convention will be held in Hillsdale, holiday week. This will be a treat to music lovers as the best musical talent in the state will be represented. There will be eight concerts giving during the week.

J. C. Atkins, the rich sawmaker of Indianapolis, the other day said to one of his employes, an ardent Irish Democrat: "Don't you know that you'll be working at $5 a day if Cleveland is elected?" "Oi don't believe it" said the Irishman, "for if it war so ye'd be making stump speeches for Clavelind."

Mrs. Boland, who works John Clark's farm in Macon, lost his wife last Friday very suddenly. She has been troubled with heart disease, but was apparently well that morning, prepared the noon meal and eat her dinner as usual. While washing the dishes after dinner, she was suddenly attacked, went into the bed to lie down and expired at once. Mr. Boland is a worthy, industrious man, and the shock falls upon him with crushing force. He has the sympathy of the entire community.

Register next Saturday.

Go and hear H. Martin Williams this evening.

Theo Lewis has taken the job of caring for the corporation team.

The official inspection of Co. C. is being held this afternoon and evening.

C. E. Triplet is home from Washington and will remain until after election.

The regular monthly meeting of the Eastern Star Lodge takes place this evening.

Albert Brower has gone to Boston on a business trip, expecting to remain about two weeks.

Mrs. Wm. A. Wood, of Ulrichville, Ohio, is visiting Tecumseh friends for a couple of weeks.

Joe Everett broke his arm the other day while playing ball and he now carries it in a sling.

A. O. Orr, of Kunkle, Ohio, was in town one day last week. He always makes flying trips.

The season tickets for the Star Course have nearly all been sold. Only 750 tickets have been printed and that number only will be sold.

Jud DePuy, of Detroit, is spending the present week on the old farm and with Tecumseh acquaintances. He is still selling type-writers in Detroit.

E. L. Teeple has employed Miss Loomis, teacher of the retouching school of Oberlin, Ohio. This is the fourth employee Teeple has now at work for him.

We are in receipt of the annual catalogue of Brown's Business University, of Adrian. It is a very neat job and fully sets forth the advantages of that flourishing institution.

The Republicans will hold the last rally of the campaign to-morrow evening at the opera house. Grant Fellows will be the speaker and the Fruit Ridge Glee Club will furnish music.

In the county of Lenawee the official ballot will contain four tickets. The democratic ticket will be first on the ballot, republican second, prohibition third, and people's party fourth.

Fifty-one non-resident pupils in the Tecumseh High School. Measles and whooping cough are chasing the scholars around, regardless of whether they are foreign or resident.—Adrian Press.

The first dance of a series will be given at Armory Hall, Tecumseh, on Wednesday evening next, Nov. 9th. Music by Hubbard and Macham's orchestra. Bill only fifty cents and a good time can be relied upon.

Last Monday night was halloween. Nearly everything moveable in the village, not locked up or chained down was "out of position" Tuesday morning. Young America was evidently hanging out on Monday night.

Rev. F. Adkins expects to move his family to Granville, Ohio this week. During his long residence in Tecumseh he has made a host of friends who will sincerely regret his departure. May prosperity attend him and his family wherever he goes.

A letter from our old friend Cyrus V. Wells, of Minneapolis, indicates that he is prospering. He is now engaged in the real estate and insurance business. He takes the HERALD of course, and thus keeps well posted in regard to the status of Tecumseh affairs.

The Hyers Comedy Co. held the boards at the opera house last Friday and Saturday evenings. The "Colored Aristocracy" was enacted true to life. Their programs are of the variety order full of comical situations and side-splitting scenes. We consider it the best colored troupe that has ever visited Tecumseh.

H. Martin Williams and Congressman Gorman will speak at the opera house to-night. Mr. Williams is one of the best posted men on the tariff issue who ever addressed a Lenawee County audience. Our citizens should fill the hall, for they will hear an able discussion of the tariff issue.

The Prohibition meeting last Tuesday collided with the worst rain storm that Tecumseh has seen since the campaign opened. Nevertheless a good sized audience assembled and listened to a vigorous talk from Rev. John Russell. He handled the old parties without gloves and there was a good attendance of old party voters present.

Fred V. Horton and J. L. Horton, former Clinton farmers, now reside in Grand Traverse and Wexford counties. Fred has threshed this fall 1057 bushels of wheat from 36 acres and 1200 of oats from 26 acres. J. L. has taken 1195 bushels of wheat from 46 acres. These figures show that they live in a good farming section and have not forgotten how to farm it.

Henry Anderson died suddenly at his home in this village on Monday last. He has been in poor health for some time but still he has been about, as usual, and his sudden demise came without any warning. He was one of our oldest residents and for many years a prominent business man. The funeral was held yesterday afternoon. Further obituary mention will appear hereafter.

Jacob VanTyne was born March 30, 1815, in Niagara County, N. Y. He came to Tecumseh with his family in 1861 and this village has ever since been his home. He has been suffering for several weeks with a general breaking down of the system and passed away on the 29th. The funeral was held at the family residence last Sunday and was largely attended by old friends and acquaintances.

Register next Saturday.

Bring along that wood while the roads are good.

Dr. L. M. Jones, of Brooklyn, was in town yesterday.

Mrs. Thos. Boyd died last night after a severe illness.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Al Heidenrich last Tuesday an 8 pound boy.

The gale of last Friday night blew down the wind mill on Joseph Stretch's farm in Raisin.

Mrs. H. S. Chenor, of Ann Arbor, is spending a few days with her mother, Mrs. C. M. Tilton.

Have you bought your season ticket for the Star Course? If not, hurry up or you may get left.

Wood thieves are getting in their work in the west end of town. Ab. Wilson had half a cord stolen this week.

Guy Davidson, having obtained a position in a dry goods store at Detroit, left for that city on Monday. Success to him.

Mrs. M. F. Marks left the first of the week for Rheinlander Wis., to join her husband who is now conducting a drug store in that city.

Mrs. Lovisa Clark, who has been spending sometime with her sister, Mrs. Judge Stacy, returned to her home in Brooklyn yesterday.

Mrs. L. B. Stevens, who has been visiting friends in Tecumseh for several days, returned to her home in Detroit the first of the week.

Dr. E. C. Anderson, of Cleveland, Tenn., arrived in town Tuesday, having come out to attend his father's funeral. He expects to remain during the week.

Take your chickens to L. D. Dewey, on railroad street, where you can get seven cents per pound for them. He always pays the highest market price for poultry.

Mrs. J. D. Tallman returned from Oak Park, Friday noon, where she has been visiting T. M. Lovett since the 1st of Sept. With her came Mr. Lovett's youngest son.

Mrs. Collar's Committee will serve supper to the Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church on Wednesday eve. Nov. 9th. Business meeting at 5 p. m. Supper from 5:30 till 6:30.

Grant Fellows was in town a portion of the day Tuesday, having an appointment to speak in Macon that evening. He is making a good record in this campaign as a stump speaker.

The young people of South Macon will give a Charade Social at Grange Hall, Friday eve. Nov. 11th. Look out for a good time and every one come. Music furnished by a Glee Club.

The ladies social of the Universalist Church, will meet at the residence of E. B. Tafft, on the T. H. Montgomery farm in Ridgeway township, on Friday, Nov. 4th, at 10 a. m. Dinner at 12:30. All are invited.

Frank Bryan and wife returned last week from their eastern trip, having been gone about three weeks. They visited P. W. Adams on his Delaware farm and also took in the sights of Philadelphia.

We are indebted to Geo. L. Graves for a copy of the Milwaukee Sentinel of Oct. 31st, containing a very full account of the great fire which devastated that city the day before. Over three hundred buildings were burned and the total loss will amount to over $6,000,000.

Monday morning Mr. Wm. Hayden received a dispatch from Clara Hayden announcing her arrival the day before at Antwerp, on the steamer Wiesland. She had a rough passage across the Atlantic and was sick a portion of the time, but finally arrived in safety.

Next Saturday is registration day in the various townships. The law requires every voter to be registered. Every male citizen of the United States who has resided in this state three months and in the township or ward in which he offers his vote ten days previous to the election is entitled to vote, provided he is registered and not otherwise.

Prof. G. D. Edmondson. the celebrated Detroit Optician, will test eyes and fit spectacles, at W. F. King's Jewelry store at Adrian, from Nov. 3d. until the 9th. Positively no longer. Tests free. With his spectacles one sees as in youth near and far with the same pair. He does not charge exorbitant prices but guarantees satisfaction.
G. D. EDMONDSON.

The board of registration will meet next Saturday at the Council Building. All young men who cast their first ballot must register. Also all voters who have resided in the state three months or in the township ten days. Electors who have previously voted in Tecumseh will not need to re-register. The polling places in this township will be the same as last spring; the East district booths in the Council Building and the West district in Heesen's hall back of Alfred James' office. Voters should remember that the Lake Shore railroad is now the boundary line between the two districts.

"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements that so much comfort for $1.00 (the price) is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, special difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c. or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Electric Belt which is selling very rapidly now, which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt), and credit $3 on the price of new one. Remember the Electric Foot Warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

LAST SAD RITES.

The Funeral of Caroline Scott Harrison at Indianapolis.

Her Remains Are Now at Rest in Crown Hill Cemetery — Simple But Impressive Services—A Note from President Harrison.

THE FINAL SCENE.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Oct. 29.—It is over at last. All that is yet mortal of Caroline Scott Harrison is lying at rest in the silent cemetery of Crown Hill, and her place will know her no more. The deathbed scenes; the long journey of sorrow from the capital to the cemetery; the services for the dead; all are over and the president must finish his weekly course alone as best he may. Nobly and without a murmur has he borne his trouble, as all could see who witnessed the final ceremonies at Indianapolis.

His appearance is indelibly impressed on the memories of those who met him when he stepped from his darkened car into the broad light of the union depot. Pale was he and haggard, and with a certain slight stoop in the shoulders, which men get who grieve: but the step was firm, as became that of an old soldier, and the expression of his face was one of resignation and of hope.

To anyone who has witnessed the pomp which surrounds the burial of kings and princes this simple funeral was peculiarly impressive. The wife of the chief executive of 65,000,000 people was being borne to her grave, but there was less circumstance than often surrounds the burial of a simple citizen of the commonwealth.

ARRIVAL OF THE TRAIN.

The elegantly equipped special conveying the party arrived here at 9:30 o'clock, promptly on schedule time, and was greeted by thousands of sympathetic friends and admirers. They occupied all points of vantage along the road and crowded the station to its utmost capacity.

Everything being in readiness the casket was lifted and slowly and reverently the cortege moved out through the sheds, through the union station to the carriages in waiting. The casket was borne by John B. Elam, the president's law partner, Judge Woods, Hon. E. B. Martindale, Gen. Lew Wallace, Dr. Allen and T. P. Haughey.

Then the sad procession moved on. Its order was simple. First came the officiating ministers, Revs. M. L. Haines and N. B. Hyde; then three carriages with pall bearers; after these came the hearse, followed by the president, immediate relatives, government and state officials, lady managers of the Orphans' home, of which the deceased was a member. It was a long line of vehicles, for the head of the cortege had traversed nearly half of the long route to the church when the last of the procession was leaving the depot square.

On the way to the church a touching incident occurred. The veterans of the G. A. R. posts of the city, anticipating the arrival of the funeral cortege, had formed in line on Ohio street and stood with uncovered heads until the procession passed. It was a simple, manly tribute to a sorrowing chief.

AT THE CHURCH.

When the funeral procession arrived at the church a crowd of 5,000 people thronged the sidewalks and pushed into the streets, not boisterously, but with a show of the most intense interest. The police had no difficulty in pushing the crowds back and a broad path was easily made for the pall bearers and mourners.

The church services were characterized by the greatest simplicity. As the coffin was carried up the aisle and deposited in front of the chancel the organ pealed forth a soft melody. The choir then sang "Lead, Kindly Light" with beautiful effect and Dr. Haines offered a short invocation and read a selection from the Scriptures. The text of the sermon was: "Therefore comfort one another with these words."

GRIEF OF THE PRESIDENT.

A stillness as of death pervaded the sacred edifice while the minister dwelt upon the beauties and happiness of a Christian life, but when, in low and trembling tones, he eulogized and touchingly spoke directly of her who had passed away and recounted her manifold virtues, many of his hearers were moved to tears and sounds of subdued sobbing pervaded the church. The president sat with his head bowed upon his breast, and several times the twitching of the muscles indicated how difficult was his effort to retain his composure. There was a momentary pause after the pastor had concluded his discourse, and his place was then taken by Rev. Dr. N. A. Hyde, of the Congregationalist denomination, who delivered the prayer.

Once again the voice of the singers broke the silence. By the president's special desire another favorite selection of his wife's: "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," had been chosen with which to close the services. Softly, from amid the shrubbery, a requiem borne upon the air and penetrating with a softening influence to every heart, came the melodious strains. The singers retired, the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Hyde and the service was at an end.

AT THE GRAVE.

When the last of the funeral party had been escorted to their carriages the cortege moved slowly to Crown Hill cemetery. With but few exceptions all of the private residences along the boulevard displayed emblems of mourning. The cemetery was reached shortly before 1 o'clock, and the cortege passed under the magnificent stone arches and proceeded along the drive to the western boundary of the city of the dead until it reached the slope of a beautiful spot surrounded with palms. Here was the newly made grave. Women's hands had lined it with beautiful flowers whose fragrance filled the air. Once again and for the last time the casket was lifted from the hearse. The mourners gathered around the grave and the spectators, of whom there were not less than a thousand, massed themselves in the rear. A passage of Scripture was read by Dr. Hyde, a final prayer and benediction pronounced by Pastor Haines, and all that is mortal of Caroline Scott Harrison was lowered to its resting place, there to sleep until the dead are awakened by the last trumpet. For a moment the executive of the nation looked down into the open grave where he was about to leave the dearest treasure of his high life. Then with moist eyes and bowed head he slowly turned away.

LEFT FOR WASHINGTON.

President Harrison and the immediate members of his family were driven from the cemetery direct to the residence of R. S. McKee, where he rested and afterward partook of luncheon. Throughout the trying ordeal the bereaved husband bore himself with remarkable fortitude and his effort toward self-control was communicated to the ladies of the party, enabling them to maintain some degree of composure. The funeral party left on its

A PARTING NOTE.

Just before his departure the president gave the press a note to the public, of which the following is a copy:

"My dear old friends and neighbors: I cannot leave you without saying that the tender and gracious sympathy which you have to-day shown for me and for my children, and much more the touching evidence you have given of your love for the dear wife and mother, have deeply moved our hearts. We yearn to tarry with you and to rest near the hallowed spot where your loving hands have laid our dead, but the little grandchildren watch in wondering silence for our return and need our care, and some public business will not longer wait upon my sorrow. May a gracious God keep and bless you all. Most gratefully yours, BENJAMIN HARRISON."

STEVENSON WRITES.

The Democratic Nominee for Vice President Accepts the Honor.

CHARLSTON, W. Va., Oct. 31.—Adlai E. Stevenson, democratic candidate for vice president, has sent a letter of acceptance to the president of the national democratic convention, Hon. W. L. Wilson. Mr. Stevenson says, among other things, that "there is no longer pretext or excuse for the maintenance of war tariff in times of peace, and more than a quarter of a century after armed conflict has ceased. The platform of the national democratic convention demands the reform of this system and the adoption in its place of one which will insure equality to all our people. I am in full and hearty accord with these purposes." He also says he is in favor of the position taken by the national convention on the currency question. He continues:

"Another issue of great moment in the pending contest is the force bill, the magnitude of which cannot be overstated. It may mean the control of the election of representatives in congress by the bayonet. The republican party, by its acts in the Fifty-first congress and by its platform in its late national convention, stands pledged to the passage of this bill. That it will pass it when it has the power no sane man can doubt. To all our people who desire the peace and prosperity of our common country this question is all-important."

In conclusion Mr. Stevenson says:

"I accept the nomination tendered me, and, should the action of the convention meet the approval of my countrymen, will to the best of my ability discharge with fidelity the duties of the important trust confided to me."

DEAD ON THE COW-CATCHER.

Frank Carmaux Is Struck by a Locomotive and Impaled on a Piece of Pipe.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 31.—When the Pan-Handle express train from the west pulled into the Fourth avenue station at 6 o'clock Friday evening the people gathered there had a fright. Standing upright on the cow-catcher of the engine was the corpse of a man impaled on a piece of pipe. The body proved to be that of Frank Carmaux, of Sheraden, 4 miles from this city. He had been loading potatoes on a truck near his home. He was struck by the engine of a west-bound freight train and thrown onto the cow-catcher of the east-bound train, where a piece of pipe connecting with the air-brake apparatus ran into his back.

SMOTHERED TO DEATH.

Three Men Lose Their Lives While Working Under the Missouri River.

ALTON, Ill., Oct. 27.—At the site of the new bridge which the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad is building across the Missouri river opposite this city three new hands, while working in the air chamber of a steel caisson 75 feet below the surface of the river Wednesday morning, forgot how to work the valve doors and were smothered to death before relief could be furnished. All were unknown, and after the coroner's inquest were buried on the bank of the river.

Twenty-Two Lives Lost.

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Oct. 28.—Details arriving daily show that the gale which raged along the coast recently was very severe. The coast was devastated, and ten vessels are either lost or missing, and twenty-two lives were lost. At Greenspond the sea unearthed the bodies in two graveyards.

A Noted Republican Dead.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Oct. 28.—Dewitt C. Littlejohn died at his home in this city yesterday, aged 75 years. He was speaker of the assembly six times, a member of the Thirty-eighth congress, and took the One Hundred and Tenth regiment to the front in the war of the rebellion as its colonel.

Ohio's Wheat Crop.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 28.—The wheat yield of Ohio this season is placed at 40,000,000 bushels, being short of last year's crop about 5,000,000 bushels. It is estimated that about 4,000,000 bushels of the crop of last year is still in the producers' hands.

Wrecked by a Cow.

GORDON STATION, Ky., Oct. 31.—A cow caused the wreck of a train on the Newport News & Mississippi Valley road at this place, and the engineer was killed and the fireman and a colored man fatally hurt.

Refused to Pay.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.—The Mutual Life Insurance Company of this city has refused to pay $100,000 insurance on the life of William M. Runk, of Philadelphia, who committed suicide.

SWEPT BY FLAMES.

Acres of Buildings Destroyed in Milwaukee.

The Business District Burned Over—The Loss Estimated at $7,000,000—Several Persons Killed and Many Injured.

A GREAT CALAMITY.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 29.—There were several alarms yesterday afternoon for fires, all of them the result of the heavy gale of wind that sprang up shortly before noon and increased until at 5 o'clock it reached a velocity of about 50 miles an hour. Between 5 and 6 o'clock there were five alarms, and the fire department, including the fire tug, was scattered in various parts of the city, when shortly before 6 o'clock an alarm was sent in from the box at the corner of Detroit and East Water streets. It was for a fire in the Union Oil Company's store at No. 228 East Water street, situated on the west side of the street, about midway between Detroit and Buffalo streets, the rear of the store being on the river. From this point the flames spread until the lower part of the Third ward was burned over, causing a loss of nearly $6,000,000. The insurance is estimated at $3,000,000. At least 3,000 people are homeless. Among the more prominent firms burned out were the following:

Bub & Kipp, furniture	$300,000
J. P. Patton & Co., oils and paints	250,000
J. P. Kiesinger, wholesale liquors	75,000
Milwaukee mirror works	50,000
B. Leidersdorf, tobacco	250,000

Milwaukee Bag Company	4,000
A. J. Hilbert & Co., flavoring extracts
Total	$5,775,000

APPEALS FOR HELP.

Chicago, Racine, Kenosha, Sheboygan and other points were early appealed to for help and responded promptly, firemen and apparatus arriving from the several points as rapidly as steam could bring them. They left the trains south of the fire and did much to confine it to the north bank of the river below the turn at Walker's Point bridge. At 12:45 Chief Foley announced that the fire was under control.

HOW IT STARTED.

The fire originated from an explosion of something in the cellar. Fed by the inflammable stock it soon spread through the three upper floors. It was ten minutes before the first fire engine, coming from a smaller fire some distance away, had reached the scene, and by that time the entire building was in flames.

From there it spread to the large wholesale drug house of the Dohman company. A third alarm had brought to the scene nearly the entire department of the city. Despite the gale the firemen for an hour did excellent work and seemed to have the fire entirely under control when suddenly there was an illumination of the heavens from a fire in the Bub & Kipp furniture factory, a large, new seven-story building occupying half a block on the north side of Buffalo street at the corner of Broadway. The tar roof of the big furniture factory ignited from sparks carried from the fire over a block away. The firemen were powerless to reach the fire on the roof of the big furniture factory and within fifteen minutes the entire interior of the factory was like an immense furnace.

SPREAD OF THE FLAMES.

The fire spread down both sides of Broadway for three blocks and east to the lake. West of Broadway several large business blocks escaped, owning to the wind being favorable to them, but the extensive machine shops of Weisel & Vilter and the Bailey foundry were among the building west of Broadway that were destroyed.

East of Broadway the entire district south of Buffalo street, with the exception of a few houses along Buffalo street, is burned to the lake and south to the river, covering four blocks square. Within this section are the city gas works, which were partially burned.

HOMELESS FAMILIES.

The entire lower part of the Third ward, inhabited largely by poor Irish families, was devastated. About 500 cottages were destroyed. The poor people were wandering about the streets loudly lamenting their loss. Some plan of relief for them will no doubt be made, but the people seem to be so stunned that they are doing nothing.

RELIEF NEEDED.

Efforts are being made looking toward a temporary housing of the homeless hundreds. Manager Chase of the Plankinton house notified the authorities that there were twenty-five vacant rooms at the Plankinton house ready for anyone who had been burned out and had no place to stay. This generous example was followed by others. But a relief fund will be necessary to give the assistance that will be needed before the sufferers can get on their feet. The fire district is as barren as the American desert except for here and there a chimney stack which has resisted the embrace of the flames.

RESULT OF THE FIRE.

MILWAUKEE, Oct. 31.—Four hundred and sixty-five buildings destroyed. Three hundred and fifty-eight families—including a total of 2,500 persons—made homeless. A total property loss of $5,805,000, with insurance amounting to about $3,800,000. Four persons killed and eight or ten injured. Such, in brief, is the result of the fire which threatened for a time on Friday night to sweep Milwaukee off the face of the earth. There are many sorrowful faces to be seen along the streets in the vicinity of the fire district. Many families lost everything but the clothing they were

A MEXICAN'S REVENGE.

Adventure with a Man-Eating Tree in Central America.

Experience of Two Hunters Who Were Lured Into a Treacherous Trap—Assistance Comes to Them in Time to Save Their Lives.

I have spent, in all, three years in Central America. I went there with a surveying party which was running the line of a projected railroad, one of those railroads which are built on paper alone. It has never yet materialized. While the line was being run I made the acquaintance of an American citizen who was the owner of a large coffee plantation, and he invited me to spend some time with him. I accepted, and in a little while a mutual friendship sprang up between us. The result was that before the time came for my departure he told me that it was necessary for him to pay a visit to his old home in Ohio with his wife, to settle up some legal business, and he had been trying to find some one who could take charge of his plantation during his absence. He urged me to take the position, and I accepted. Another week found me at the head of one of the finest coffee plantations in Nicaragua.

My duties were light enough. Bland had a competent general manager, and about all that I had to do was to act as the power behind the throne in the master's absence. I had but one difficulty during this time. The manager, a Cuban named Carlinos, was popular with the laborers, and all went smoothly until one day a Mexican, Michael Ferrara, positively refused to obey some order that Carlinos had given him, and Carlinos appealed to me. Upon investigation I calmly told the Mexican either to obey orders or to leave the place. With a sidelong scowl at Carlinos and myself he did what the manager had commanded, and the storm seemed to have blown over, but I did not feel quite confident about it. The Mexican's look troubled me and I mentioned it to Carlinos, but he treated the matter lightly and was inclined to be scornful in regard to Ferrara. "He is a coward," he said, shrugging his shoulders, and so dismissed the matter. I let the subject drop, ashamed of seeming afraid of a man whom this slender Cuban regarded with such disdain, and yet I could have sworn that when I waked that night, startled at some slight noise on the terrace outside my window, it was Ferrara's dark face I saw in the moonlight peering in at me. In an instant it was gone, and I was out of the room, running along the terrace, searching here and there. But no, though I gave the terrace a thorough search, and even went around to the end of the house and the grove of banana trees beyond, I saw nothing moving anywhere save an owl that flitted out of the trees. I went back to my room concluding that I had dreamed the whole affair.

The next morning I felt quite sure of it. I met Ferrara several times in the course of the day, and he was especially pleasant. He was better educated than the majority of his class, and his position on the plantation gave him a kind of precedence over the others. I was near him several times before the day was over, and I noticed that on each occasion he took pains to speak pleasantly and greet me with his most courteous smile. I thought he was sorry for the bad temper he had shown the day before. I didn't know him as well then as I do now.

The next day Carlinos and I had decided upon a hunt in the mountains that made a jagged outline against the sky off to the south. While we were getting guns and cartridges into condition for use, Ferrara approached and said in his smoothest tones:

"If the senors went to the valley, down beyond the Contadino pass, they would find where a great panther roams, and has been seen many times. I myself saw it but two days ago, but I was unarmed, so I put spurs to my horse and galloped away."

Carlinos turned to me with a look of interest. "That's a good idea," he said. "We'll look for the panther first, and if we fail to find him we can try the mountains."

We were about to turn away when Ferrara stopped us, with many apologies. "Beyond the Contadino pass," he said, "you will find a narrow trail leading off eastward down the valley. Follow that trail half a mile, until you see a huge white cliff, a hundred yards to the right. At the foot of that cliff the panther has been seen again and again. Adios, senors!"

And so Carlinos and I went walking off, with swinging stride, toward the pass, glad of a day in the woods, and ready for any adventure that came along.

Except the one that actually did come. For within the next hour we passed through the most horrible experience that ever fell to the lot of mortals I am sure.

We found the pass—a mere gap in the mountains, not used for travel, as another pass, a few miles further south, furnished the nearest road to the town. The pass was strewn with rough bowlders and jagged masses of rock, difficult to make one's way over, and for half an hour we had all the exercise we needed in climbing over and around these obstructions. At last, however, we were clear of them, and we shouldered our guns again after a brief rest, and went on until we found the trail among the bushes. It was such a path as would be made by cows or sheep, going to and from a watering place, and I was going along, paying very little attention to it, when Carlinos, who was in the lead, suddenly stopped and muttered: "That is very strange."

I looked over his shoulder, and there in the yellow sand was the barefoot track of a man. We easily traced it along down the trail for several hundred yards, and then it suddenly disappeared, as though the owner of the track had turned off into the thick undergrowth. We both followed it up to that point, and then missing it looked at one another and said again: "That is very strange!"

And then we both laughed, and Carlinos said: "But it might have been some herdsman looking for a stray cow or sheep."

But I noticed that Carlinos looked after his cartridges a little more closely, and held his gun in a position to use it, if necessary. And just then the cliff that Ferrara had described came into view, about a hundred yards away, and we turned off from the path toward this place in which the panther had been so often seen.

Scarcely had we started in that direction when we were startled by the long, fierce scream of the panther itself. As nearly as we could judge it was at that very moment at the base of the cliff. We stopped involuntarily at the sound, and then went stealing down the slope, with eyes watchful and nerves stretched to the utmost. Yet we went on and on, without seeing it and suddenly found ourselves almost at the base of the cliff, which had been hidden by the thick and tangled brush through which we had passed.

Then we stopped and looked around, peering here and there through the bushes. It was easy to see that the spot of ground on which we stood had been the haunt of some wild animal, for all about us bones lay bleaching on the ground. But nothing was to be seen. The face of the cliff, up to a height of twelve or fifteen feet, was covered with the matted tendrils of a dead vine, apparently. It suddenly occurred to me that the panther's den might be back under the cliff, hidden by the vine, and I was about to investigate when just behind us, not ten feet away, sounded the horrible scream of the panther.

Both of us whirled, and Carlinos stepped back a little. In the moment of confusion I failed to notice him, but in an instant he gave a heart-rending cry: "Help! help! quick, the tree! The man-eating tree!"

Never will I forget that cry, nor the sight that met my eyes. In stepping back he had stumbled against the dead vine, as I had thought it. And then in a moment every tendril had become instinct with life, and was twisting and writhing about him with the most horribly snake-like motions, matted around his body and legs, holding his arms tight and drawn across his face and clasped about his throat. Already when I looked around he was helpless. During the single moment while I stood there looking at him motionless with horror his face had begun to turn purple. And then all at once I recovered myself a little, and snatching my hunting knife from my belt began cutting and slashing at the horrible, writhing tendrils in the effort to cut their victim loose.

But before I had made three strokes something caught my arm and held it; then something crawled swiftly about my neck, and then there were others around my hands, over my head, across my face—everywhere at once I was seized and held, while wherever the snaky monsters touched went fierce pains, as though my flesh were being torn from my body. I felt my consciousness slipping away; but as it was going suddenly the dark face of Ferrara peered out of the bushes in front of me, and he cried out with mocking laughter:

"I hope you enjoy yourselves, senors. The panther is not far away, believe me! Only wait for him until he comes. Adios! Adios!"

The shock of anger roused me a little in the midst of my racking torture, and I saw Ferrara turn to go away; but all at once, amid a chorus of maledictions, a dozen hands seized him and pinioned him down, and we were surrounded by a crowd of laborers from the plantation. With long knives they cut and hacked at the limbs that were sucking the blood from our veins, and in a few moments they had us free. How they got us home I never knew. It was not until the next day that I recovered consciousness, and I was unable to turn in my bed even, for two weeks. The excoriations on my face and hands left painful wounds, which were a long time in healing, and which made dreadful scars. These have all gone, however, except the one on my neck, which resembles the scar left by a centipede.

As for Carlinos, he lay as if dead for several days, and there were times when he was pronounced really dead. Then he went off into fever and delirium, and it seemed that he could not possibly recover. After awhile, though, he did struggle back into life, but his health was wrecked, and he was never again able to walk as much as a hundred yards.

How did we happen to be rescued? Why, some of Ferrara's fellow servants had heard his muttered imprecations against us, and, when we had gone and they saw him sneak away after us, they held a consultation and decided to follow. I have always believed that Ferrara circled around us, got in ahead and imitated the cry of the panther himself to lure us on. I have never been able to find out, however. When I had regained strength enough to feel some little curiosity, and asked one of our rescuers what they had done with Ferrara, he answered with the utmost unconcern:

"We gave him to the man-eating tree, senor!"

A Broken Thread.

There is a good story of George William Curtis, which seems never to have been published. He was lecturing on a Buffalo stage once, when suddenly a heavy rope somehow broke loose from its moorings in the flies above and dropped with a tremendous thud to the floor behind the speaker. Mr. Curtis looked around in mild surprise to see what had happened, then, turning to the alarmed audience again, said, with a twinkle in his eye, "Ah, that must have been the thread of my discourse." Somebody on a front seat caught the joke first and broke out in a chuckle, which instantly developed into a roar of laughter from the whole house. It was a good many minutes before the thread of that discourse could be resumed.—Buffalo Express.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

McPherson Was a Masher.

William McPherson, a handsome man of about 35 years, was arrested in Detroit upon at least a dozen charges of bigamy. Detectives have investigated his career, which has been closely strewn with wrecks of feminine hearts. His latest victim is Carrie Dennis, a beautiful young girl whom he has known but six weeks. Another wife of his was found in Detroit, two across the river in Windsor, and six or eight in other parts of Canada. McPherson seems to have married them solely for their money, and then, after a few brief months deserted them.

Women Advised to Vote.

The convention of the Twelfth Michigan district of the W. C. T. U. closed a three days' session at Marquette, electing Mrs. E. M. Law, of Baraga, president; Mrs. S. E. Bird, of Menomonie, secretary; Mrs. Bessie Phillips, of Ishpeming, treasurer. The next annual convention will be held at Escanaba. Resolutions were adopted commending the action of congress in closing the world's fair on Sunday and urging women to avail themselves of the right to vote on the school question.

Well-Known Stock Breeder Dead.

Frank Willson, Jackson county's most prominent stock breeder and well known throughout the western states as a breeder of fine sheep, cattle and swine, died at his home in Blackman township of typhoid fever. He was a member of a great many breeders', wool-growers' and kindred organizations, and in the state fairs of Michigan, Iowa, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and other states his stock always captured a large share of the premiums.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy-one observers in different parts of the state for the week ended October 22 indicated that measles, dysentery, pneumonia, scarlet fever and diphtheria increased, and inflammation of the bowels, cholera morbus and whooping cough decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at thirty-eight places, scarlet fever at thirty-six, typhoid fever at fifty-nine and measles at four places.

Death of a Veteran.

Gen. Benjamin F. Partridge, residing 6 miles east of Bay City, died a few nights ago. For over a year he has suffered from heart disease. Gen. Partridge served through the war with Michigan troops, retiring with the rank of brevet brigadier general. He was a prominent figure in grand army circles.

Michigan Liquor Dealers.

The State Liquor Dealers' association in annual session at Saginaw, elected officers as follows:

Robert Deterich, of Saginaw, president; S. J. Carroll, of Jackson, vice president; George Herrion, of Detroit, secretary; S. L. Baker, of Kalamazoo, treasurer; Joseph Maney and L. C. Bolden, of Saginaw, and Thomas Navin, of Detroit, executive board.

And a bottle of Parmelee's Sarsaparilla in every household and the country could be called comparatively happy and safe. Parmelee's Sarsaparilla is the great blood purifier and will cure any of the ailments which come from impure blood, sluggish circulation, inactive liver, or impaired secretions. It is a vegetable compound of perfect purity and great strength, and its effects in the system "all run down" from any of the above causes is really remarkable. Only 50 cents a bottle at your druggist's.

THE BOSS HORSE LINIMENT.

SEBRING, TIOGA CO., Pa. June 29, '92.

John Messner, a prominent farmer of this place, has cured a bad spavin and also a sweeney on the same horse with two bottles of Parmelee's Universal Liniment. Jacob Rawscher and James Bailey have also cured spavins on their horses with it. It is the boss horse liniment. HENRY DYCKER.

Sold by dealers. 25 and 50 cents a bottle.

"IT HEALS ALL WOUNDS BUT THOSE OF LOVE."

Parmelee's Household Ointment. The best ointment made. 25 cents.

I was troubled with catarrh for seven years previous to commencing the use of Ely's Cream Balm. It has done for me what other so-called cures have failed to do—cured me. The effect of the Balm seemed magical.—Clarence L. Huff, Biddeford, Me.

After trying many remedies for catarrh during past twelve years, I tried Ely's Cream Balm with complete success. It is over one year since I stopped using it and have had no return of catarrh. I recommend it to all my friends. —Milton T. Palm, Reading, Pa.

When the temperature takes a drop many a man emulates its example by taking several.

Do not suppose that because it is recommended for animals that Arnica & Oil Liniment is an offensive preparation. It will not stain clothing or the fairest skin.

"Rather look on inward worth than outward show." If you trust to Pearline you can do both. It will show its worth in washing clothes and cleaning house, with half of the labor and none of the usual troubles. You will only be "tried" if you try to do without it. Nothing can suffer if you use it; everything will suffer if you don't.

Beware [illegible] Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as" Pearline. It's FALSE. Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, he is trying to sell you what he can make more profit on. 286 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

CURE

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

A large manufacturer, whose affairs were very much embarassed, and who was overworked and broken down with nervous exhaustion, went to a celebrated specialist. He was told that the only thing needed was to be relieved of care and worry, and have a change of thought. This doctor was more considerate of his patient's health than of his financial circumstances. He ought to have advised him to use Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine, the best remedy for nervous prostration, sleeplessness, dizziness, headache, ill effects of spirits, tobacco, coffee, opium, etc. Thousands testify to cures. Book and trial bottle free at Baker & Hall's.

Lane's Family Medicine moves the bowels each day. Most people need to use it.

The Arena for November.

The Arena for November closes its sixth volume with a table of contents, at once strong, varied and of general interest. This Review continues to grow in favor without lessening in a jot its bold assault on conventional shams and wrongs of the age. Nor does it show any sign of being less hospitable to new progressive and reformative thought. It is conspicuously fair and unquestionably the boldest Review of our time. The Arena may be termed the Free Lance among the world's great reviews. It has never curried the favor of the rich or catered to public opinion, and yet it has behind it a record of unparalleled progress in public favor. In the November issue are some notable and timely papers on "Lord Salisbury's Afghan Policy," by Rev. Thomas P. Hughes; "The Practical Application of the New Education" by Prof. J. R. Buchanan; "The West in Literature," by Hamlin Garland; "Psychical Research: Its Present Status and Theories," by Rev. M. J. Savage. The famous Shakespearean controversy is continued. Dr. Henry Sheffield has a paper on Asiatic cholera and Dr. Harrt writes at length to prove that Bible wine was alcoholic. The poetry of the number is by Joaquin Miller and Gerald Massey and the fiction by Will N. Harben and Will Allen Dromgoole. Mr. Flower notices at length some of the silent forces of civilization seldom taken into account by writers on social problems. The Arena should be read by all persons in sympathy with reformative and progressive ideas.

They were talking of the intelligence of animals. "I have seen a hog count," he said. "So have I," she said. "I have seen him count two seats in a car and take them both himself.

ESTATE OF ELIZA GRAY.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, on Tuesday the 25th day of October, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Eliza Gray, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Nella Ann Gray, a daughter of said deceased, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to petitioner and Alice Rynd, Mary E. Gray and Joseph E. Gray, the executrixes and executor in said instrument named, or to some other suitable person,

It is ordered, that Monday, the 28th day of November next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a certain mortgage, bearing date April 13th, 1891, executed by Charles H. Aten to Fred J. Landgraf, whereby the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative. Said mortgage was, on the 28th day of April, 1891, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Lenawee County and State of Michigan, in Liber 124 of Mortgages, on page 562. There is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date hereof the sum of five hundred and fifty-four and thirty-three hundredths Dollars ($551.33) and no proceedings have been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof, either at law or in equity.

Notice is therefore hereby given that the premises described in said mortgage, by virtue of the said power of sale and of the statute in such case made and provided, will, on the 26th day of January, 1893, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, at the East front door of the Court House in the City of Adrian in said County (said Court House being the place where the Circuit Court for said County is held) to satisfy the sum due as aforesaid and the interest then accrued and then to become due, together with an attorney fee of $20 in said mortgage provided, and all other legal costs of foreclosure. Said premises are described in said mortgage as follows: All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, in the County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point in the East line of Pearl street, continued northward from Hewitt's addition to said Village, said point being four rods south of the Southwest corner of a parcel of land formerly owned by Wm Spath; thence running easterly parallel with and four rods distant from the South line of said Spath lot eight rods; thence South parallel with Pearl street two and one-half rods; thence West parallel with and two and one half rods distant from the first course eight rods to Pearl street; thence north on the East line of Pearl street to the place of beginning; excepting therefrom all that part thereof heretofore sold and conveyed by said Landgraf to Samuel W. Temple by deed dated November 20th, 1883, and recorded in Liber 137 of Deeds, on page 258, in the office of the Register of Deeds for said County; also excepting all that part of said above described premises covered by the Temple Brick Planing Mill.

Dated Oct. 31, 1892.

Some of our young bloods went to Adrian Tuesday night to get the report of elections—everything Democratic—Whoopee. Lenardson and Geo. Exelby are oiling their wheel-barrows, the while resting on their oars waiting further returns, each to see whether he is the one to wheel the other, and hurrah, the one for Harrison and protection the other for Cleveland and free trade.

Although ailing for some months past the sudden death of Cornelius Hoagland, last Friday night at his home, was a sad surprise to his many friends and acquaintances. For some time past he had been subject to fainting spells, but Friday night he retired seemingly as well as usual, but during the night his wife on waking, discovered that he ceased to breathe, and then it was found that the dear father and husband had passed into that sleep that knows no wakening. So passed from our midst one of our oldest settlers. We join in extending our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved family.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the many kind friends and neighbors who so kindly assisted us in our bereavement and to the choir we extend our most grateful thanks.

Mrs. Cornelius Hoagland and family.

FRANK DAVIDSON, Auctioneer.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

To Music Lovers.

The November number of Brainard's Musical World is out and contains besides a large amount of interesting reading matter, the following new music: "Amitie pour Amitie," for piano by Wm. Mason; "First Dream" Nocturne by Baumbach; and "On the Lagoon' Barcarolle by Ferber, three beautiful piano pieces, and "Bells of Seville" a charming song by W. H. Jude. Mailed for 15 cents or for 25 cents (cash or stamps) the publishers will this month mail three back numbers as samples, containing about $5.00 worth of choice music. No music lover can afford to do without the World, which is published monthly, at $1.50 per annum. Address the S. Brainard's Sons Co., Chicago, Ill.

MR. CABLE'S READING.

Mr. George W. Cable, the most eminent of American novelists, appeared before as distinguished an audience last night at the First Congreational Church as ever greeted a public speaker in Colorado Springs. The large auditorium was comfortably filled with people thoroughly capable of appreciating the efforts of the entertainer and of entering into the spirit of his work.

Shortly after 8 o'clock Rev. Mr. Gregg introduced to the audience, which was anxiously awaiting a sight of the author of the "Grandissimes," a gentlemen of slight and graceful figure with dark beard and mustaches, and attired in evening dress. This was Mr. Geo. W. Cable, store clerk, soldier, civil engineer, errand boy, newspaper reporter, and the most distinguished of living American authors. Whatever preconceived notions of this distinguished man the auditors may have had, the reality was most pleasing. In a low and pleasing voice the author began a description of the characters in his story, "Dr. Sevier." The entire reading was from scenes in that splendid work, those abounding in dialogue being chosen mostly, but closing with stirring recital of the night ride of Mary Richling through the picket lines of an army camp with her child in her arms. Of all the American authors who have taken to reading their writings before the public, Mr. Cable has been the most successful. Naturally an elocutionist, he reads with an intensity that shows his great love for the children of his brain, and with ease can make his audience laugh or cry, or hold it spellbound with a glowing description of the rich scenery of the the sunny South, or a stirring war scene. Nearly two hours were consumed in the readings, but the audience would gladly have remained longer, and will live in hope of again hearing the author who has opened up a new phase of American life and a new field of fiction in his creole stories and his delineations of creole and negro dialect.—Colorado Springs, Nov. 26, 1889. Mr. Cable opens the Tecumseh Star Course next Wednesday night.

Another Old Citizen at Rest.

Mr. Henry E. Anderson, who has resided in Tecumseh for nearly fifty years, died very suddenly on Friday, October 28th. Although he had been troubled with partial deafness for several years his general health had been good and he had long been a familiar figure among us. During the forenoon of that day he was about the house as usual and neither he nor his wife surmised that his earthly existence was so near its close. Shortly after dinner he was seized with an attack of nausea, went into the house and laid down on a couch. Mrs. Anderson went to his assistance and found him in a dying condition. A physician was summoned at once but his aid was useless. Within two hours his spirit had taken its flight to the better land. The attending physician pronounced his attack apoplexy.

Henry Anderson was one of Tecumseh's oldest and best known citizens, having come here in an early day. He established the dry goods firm of Anderson, Larned & Co. 27 years ago and by his business ability and genial character met with great success, laying the foundations of the business which has developed into the present extensive concern of Anderson & Co.

On account of failing health he retired after twelve years of business life and went to live at Cleveland, Tenn., for a few years with his son, Dr. E. C. Anderson. He then returned to Tecumseh and went into the grocery business. A few years ago he retired from business and has since lived a quiet life at his home here or with his son Will at Devil's Lake. He was 65 years old at the time of his death.

Mr. Anderson was a consistent member of the M. E. Church and in all the walks of life an exemplary man. Possessed of a generous, genial disposition he was exceedingly popular while in business, and though of late years an affliction of partial deafness has tended to keep him from mingling with the public as much as he formerly did, he has always preserved the esteem and affection of a large circle of friends. He was a brother of Albert and Egbert Anderson and Mrs. Asa Rosecrans. Besides the two sons above mentioned he leaves a wife, to whom forty years of wedded life have rendered the loss an irreparable one.

The funeral services were delayed until Wednesday to enable his son, Dr. Anderson of Tennessee, to be present. They were held at his late residence that afternoon, being conducted by Rev. J. P. Varner, assisted by Revs. J. Phelps and W. H. Babbitt. A large concourse of neighbors and friends assembled to pay the last tribute of respect to an honored citizen. The afflicted family receive the hearty sympathy of the entire community.

A Hickory Pole Raising.

Last Saturday afternoon a good crowd assembled at James Clarkson's in Macon and raised a beautiful hickory pole, from the top of which a Cleveland and Stevenson streamer was unfurled to the breeze. It was a splendid pole for a single stick. Isaac Hendershot was there with his big rope and tackle, to superintend the job and it is needless to say that the pole went up without a hitch. He is a very handy man to have around on such occasions. James and John Clarkson were responsible for the affair, but all the neighbors in that vicinity were on hand to lend their aid. After giving three lusty cheers for Cleveland and Stevenson and the man who bossed the job the crowd was invited into the house, where seating accommodations had been provided for them. A brief season of speech making followed, during which S. C. Stacy essayed to prove the proposition that the tariff is a tax. The most interesting feature of the program, however, was yet to come, for Mrs. Clarkson then took charge of the ceremonies and served a sumptuous lunch of sandwiches, coffee, et cetera. The fine reputation of the matrons of Macon for good cookery did not suffer in the least. The lunch embraced those substantials which our Macon housewives know so well how to prepare, while the pumpkin pie and doughnuts were fit to set before Grover Cleveland himself. It was an innovation on the ordinary political meeting which those who participated heartily enjoyed. After lusty cheers for the hostess and many wishes that Grover, Frances and Ruth might occupy the White House again on the 4th of next March, the crowd dispersed. Several ladies were in attendance who seemed to enjoy the affair equally with the men, and all present voted that it was one of the most enjoyable political gatherings that has been held in Macon during the present campaign.

A Joyful Wedding.

A quiet little company of near friends and neighbors assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Asel Russell in Macon on the evening of November 3d to witness the marriage of their only daughter, Miss Mary Cornelia Russell, to Mr. Herbert E. Boyd, of Ypsilanti, Mich., The marriage was solemnized by Rev. J. I. Gulick at 8 o'clock, p. m. A bounteous supper, prepared by adepts in the culinary art, was enjoyed by all. After the hearty congratulations of all present, among whom was Mr. Cadmus, of Harvey, Ill., and an evening of good cheer the company separated, with the best wishes for the happiness and prosperity of the young couple who have thus started out on life's journey together. Their future home will be in Detroit.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to return our heartfelt thanks to our many friends for the kindness and sympathy given us in our recent sad bereavement. We would make special mention of the Pastor of the Reformed Church, thanking him for his words of counsel and consolation; also to the singers of Ridgeway for their presence and the rendering of those beautiful selections of music.

TWENTY MONTHS OF M'KINLEY.

Five Hundred Wage Reductions in Protected Industries—"The Tariff is Doing Its Own Talking," Says William McKinley—It Has Idle Workingmen For an Audience.

In the New York Weekly World of July 13, Hon. John DeWitt Warner, of the Reform club, published a list of about 450 wage reductions, lockouts, etc., that have occurred in protected industries since the McKinley bill took effect. It is not pretended that the list is complete, and indeed, the Reform clerk who prepared this list has since come across enough items to swell the account to more than 500, and the end is not yet.

This list was prepared to refute the numerous declarations of McKinley, Harrison & Co. that high tariff "protection" raises wages and provides remunerative employment for all. These promises have been ringing in our ears for the last four years, and are just as numerous now while thousands of men are on strike against heavy wage reductions in the greatest protected industry in the greatest "protected" state. The American Economist of July 22 bobs up serenely to tell the Homestead strikers that "protection tends to raise, or at least maintain wages."

In the most abbreviated form, and in nonpareil type, the list occupies eleven columns of the World. The St. Louis Republic of July 19 has summarized a part of the list as follows:

The first of these strikes took place sixteen days after the McKinley bill went into effect, when the Richland and Nelson miners at Dayton, Tenn., to the number of 1,200 went on a strike on October 16, 1890, against a reduction of wages.

During the month of October, 1890, there were strikes of canmakers in Indianapolis, moroccomakers in New York, cigarmakers in New York, sugarhouse hands in Brooklyn, silk ribbon weavers in New York—in every case against a reduction of wages.

In November, 1890, there were reductions in wages, followed in many cases by strikes, as follows: Workmen in electric light works in Lynn, Mass.; spoolers at Lowell, Mass.; Swiss embroidery makers in Jersey City, N. J.; cotton weavers at Lonsdale, R. I.; thread spinners at Newark, N. J.; undergarment makers at Ashland, Pa.; trimmers in eighteen hat factories at Danbury, Conn.; vestmakers in New York; suspender makers in New York.

In December, 1890, there were reductions, lockouts and strikes of lasters at Portland, Me.; shoemakers at St. Paul, Minn.; miners at Shamokin, Pa.; rolling mill hands at Lancaster, Pa.; pottery workers throughout the United States; silk weavers at Trenton, N. J.; tool makers at Plainfield, N. J., and plush cap makers in New York.

In January, 1891, wage reductions affected the iron and coal workers at Lancaster, Pa., and vicinity; there was a 10 per cent. reduction at Carnegie's Homestead works; a reduction of 30 per cent. at the Otis steel works at Cleveland, O.; weavers at Fall River, Mass., went on strike; Frick Coke Co. shut down eleven furnaces, throwing 500 men out of employment; there were reductions or strikes in steel works in Chicago, Scranton and elsewhere, and wage troubles all over the country, including miners, shoemakers, clothing makers, window-glass makers, furniture workers and nearly every class of skilled labor.

In February, 1891, the record shows about the same number of strikes as in January, including all classes of labor, the most important of which were a 10 per cent. reduction by the Pennsylvania Steel Co.; Brooks Iron Co. at Birdboro, Pa., closed down; reduction of 30 to 60 per cent., in the Buckeye Reaper works at Akron, O.; strike of 16,000 cokeworkers in Pennsylvania against a 10 per cent. reduction; strike of furnacemen at Letonia, O.

In March, 1891, the list is nearly twice as long as February or January, including nearly twice as many men in all callings, the most important being a reduction in the Glendon Iron works near Easton, Pa.; cigarmkers in New York city; mill operatives at Fall River; Knelling mill workers at Little Falls, N. Y.; weavers at Providence, R. I.; iron puddlers at Pottstown, Pa.; steelmakers at Scranton, Pa.; silk mill hands in Connecticut and New Jersey; puddlers at Richmond Va.; nailmakers at Harrisburg, Pa.; weavers at Lawrence, Mass., and miners in several states.

April, 1891—The list is shorter, but includes iron and steel works in various large establishments in Pennsylvania; shirtmakers in New York; brickmakers at Trenton, N. J., rolling mill hands at New Haven, Conn.; silk weavers at Paterson, N. J.; tin and sheet-iron workers in New Jersey.

May, 1891—The list again is lengthy, showing that most of the old strikes and lockouts are still on, and that beginning May 7, when thirteen separate and distinct strikes occurred in various trades in different parts of the country, there were twenty-three new strikes during the month.

June, 1891—The new lockouts or strikes and wage reductions announced about equaled in number the record for May.

July, 1891—The first strike announced is of cloakmakers at Cleveland, O., on July 2, and from then on to the end of the month there were strikes and lockouts averaging about one every two days, the most notable feature being the closing down of several large establishments "owing to dullness of trade."

August, 1891—The list is short, but shows general reductions in all trades, including a reduction ranging from 15 to 45 per cent. in pottery works at Macomb, Ill.; 50 per cent. reduction in the Arcade file works at Sing Sing, N. Y.; 25 per cent. reduction in pay of tin and sheet-iron workers.

September, 1891—The list shows trouble in the cotton mills at Fall River, Mass., and Willimantic, Conn., and strikes or reductions in many other trades in all parts of the country, in which iron and steel mill employes are again conspicuous.

October, 1891.—The list begins with a lockout of silk ribbon weavers at Paterson, N. J., who refused to accept a reduction of wages, and work thirteen hrs to extort from our people the full tariff rate as a bonus for their own pockets; whereas if it were not for the tariff, no combines would 'work' unless it included the whole world. As to a protected industry, therefore, the tariff makes it as much easier to form trusts than it would otherwise be, as it is easier successfully to combine the few manufacturers of a single nation than it is to get and keep together in harmony many times as many manufacturers, scattered all over the world.

"Monopoly once secured, the results are:

"First—These combines, covering as they do many great branches of protected manufacture, and affecting many others, raise the price of manufactured goods, so that the consumer gets less for the same amount of money. It is generally the case also that a large proportion of the concerns which have combined together are those which cannot manufacture the manufactured goods as economically as the others. The ordinary course has been to pay such a certain price for remaining idle, leaving all of the product to be made at manufactories which can produce it most cheaply, while instead of returning this benefit in cheaper goods to the public and to wage earners in other industries, the combine keeps up the price, not merely to afford exhorbitant profit to the plants still kept at work, but to pay to the idle manufactories the bonus agreed upon for their remaining nonproductive.

"Second—The object of a trust combination is to secure larger profits on a limited product. If successful, therefore, the members of a trust make up, by the high rate of their profits, what they lose by the smallness of their sales, and they are, therefore, just as well off as though, by selling goods more cheaply, they made larger sales. It is the amount of goods to be manufactured, and not the profit that the employer is to make out of each item, that determines the demand for labor and the wages he must pay. A trust combine in a protected industry is, therefore, an arrangement by which, government keeping out foreign competition, our manufactures take advantage of this fact, and, making our people pay enough more for the few goods they are able to buy, keeps profits as large as they would have been from sales at a more reasonable price while employing less labor and at lower wages than otherwise. Trusts, therefore, enable manufacturers to make the most money by employing the least labor.

"Third—The more closely organized the combine of employers in any one industry, the better able are they to conquer their laborers in disputes as to wages or hours. Of course employers could organize for this purpose even though not for the other. Late experience, however, has shown, as might have been expected, that combines, originally formed to increase the price of goods, or restrict production, have been the most frequent foundation of a combine successfully to cope with labor organizations."

"Below are given one hundred samples of tariff trusts selected from the myriads in existence. Three things are so general that they may be considered as universal incidents of a tariff trust—the arbitrary crushing out of competition, reduction of the supply of the product so as to secure the highest prices that will not destroy the demand, and the reduction of wages—both as a consequence of the reduction produced and to limit demand for labor, and the advantage which employers, leagued in a trust combine, enjoy in dealing with workingmen dependent upon their earnings in the different localities throughout the country, whence they and their families cannot move without hardship. Again, it must not be imagined that the writer considers all trusts as equally criminal on the part of those who engage in them. Indeed, in many of the cases given below the particular trust in question is the resort to which the manufacturers in the line of industry involved have been driven in self-protection against other trusts either in the manufactures which are their their raw materials or in those to which their own own product is marketed."

A Millenium Overdue.

It has been nearly two years since our present tariff act went into effect. It was to encourage industries and provide work for all at higher wages. An era of peace and plenty was to follow. There was no doubt about it. But what has been our experience? Besides thousands of strikes, over 500 wage reductions in protected industries have been reported. At the present time there are labor riots in Pennsylvania, New York, Tennessee and Wyoming, and the militia is on guard in three states. At no other time in our history have there been so many ready to fill any vacancies that may occur in the ranks of labor. If it were not for sentiment and fear 100,000 men would be begging for the places of the 3,000 strikers at Homestead. And this is the condition of labor in spite of our big crops and high prices for them. It would not be fair to blame McKinley for all this—the excessive heat of this summer, or the democratic house or a thousand other things may have temporarily unsettled business and working men's minds. Such unforseen events as these would upset the best laid plans. But how many years do you think it would take, major, before your pet measure will begin to usher in the wage earner's promised millenium?

"Triumphant Democracy."

You can read all about it in Carnegie's pages,
Where he tells how high tariffs result in big wages,
But lockouts and strikes as the fruits of protection
Will be apt to secure Grover Cleveland's election.
Carnegie, perhaps by his blatant hypocrisy
May thus pave the way for "Triumphant Democracy."

A Boston Boy's Eyesight Saved—Perhaps His Life

By Hood's Sarsaparilla—Blood Poisoned by Canker.

Read the following from a grateful mother: "My little boy had Scarlet Fever when 4 years old, and it left him very weak and with blood poisoned with canker. His eyes became so inflamed that his sufferings were intense, and for seven weeks he Could Not Open His Eyes.

I took him twice during that time to the Eye and Ear Infirmary on Charles street, but their remedies failed to do him the faintest shadow of good. I commenced giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and it soon cured him. I have never doubted that it saved his sight, even if not his very life. You may use this testimonial in any way you choose. The November North American.

The North American Review for November, besides being very strong as usual in timely articles by famous writers, presents from Mr. Blaine the fullest utterance that statesman has made on the issues involved in the forthcoming National contest between the parties. His article is entitled The Presidential Campaign of 1892, and is written with great vigor and characteristic purity of style. It offers many new points of view. The publication in The North American Review of this important paper is significant of the vigilance of the editor in providing the public with utterances of authority adapted to the moment. The Democratic Outlook describes the article contributed by the Hon. W. F. Harrity, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, Mr. Harrity, with a marked degree of frankness, goes over the ground and urges many reasons for his belief that the control of the government will be transferred to the Democratic party by the November election. The Rev. Bishop Foss, of Philadelphia, in his article, Politics and the Pulpit, adds a contribution to the series of articles on this subject that have recently appeared in The Review, and he, like other writers in this series, urges the duty of the citizen to concern himself with important issues in politics. Prof. H. H. Boyesen, in The Scandinavian in the United States, gives an interesting account of the conditions of life among these new citizens points out their value to the country, a race easily assimilated, but holding close to their own native prejudices. Wanted, a New Party, is a plea from T. V. Powderly, who speaks with official authority, for a better appreciation of the rights of the laboring class.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

A BURDENSOME YOKE.

Sensational Charges of Cruelty Made in a Detroit Divorce Suit.

After twenty-five years of married life Mrs. Elizabeth Hayes has brought suit in Detroit for divorce from her husband, Edward Hayes, on sensational grounds of cruelty. Hayes is a wealthy farmer who owns property in the suburbs of the city said to be worth nearly $250,000. They were married in 1867, she says, and lived together up to last September. At that time the complainant was obliged to leave the defendant on account of cruelty which, the bill declares, no other woman was ever before subjected to. She was repeatedly beaten with sticks and other things, and on one occasion, just before becoming a mother, she was struck in the stomach with a stick so violently that the child was killed. Proceedings for divorce were started in 1889, but were abandoned, she asserts, on the defendant's promise to reform, but he continued his acts of brutality. The couple have eight children.

The State Banks.

Commissioner of Banking Sherwood has issued a statement of the condition of the 136 state banks and three trust companies of the state as shown by reports made at the close of business September 30. The total reserves are given at $81,213,426.98, and the combined capital $10,044,409.07. The total deposits were $3,711,701.87, of which $36,959,572.87 were savings deposits. Since July 12, the date of the last report, the total deposits increased $3,973,437.63 and the savings deposits $1,053,201.88.

Six Men Probably Drowned.

The tug Edward Taske, having in tow a scow with provisions from Duluth for the lumber camp at Big bay, 20 miles from Marquette, was struck by a fierce northwest gale which caused the scow to pitch so heavily that she parted her tow line. The tug found it impossible to pick it up and had to abandon the scow with a crew of six men to their fate. There was small probability of any of the crew reaching the shore alive.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy-five observers in different parts of the state for the week ended October 29 indicated that inflammation of the brain, membranous croup, typho-malarial fever and measles increased, and cholera infantum and puerperal fever decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at thirty-seven places, scarlet fever at thirty-two, typhoid fever at fifty-eight and measles at seven places.

Lost in a Gale.

The schooner Nellie Hammond was sunk during a gale by striking a pier while entering the harbor at Manistee, and the captain, Louis Michalison, was washed overboard and drowned, the remainder of the crew escaping. At Sand Beach the waves went over the top of the breakwater to the height of 30 feet. An unknown sailor was washed off the main pier in the harbor and drowned.

Will Be Sent Back to China.

Lee Fun and Ho Teo, two of the three Chinamen who were caught at Jackson while on their way to Chicago, were found guilty by Commissioner McMath of being ineligible to a residence in the United States and sentenced to ten days in the Detroit house of correction, then to be deported to China. Lee Tong proved he was a legitimate resident of Sault Ste. Marie and was discharged.

DEATH ON THE RAIL.

An Express Train Collides with a Freight in Scotland.

Ten Lives Lost and Many Persons Injured—The Signal Man Was Forced to Work Though Completely Exhausted.

A FATAL COLLISION.

LONDON, Nov. 4.—A terrible railway accident, in which at least thirteen lives were lost and thirty persons were injured, occurred early Wednesday morning near Thirsk, in Yorkshire. The east coast express train for London collided at full speed with a goods train on a siding at Manor House and the wreck of the express train was complete.

The wreck took fire almost instantly from escaping gas, and the smoke and flame, with the shrieks of the dying and wounded, made a horrible scene. All day and throughout the night men have been working upon the wreck, and it is expected that when the tender of the express engine is removed several bodies will be found beneath it. The signal man, Holmes, who is held responsible for the disaster, shows signs of mental derangement. Much sympathy is expressed for him, and there are not a few people who declare that the stationmaster is the one who is really responsible for the wreck. Holmes had passed Tuesday night at the bedside of his dying child. After the death of the child he asked the stationmaster for leave of absence, but his requst was refused and he was compelled to take his place at the signals. Physically worn out by the fatigue of his sickbed vigils and tired mentally, he fell asleep. The accident gives special interest to the evidence of the witnesses now testifying as to railway management before the royal labor commission. The men assert that they are overworked, while the railway officials testify that it is impossible to work the traffic of their lines in a fixed day of ten hours. Another lesson taught by the accident is the superiority of the American car over the English car. In a collision the latter collapse like egg boxes.

A GREAT STRIKE.

Toilers of Many Trades Quit Work in the City of New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 7. — The big strike began Saturday, and the chances are that one of the most colossal struggles which have ever taken place in this country between labor and capital will ensue. The question at issue is wholly one of unionism, not wages or hours of labor. The amalgamated union insists that merchants employ none but union teamsters and warehousemen. On this issue a strike has been under way since October 22. Attempts have been made to arbitrate the matter, but the union, not satisfied with the action of the merchants, first threatened a general strike Thursday and on Saturday ordered it.

The plan decided on by it is for one trade after another to strike until business is completely paralyzed here. The first to go out were the clothing store clerks, who stopped at noon. The Musicians' union followed, interfering with the matinees and causing the opera house to shut its doors. The car drivers followed at 5 o'clock, causing great inconvenience, as the carriage drivers and cabmen were already on a strike, and there was no way of getting up town. The paper hangers, gas workers and a number of others next struck. The union includes sixty-one organizations and it is said that all or nearly all will be out.

Shot His Partner Dead.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Nov. 5.—Dr. J. H. Barr and John Mulford left this city a short time ago and opened a sanitarium in Oregon. They quarreled and separated because of the doctor's familiarity with the wife of his partner, and Mulford went to Eugene City. Friday word was received by relatives of the parties that Mulford had returned to the sanitarium and in a fit of jealous rage shot the doctor.

Verdict in the Schwatka Inquest.

PORTLAND, Ore., Nov. 4.—The coroner held an inquest yesterday on the remains of the late Lieut. Frederick G. Schwatka, who died shortly after being found in a street in this city Wednesday, and the jury returned a verdict that the deceased came to his death from an overdose of morphine taken accidentally. The remains will be interred at Salem, Ore.

Many Incendiary Fires.

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Nov. 4.—In the past thirty-six hours seven incendiary fires were discovered in different parts of this place. They were attributed to the strikers who threatened to get even with the town council and everybody in general for trying to get the Carnegie company to start its mill with non-union men.

Starving in Mexico.

ZACATECAS, Mexico, Nov. 4.—Thousands of poor persons in Zacatecas, Mexico, were said to be on the verge of starvation, and many had fled to the mountains, where they were living on the prickly pear, maguey plant and mesquite bean.

District of Columbia Debt.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—United States Treasurer Nebecker in his annual report to the secretary of the treasury shows that the District of Columbia debt has been decreased $3,456,750, leaving the total debt $18,149,000.

To Be Shot.

PROVO, U. T., Nov. 5.—Enoch Davis, who murdered his wife at Vernall, U. T., last June by crushing her skull with a revolver, has been sentenced to be shot to death in the jail yard at Provo, December 30.

September Immigration.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—A table issued by the bureau of statistics shows that the immigration into this country during September, the great cholera month, was 28,227, against 52,706 in September, 1891.

OUTLAW CHRISTIE KILLED.

Federal Officers Drive Him from His Hiding Place with Dynamite.

TAHLEQUAH, I. T., Nov. 5.—Ned Christie, the notorious outlaw who killed "Dan" Maples, a United States official, a year ago, is dead. He was surrounded about daylight Thursday by sixteen deputy United States marshals, led by "Dick" Bruno and A. G. White. The presence of the officers was unknown to Christie until sunrise, when one of his companions came out of the cabin where Christie had fortified himself. He was ordered to surrender, but the only reply was a shower of bullets, none of which, however, took effect. The fire was returned and he was severely wounded. He managed to get back into the house, however, and then began an all-day's battle in which neither side suffered any damage.

Later in the evening the officers resorted to dynamite and succeeded in blowing down part of the house and setting fire to the ruins. When the blaze was at its fiercest Christie was seen to emerge from under the floor and started to run, but was ordered to halt. He did not stop and was riddled with bullets, mutilating him terribly and knocking him down. He tried to regain his feet, but another volley settled him. The officers then turned their attention to the burning building, and discovered Charlie Hart trying to escape. He was terribly burned, but was able to run. He was arrested. The body of Wolf, who had been wanted badly, was burned to a crisp in the building, which was entirely consumed. The females of the Christie family were allowed to retreat at the beginning of the fight.

FOR A DAY OF THANKSGIVING.

Proclamation Issued by President Harrison Naming November 24.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—The following proclamation was issued Friday afternoon:

"The gifts of God to our people during the last year have been so abundant and so special that the spirit of devout thanksgiving awaits not a call, but only the appointment of a day when it may have a common expression. He has staid the pestilence at our doors; He has given us more love for the free civil institutions in the creation of which His directing Providence was so conspicuous; He has awakened a deeper reverence for law; He has widened our philanthropy by a call to succor the distress in other lands; He has blessed our schools and is bringing forward a patriotic and God-fearing generation to execute His great and benevolent designs for our country; He has given us great increase in material wealth and a wide diffusion of contentment and comfort in the homes of our people; He has given His grace to the sorrowing.

"Wherefore, I, Benjamin Harrison, president of the United States, do call upon all our people to observe, as we have been wont, Thursday, the 24th day of this month of November, as a day of thanksgiving to God for His mercies and of supplication for His continued care and grace.

"In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the city of Washington this fourth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and seventeenth.

"BENJAMIN HARRISON.

"By the president:
"JOHN W. FOSTER, Secretary of State."

ANOTHER OUTBREAK IN BRAZIL

Fighting Reported in Porto Alegre, State of Rio Grande do Sul.

VALPARAISO, Nov. 4.—A dispatch from Yayuaron, Brazil, says that another revolution has broken out in Porto Alegre, in the state of Rio Grande do Sul. The government troops charged on the revolutionists and killed a number of them. There is great excitement in the state of Rio Grande do Sul and it is feared that the scenes of the last revolution will be repeated. A number of young men of the opposing forces at Santiago del Estero have indulged in street fighting and several lives were lost.

A Royal Funeral.

STUTTGART, Nov. 5.—The funeral of the dowager queen of Wurtemburg, who died on October 80, took place at 10 a. m. In the procession from the palace to the church Emperor William walked beside King William, of Wurtemburg. Court Chaplain Schmidt delivered the funeral oration. After the ceremonies King William, of Wurtemburg, and the relatives of the dead dowager descended into the vault where the remains were deposited.

The Dead Letter Office.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—The annual report of the superintendent of the dead letter office shows a decrease of 48,480 pieces, or nearly 1 per cent. less than the number received during the fiscal year of 1891, notwithstanding the fact that the postal business of the country has increased nearly 8 per cent.

Killed by Electricity.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Nov. 5.—At the Washburn & Moen works Friday Paul Paulinski was killed by a charge of electricity. A hoe he carried over his shoulder came in contact with the electric light wire, and a 500-volt current passed through him. He was 26 years old.

Monument to Anarchy.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—With impressive and simple ceremonies Sunday afternoon 5,000 people laid the corner stone for a monument in Waldheim cemetery which is intended to perpetuate the story of the Haymarket riot as told by the friends of the four men hanged November 11, 1887.

Illegal Registration Punished.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—John Murphy, arrested in this city for illegal registration, was sentenced yesterday to three years' imprisonment by Judge Benedict, and Judge Martine sentenced G. C. Holland and W. Green to two years each in prison for the same offense.

Number of Chinamen Entering Canada.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 4.—The total number of Chinese who entered Canada and paid the poll-tax of $50 each during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1892, was 3,276, as against 2,114 during the previous year.

His Horse Killed Him.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a common pimple to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

D. RANSOM, SON & CO., Proprietors, BUFFALO N. Y

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

TRIUMPHANTLY ELECTED BY A HEAVY POPULAR AND ELECTORAL MAJORITY.

The People Believe that Public Office is a Public Trust—The Lower House Largely Democratic and the U. S. Senate Probably the Same.

Although Tuesday's election was not so much of a landslide as that of two years ago, the victory was a far more substantial one in its practical results. The poll was a very heavy one over the entire country, and the Cleveland forces won a crushing victory at all the critical points in the line of battle. States that were naturally Democratic have doubled their majorities, while in the heavy Republican States their majorities have been whittled down to the vanishing point or wiped out entirely. Several of the Western States which have never wavered in their Republican allegiance before have voted for Weaver. Nearly every State that was classed as doubtful has voted for Cleveland and Stevenson. They carry the Solid South, with the possible exception of West Virginia, and also New York, New Jersey, Connecticut, Indiana, Illinois and Wisconsin. The news this morning indicates that Ohio has gone Democratic, but the full returns will undoubtedly give that State to Harrison. The Democrats have elected ten Congressmen in that State, where they only expected five or six.

The Democrats will have a good working majority of from 50 to 75 in the Lower House, and what is better still, the present indications are that they will make sufficient gains in the U. S. Senate to control that body. The Senate was the last citadel of the plutocrats. If the Democrats control that body they can enact the reform legislation which they have been trying in vain to compass for the past sixteen years and relieve the people of the burdens of war taxation.

The following figures give the present electoral status of all the States. These figures may be changed by fuller returns, but we think no State will be transferred from one column to another. It is impossible to give the detailed figures at the hour we go to press. There may be some surprises yet in store. California is tending very strongly towards Cleveland and the full returns may swing that State into the Democratic column. The tables given below represent the States carried by each party, with the electoral votes of each. Michigan carries the Republican state ticket by about 10,000 plurality. The Democrats elect four electors and four Congressmen sure and probably five.

THE RESULT IN TECUMSEH.

The election in Tecumseh last Tuesday passed off very quietly but an unusually large vote was cast. The total poll averaged 750, the highest number for any candidate being 754. There was less splitting than usual. Deducting the splits for Charles Burridge and John D. Shull there were less than fifty split tickets all told. The straight numbered 625, divided as follows: Democrat, 302; Republican, 291; Prohibition 33; People's 2.

Owing to the cold, raw weather, there were no crowds congregated on the streets and everything was quiet about the polls. Men went to the polling places, deposited their ballots and then went home or to their work. Ticket peddlers were nowhere and the usual hangers-on were taking a rest elsewhere. The new system worked like a charm and Tecumseh never saw a quieter or fairer election.

The two election boards were constituted as follows:

EAST DISTRICT.

Alf. James, Chairman.
R. S. Moore, S. P. Hosmer, clerks.
J. W. Wightman, Jehiel Davidson, Inspectors.
J. C. M. Haney, M. Eckert, gatekeepers.
Matt Root and Dick Anderson, challengers.

There were several voters challenged in this district on the ground of non-residence or improper naturalization.

WEST DISTRICT.

J. F. N. Bowen, Chairman,
Don Bowen, Sam. J. McClure, Clerks.
Albert Hyde, Jr., H. Weller, Inspectors.
Henry Keyser, W. S. Morse, Gatekeepers.
Fred Shepherd. Will J. Ingersoll, challengers.

There were but few challenges in this district.

THE FIGURES IN DETAIL.

Below we give a table showing the exact number of votes cast for every candidate on all four tickets, also showing the total number cast for each office. The tickets were arranged on the ballot in this order; 1st, Democrat; 2nd, Republican; 3rd, Prohibition; 4th, People's. The names in the following table are given in the same order. The People's party had no county ticket and as there were only two votes cast we omit the names, hence the actual total poll is 2 more than the totals in the table.

Amendment—Yes, 10; No, 5.

The total poll four years ago was 749, almost the same as this year, of which Harrison received 340, Cleveland 324 and Fisk 85. The Democrats made a handsome gain Tuesday and the Prohibition loss must have been about equally divided between the two old parties.

Twenty Years of Wedded Life.

On Saturday evening, Oct. 29th, Mr. and Mrs. Friend A. McNeil celebrated their china wedding at their cosy residence on Van Buren street, in this village. It was indeed a most joyous occasion. The guests began to assemble about five o'clock and at six their home was overflowing with as merry a company as we have seen in many a long day. It was an old fashioned home like gathering of relatives and acquaintances. The maiden of sweet sixteen and the silver haired matron, the young man and the grandfather were all represented. After a season of social converse and congratulations the guests were treated to a sumptuous repast, to which all did ample justice. The evening was then whiled away in handshaking and merriment and in admiring the beautiful gifts that loaded down the parlor tables. These consisted mostly of china ware; although there were many other articles of use and beauty, such as table cutlery, books and ornamental bric-a-brac. These gifts disclosed, far better than cold words could express, how many warm friendships they had formed during the twenty years now forever gone, except as recorded on memory's page.

On the 29th of October 1872, Friend McNeil and Flora Pennock assumed the marriage vows and began their matrimonial journey together. They have not been blessed with wealth in the usual acceptation of that term, but they have enjoyed what is denied to many of the rich, a model home of unalloyed happiness, presided over by fatherly tenderness and care and by motherly love and affection. Their domestic life has been a peculiarly happy one. That a kind Providence may accord to them many more years of domestic bliss is the sincere wish of all who had the pleasure of attending their twentieth anniversary.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

The drummer is legion at this season of the year.

Sam A. James, of Detroit, was in town over Sunday.

Albert Brewer returned from his Boston trip Monday, just in time to vote.

It did'nt rain last Tuesday, but it was cold and chilly enough and an awful dry day.

Mrs. N. H. Kimball, of Adrian, was the guest of Mrs. Judge Stacy the first of the week.

The Addison Courier is setting its local page in new brevier type, which is a great improvement.

Alva Spayde has a cold weather card in to-day's paper. Cold weather is upon us, hence you should read it.

The great fire in Milwaukee will be fully illustrated in the number of Harper's Weekly dated November 12th.

Harry Martin, who was at home last week, returned to Chicago Tuesday afternoon. He has a clerkship in J. V. Farwell & Co's.

In D. R. Gibson's special notice last week, "three year old Percheron mare" should have read five year old. She is a daisy and a fine carriage horse for any one.

Claud VanTine came home from Ann Arbor Tuesday to vote. He returned that afternoon. He is getting finely started in his studies there and is more than satisfied thus far.

J. J. Boyd, of Ada, Kent Co., was in town Sunday. He came out to attend Mrs. Thos. Boyd's funeral. He is prospering in his present location, having been there eleven years.

Tecumseh last week had twenty-six houses with the measles in them. First she had electric lights, then waterworks, then measles. Tecumseh seems to be after everything she can lay her hands on.—Adrian Press.

The editor of the Tecumseh Herald, comes in, cold and shivering, from a ten mile drive after a campaign speech, backs up a moment to a cold stove and advertises "Ten cords of block stove wood, wanted immediately."—Adrian Press.

One of the most interesting features of the convention to be held at Ridgeway Nov. 15th, 16th and 17th, will be a gold medal contest on the evening of the 16th. Some of the best speakers in the county have been procured, good music will be furnished, and an enjoyable time is anticipated.

Mrs. Beneway is visiting friends about Tecumseh for two or three weeks. She brings good news from Chas. Beneway, who is now foreman of a large stock farm near Alpena. He evidently has a good position and is thriving. He sends us a mammoth potato, which shows what the Alpena farms can do in the potatic line.

The W. C. T. U. public meeting last Sunday evening at the opera house was a fine one. An introduction was given by Rev. James Gorton, prayer was offered by Rev. D. T. Lewis and Rev. J. Varner gave a lengthy address. Tunes from Gospel Hymns were sung by the congregation with Miss Ella Jackson presiding at the piano.

A new counterfeit $5 silver certificate is reported to be in circulation. It has the new back and is of the series 1892; check letter C; Rosecrans, register; Nohleker, treasurer. It is a dangerous counterfeit. The paper is fair and is in imitation of the distinctive disturbed fiber paper used by the government, the fiber being imitated in blue and pink silk by the use of a pen.

The Tecumseh Democratic canvass this year was very accurate.

Miss Julia Wright has returned home from her summer's sojourn in New York.

Dr. Ed. Anderson returned to his home at Cleveland, Tenn. last Monday.

Mr. N. C. Arnold is moving his family this week to Bedford, Ohio, where he will reside in the future.

The reserved seat chart for Geo. W. Cable lecture will open next Monday morning at Adamson's at seven o'clock.

Capt. Will Hayden and Lt. Chas. McClure went to Adrian last Friday night to witness the inspection of Co. B.

Several votes were challenged at the polls here last Tuesday but all of them were sworn in or the challenge withdrawn.

If you have not already bought a season ticket for the Star Course, we advise you to do so at once or you will get left.

The Star Course will be opened next Wednesday evening by Geo. W. Cable who will give readings from his own works.

Mr. Cable's "readings" are not read from the manuscript or printed page, but are dramatic renditions of scenes from his stories.

Don Bowen, Will Ross, and Robert McClure left yesterday for Delaware, Ohio, to take a course in the Delaware business college.

Henry Cabot Lodge says: "Mr. Cable will be remembered while we have a history. It is by such men that the work if the world is done."

The Farmers' Social Club will meet at the residence of John Schreder on Tuesday evening, Nov. 15th. The program will be the same as published before.

The Democratic vote shown by the canvass was polled in full except two votes, thus making the actual vote and the pre-election estimate tally almost exactly.

We have printed a new edition of Township and Highway Commissioners order books. They will be kept in stock and township officers are invited to examine them.

We had always supposed that Supervisor James was a voter here in Tecumseh. One of the challengers thought differently last Tuesday and monkeyed with the buzz-saw, much to his discomfiture.

A. L. Daniels will give a Thanksgiving Dance at Buck's Hall in Pentecost on Thursday evening, Nov. 24th. Music by Derby & Cole's full orchestra. There will be good accommodations for horses and a good crowd is expected.

The Republicans held their final rally at the opera house last Friday evening and although it was a stormy night a very fair audience assembled. Grant Fellows made a fair, gentlemanly speech which made a most favorable impression upon his hearers.

"If I was Columbus," said an Adrian business man in looking at one of his pictures, "I would be thankful that I died four hundred years or more ago, especially if I had to be confronted with the pictures that are being handed out as correct portraits.—Adrian Messenger.

We can but comment upon Wm. McCowen's new undertaker, Mr. Frank Merrill. He has presented us with so many new ideas, and his unassuming, yet professional manner of conducting funerals, leaves room for no doubt but that he is up with the times in his profession.

The Democrats held their final rally of the campaign last Thursday evening. Senator Morrow opened the meeting with a brief speech and H. Martin William followed with a lengthy address on the tariff question. It was one of the most logical and convincing tariff reform arguments ever delivered before a Tecumseh audience. The Blissfield Glee Club sang several rattling campaign songs which brought down the house.

Readers of the Century magazine will remember the charming stories from the pen of Mr. Geo. W. Cable which appeared in that magazine a few years ago. Mr. Cable's stories are mainly of Creole life in Louisiana and are powerfully written. This distinguished author opens our course Wednesday evening, Nov. 16. He gives readings from his works and he is said to do it very charmingly. No one can afford to miss Cable.

Last Thursday, Nov. 3d, was inspection day at the Armory. Lt. Col. Butler of the Governor's staff was the inspecting officer. The afternoon was spent in examining the clothing and accouterments of the company. In the evening he inspected the boys in foot movements, setting up drill, duties of a sentinel, etc. He reported the clothing accouterments and lockers to be neat clean and orderly. He encouraged the boys by complimenting their good qualities, but was equally frank in boasting them on their weak points. Col. Butler is a fair, genial and good natured inspecting officer. The Co. C. boys unite in wishing that he may visit us again and that he may have a joyous Thanksgiving.

There were no drones nor stragglers in the Democratic army this fall. They all voted.

Miss Julia Snell will spend about a month at home before returning to Washington.

Two carloads of cranberries were shipped from Petersburg recently, from the Everett marsh.

Reserved seat sale for Cable opens next Monday morning at Adamson's at 7 o'clock. Reserved seats 10 cents.

Owing to the size of the blanket ballot used this fall, the township board were compelled to procure new ballot boxes.

We want to be surprised by having all our friends pay their accounts on or before Dec. 1st.—"we need it."—Anderson & Co.

Rev. Gorton will speak at the Universalist church next Sunday evening on "The Catholic Church and our Public Schools." Everybody cordially invited.

Albert H. Wood, the son of Theo. Wood, aged two years, died yesterday morning. The funeral will be held at the residence, Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The Ladies Social of the Universalist church will be held at the residence of J. B. Kennedy, Raisin, on Friday, Nov. 18th, at 10 a. m. Dinner at 12:30. All are invited.

The Messenger says: "Tecumseh is booming her lecture course." Right you are, neighbor, and we have the best course for the least money ever given in this town.

Election is over and we can now turn our attention to other matters. Now let us all hands turn in—Republicans, Democrats and Prohibitionists alike—and boom the business of Tecumseh.

George W. Cable, who opens our lecture course next Wednesday night, is one of our most eminent American novelists and no one should miss the opportunity of hearing him. He is said to be equally entertaining as an artist on the platform.

Edwin R. Smith, of Clinton, will have the honor of casting his own vote, in behalf of the Democrats of the second district, for Cleveland and Stevenson, an honor that he will be proud of as long as he lives.

The "Look Here" gutter snipes, that were plastered on the walks of this town Sunday morning, were a fair illustration of the tact and intelligence of local Republican leaders. It was doubtless their ideal of an educational campaign.

Yesterday W. J. Arnold sent Nate Smidt, of Manchester, a box containing two mammoth roosters. One represented Grover and had a card tied to his neck, labled, "knocked out in '88, but strictly in it in '92." The other represented Adlai.

Mrs. Rose DePuy Taber, who has been visiting her father and helping to care for him in his illness for the past five weeks, started for her home last Monday, taking the 12 p. m. train for Jackson, and from thence to Chicago and Madison.

The Star course this season comprises the best talent ever secured for Tecumseh. No one can afford to stay away from these entertainments. The season tickets are nearly all taken. Don't delay securing one until they are all gone.

Messrs. Matteson and Conger have bought the milk trade of Richard Farley and took possession last week. Mr. Matteson worked for Geo W. Stacy nine years in the same business and his former experience will be a great help to him. Here's success to the new firm.

It always pays to patronise the merchants who advertise. Many reasons can be given why this is true, and one of them is because the inevitable result of advertising is an increased business, and the firms who do the largest business are enabled to quote better prices. It will pay to bear this in mind.

A Reading man died and left his money, twelve hundred dollars, in an old shoe. Had it not been that one of the family chanced to see in a memorandum of the deceased that the money had been placed in the shoe, a nice sum might have been thrown away with a worthless pair of shoes.

The Spy, of Worcester, Mass., says of Mr. Cable: "His works are never better than when he interprets them, for he throws into them all the humor and pathos of which he is the master. The fun never runs to the extreme and is so judiciously intermingled with the more affecting passages that the listener never becomes wearied."

Samuel Holden will be eighty years old next Wednesday, Nov. 16th. He cast his first presidential vote for Gen. Jackson, has voted for every Democratic nominee since, and voted for Cleveland last Tuesday. His health is excellent, for he has never used either liquor or tobacco, and he is apparently good for two or three more presidential campaigns before he bids good bye to this world.

A big crowd assembled at Armory Hall Tuesday evening to hear the election returns as they came in over the wire. As the returns from the towns near Tecumseh were received the Democrats were considerably elated and felt sanguine of carrying their county ticket. Both sides claimed New York until after midnight. The crowd finally dispersed, the Republicans feeling rather down in the mouth, and the Democrats quite confident on the general result.

Allie Brooks is down with the measles.

Will P. Bidwell was home from Ypsilanti to vote.

Web Anderson returned Tuesday noon from New York.

Dan Hall is confined to the house with a severe attack of pneumonia.

The Democrats saved two men on the County ticket, Wiggins and Wood.

E. Tindall returned from his California trip on Monday, just in season to vote.

The first dance of the series was held at Armory Hall last evening with a fair attendance, notwithstanding the storm.

The society young men of this town will give a dancing school and hop on Thursday evening Nov. 17th. Nearly enough names have already been obtained.

Thanksgiving two weeks from to-day.

It is stated that the Lake Shore road will run at least ten new passenger trains during the World's Fair. The work of educating freight train conductors and brakemen to run passenger trains has been commenced.

T. E. Tarsney of Saginaw, tells a good joke on himself. He has just returned from Connecticut, where he has been stumping. At one place he was tendered the usual complimentary remarks at his introduction. The chairman of the meeting proudly announced that "the ex-congressman's is a household word, not only in Michigan, but the whole country. I now introduce to you Mr.—Mr.—Mr." "Tarsney," whispered the Saginaw man, but the other one said. "Mr. Larceny of Michigan."

The new postal money order which has been ordered by the government will soon be issued. In the new system there is little or no complication. Sheets will be issued calling for amounts from 1 cent to $3, which can be torn off to suit the demands of purchasers. The postmaster will have no writing to do on it, the sender simply endorsing it the same as a check or draft. One cent will pay the tariff on amounts up to $3, instead of five cents as at present.

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do you know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough. The Surprising Promptness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods wherever introduced, conclusively prove that true modesty is always recognized and the quality of merit takes care of itself. Metaphorically our statement is the Button—the Public Press it, and

"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements that so much comfort for $1.00 (the price) is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Electric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt) and credit $3 on the price of new order. Remember the Electric Foot warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

A STEAMER LOST.

The W. H. Gilcher Wrecked in a Storm on Lake Michigan.

All On Board Probably Found Watery Graves—A Ship Destroyed by Fire in the Seine and Several Lives Are Lost.

LOSS OF THE GILCHER.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 4.—A special to the Press says the life-saving crew at North Manitou island, Mich., confirm the loss of the steamer W. H. Gilcher. Pieces of the wreck are said to have been picked up by the life savers, who have been unable to learn anything that would indicate the survival of a single member of the Gilcher's crew. The crew of the Gilcher, so far as known, was:

Lloyd H. Weeks, master, Vermillion; Edward Dupuis, mate, Loraine; —— Finley, second mate, Buffalo; Sidney B. Jones, chief engineer, Marine City, Mich.; —— King, wheelman, Chicago, formerly from Vermillion; —— Thompson, oiler, a son of Daniel Thompson; Charles Hontoon, oiler, Marine City; Will Faulthauber, fireman, 21 years old, Vermillion.

This leaves ten men the names of whom are unknown. Vessel-owners have given up discussing the disaster and have turned their attention to business. Shippingmaster Rumsey says he has no knowledge of the crew outside of a personal acquaintance with the officers, whose names have been given.

A VESSEL BURNED.

PARIS, Nov. 5.—The British bark Norcross, which left Philadelphia on October 2 for Rouen with a load of petroleum, has been burned in the Seine with a loss of three and probably ten lives. Capt. Roop had his wife with him and both were saved. How the fire originated is not known. As soon as the petroleum caught an explosion followed and a bright flame shot up into the air where the dense smoke almost hid the bark from those on shore. The crew rushed to the side and leaped into the river. The captain's wife was saved chiefly by her husband's exertions. Five others were also saved. The remains of three of the crew, horribly burned, were found in the river and seven others are missing, and it is thought they have gone to the bottom. Several of the survivors were injured by the burning petroleum which floated on the water, making approach to the wreck dangerous.

MERCIER NOT GUILTY.

Great Excitement in Quebec Caused by the Ex-Premier's Trial.

QUEBEC, Can., Nov. 5.—"Down with Angers!" "Down with the provincial executioners!" "Hurrah for Mercier!" were the yells that went up from a crowd of 3,000 men assembled in front of the court of justice here Friday. And as the crowd yelled four sturdy fellows bearing ex-Premier Mercier on their shoulders appeared at the courthouse door.

"Non coupable," roared one of the four, while his three companions cried: "Not guilty." That was the verdict rendered by the jury in the case against ex-Premier Mercier, charged with trying to defraud the queen's province out of $60,000.

As the four stalwart citizens, with the ex-premier on their shoulders, came out the crowd opened the way and they led a procession down St. Louis street to the residence of F. X. Lemieux, where Mr. Mercier took a position on the portico. The cheers were renewed, hats were thrown into the air and the populace seemed to be mad with joy that the stigma had been removed from the name of the honored ex-premier.

Small Bills in Demand.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—It is said at the treasury department that every possible effort is being made to satisfy the steadily increasing demands from all parts of the country for one and two-dollar notes. The amount of these notes now in circulation is $65,673,000, being an increase of $4,000,000 during the last fiscal year and an increase of $21,000,000 since July 1, 1891. The shipments of currency have averaged $200,000 a day for some days past.

Bank Closes Its Doors.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 7.—The Continental Trust Company, which did a small banking business, closed its doors at noon Saturday and posted a notice that it was in the hands of Assignee O. G. Young. It had a capital stock of $100,000 and dabbled in bonds and real estate securities. The assets are $60,000, which will suffice to pay depositors in full.

Soldiers Indicted for Murder.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 5.—The grand jury has reported an indictment charging murder in the second degree against Lieut. Clifford C. Cassady, of the Twenty-second regiment, and Richard Roe, real name unknown, for the shooting of the boy Michael Broderick during the recent strike here, August 25 last. Bench warrants will be issued.

A Hotel Burned.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 7.—The Stewart hotel was destroyed by fire Saturday. Loss, $195,000; insurance, $85,000. One fireman had a leg broken by falling walls and two others were badly injured by the fall of an iron column. The fire started on the roof in several places simultaneously, and is supposed to have been incendiary.

IT SHOULD BE IN EVERY HOUSE.

J. B. Wilson, 371 Clay St., Sharpsburg, Pa., says he will not be without Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, that it cured his wife who was threatened with pneumonia after an attack of la grippe, when various other remedies and several physicians had done her no good. Robert Barber, of Cooksport, Pa., claims Dr. King's New Discovery has done him more good than anything he ever used for Lung Trouble. Nothing like it. Try it. Free trial bottles at J. J. Orr's drug store. Large bottles 50c. and $1.00.

She (hintingly): The fire is going out. He: Well, I hope it will bring some coal back with it.

GET THE BEST

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as everything else. By the universal satisfaction it has given, and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption has proven itself unequalled for Consumption and all diseases of the Throat, Lungs and Chest. Do not experiment with any unheard of or untried article which you are told is "as good as Dr. Fay's," for its equal does not exist, but be sure to get only Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption. S. S. S. CURES SCROFULA

Mrs. E. J. Rowell, Medford, Mass., says her mother has been cured of Scrofula by the use of four bottles of S. S. S. after having had much other treatment, and being reduced to quite a low condition of health, as it was thought she could not live.

S. S. S. Cured my little boy of hereditary scrofula which appeared all over his face. For a year I had given up all hope of his recovery, when finally I was induced to use S. S. S. A few bottles cured him, and no symptoms of the disease remain.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a certain mortgage, bearing date April 18th, 1891, executed by Charles H. Aten to Fred J. Landgraf, whereby the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative. Said mortgage was, on the 28th day of April, 1891, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Lenawee County and State of Michigan, in Liber 124 of Mortgages, on page 562. There is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date hereof the sum of five hundred and fifty-four and thirty-three hundredths Dollars ($554.33) and no proceedings have been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof, either at law or in equity.

Notice is therefore hereby given that the premises described in said mortgage, by virtue of the said power or sale and of the statute in such case made and provided, will, on the 26th day of January, 1893, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, at the East front door of the Court House in the City of Adrian, in said County (said Court House being the place where the Circuit Court for said County is held) to satisfy the sum due as aforesaid and the interest thereon accrued and then to become due, together with an attorney fee of $30 in said mortgage provided, and all other legal costs of foreclosure. Said premises are described in said mortgage as follows: All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, in the county of Lenawee and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point in the East line of Pearl street, continued northward from Hewitt's addition to said village, said point being four rods south of the Southwest corner of a parcel of land formerly owned by Wm Spath; thence running easterly parallel with and four rods distant from the South line of said Spath lot eight rods; thence South parallel with Pearl street two and one-half rods; thence West parallel with and two and one half rods distant from the first course eight rods to Pearl street; thence north on the East line of Pearl street to the place of beginning; excepting therefrom all that part thereof heretofore sold and conveyed by said Landgraf to Samuel W. Temple by deed dated November 20th, 1884, and recorded in Liber 137 of Deeds, on page 486, in the office of the Register of Deeds for said County; also, excepting all that part of the above described premises covered by the Temple Brick Planing Mill.

"Six cents for dinner is enough
For any man that's brainy,
Two cents for mush, two cents for milk,
Two cents for miscellany.
Four cents for breakfast, four for tea,
Was all a fellow needed;
'Twas all Jack wanted, and no man
Needs any more than he did.

"Besides," said Jack, "men spend for clothes,
And such extravagances,
Good money that should never be
Spent on such foolish fancies.
An old meal bag for pantaloons,
A bedtick for a jacket,
And for suspenders a good rope
Will quite stand any racket.

"I live on seventy cents a week,
Go visiting on Sunday,
And, if they feed me pretty full,
I have enough for Monday.
So fifty dollars in the year
Is all I spend for living,
But put my money in the bank
And ponder up thanksgiving."

Jack died and left his nephew Bill
Nine hundred thousand dollars,
And Bill he spent a thousand quick
For neckties and for collars.

He hired his money right and left
On horses, Maude and Jenny,
And one year from his uncle's death
He wasn't worth a penny.

WATCHED JIMMY RIDE.

A Long-Wished-For Moment Arrived at Last.

He Had Boasted of His Horsemanship, But the Horse Had a Monopoly on Feats When He Attempted to Display His Skill.

There are a great many women who like to ride. Not a few of them have experienced more or less difficulty in providing themselves with a proper escort. A woman to whom a good horse and a pleasant bit of country road are an unspeakable joy, a woman, too, who is well-known throughout the United States, tells the following tale of woe in which she played an important although not the principal part. That was left for the man in the case. "I had heard my lawful liege, Jimmy, boast a thousand times of his horsemanship when a boy, and I had observed his fine critical air whenever looking upon any equestrian display," she says. "As a faithful and loving spouse should I had been deeply impressed and naturally had a strong desire to see him perform.

"My requests in this direction were always sufficient to set him relating the legend of his wonderful feats with a marvelous Indian pony he once owned when he was a lad.

"We never went to a circus that he did not tell the oft-repeated romance of his youth, to the envious exclusion of most of the clown's perennial jokes. Through all the vaultings and agile deeds of the bareback rider he wore a superior and ennuied air, and with a shrug of the shoulders exclaimed: 'O, why don't they give us something new? I did that years ago when I was a boy, with my Indian pony.' And just then I would slip off my seat to the ground below—anything to cut off the tail of that pony. Nevertheless I really believed my liege to be an unknown Stickney (felicitous and appropriate name for a bareback rider), and felt that a sawdust genius languished undiscovered wasting his daring and agility in the desert of domesticity. With truly feminine subtlety I endeavored to beguile him into giving me a demonstration of his accomplishment by joining me in the exercise.

"Finally I was successful, and my indulgent lord left me one bright morning telling me he would return in the evening mounted, and that we would take the long coveted ride together.

"How happy I was! All day long I had visions of the conjugal ride so soon to be taken. My mind's ear could hear the exclamations of admiration lavished by spectators on my elegant and dignified escort. 'How superbly he sits his horse!' 'Has the seat of a hunter!' 'Born in the saddle!' 'A perfect Centaur!'

"My riding habit was viewed with extremely critical eyes. Even my wedding dress had received less inspection. I felt that I must not put my escort to shame by an inferior appearance. I blushed with pride as I thought of his admiring gaze when we would be cantering side by side along the green lanes and through bosky dells. This evening's communing should rekindle the somewhat cooled fires upon our conjugal altar. Under the steel hoofs of our spirited chargers we would put the hard gradgrind facts that had forced their way in and displaced the dear romance of the past.

"No day of my childhood spent in waiting for some promised joy was ever longer. Gayly did I don my riding-dress when the leisurely hands of the clock climbed down to the hour and told me I must to horse. At length I was quite ready and stood with my skirt over my arm tapping it with my riding-whip in seeming impatience, but in reality with smiling complacency, awaiting Jimmy's coming.

"How tenderly he will lift me to my saddle, I thought, giving my foot a wee bit of a squeeze as he adjusts my skirt, and I will playfully tap him with my whip for his husbandly impatience, and then away we will gallop, and for the first time—

"I was suddenly aroused from these meditations by a fearful noise as of the tramping of a herd of wild cattle. I heard the whizzing whip and crackling profanity. People were fleeing to left and right. There was a—

"Flurry of dust that traveled fast
Like a whirlwind from the sky.
Nearer it comes and nearer, till all the gazers know
That a horse is running with a man behind the saddle-bow.'

"Yes, and very close to the saddle-bow, too. I could scarcely see him, there was so much horse, but I could plainly hear, for he split the air with expletives, clutching madly at the horse, in whose heels there was both life and mettle. To say they spurned the sod would be drawing it mild. He was a 'towzie tyke, black, grim and large.' He came up the street like a four-footed cyclone. But he didn't come all at once. He seemed to come in sections. He was not of one mind at any time. He seemed to entertain a dozen or more ideas at the same moment. Attraction and repulsion were simultaneous forces with him. His motions were unmeasured, concentric and eccentric. He described the lines of longitude, latitude and altitude. At one instant there was a colossal pitch, the next a horizontal prostration. He would start for one side of the street, but change his intentions before he arrived there and walk back on his forefeet, an act that seemed to affect his clinging rider unpleasantly, for at such periods there would be a fresh rhapsody of blank verse.

"I prayed that my Jimmy would see the fearful struggle in the street and come around another way. I would not have him appear now for anything in the world, I thought, for I knew he would risk his life trying to save the unhappy disjointed wretch on that pawing avalanche out there. Suddenly the beast concluded to [illegible] using all his feet at once for the purpose, and after kicking a peck of dust into the lamp of a gas-post, he walked quietly up to my horse and began to make friends, perfectly unabashed concerning his recent diabolical conduct.

"The woe-begone creature on his back slowly wiped a pint of lather off his face and, to my horror and amazement, I beheld my lawful partner. He tried to smile a ghastly recognition, and, in an asthmatic and wornout whisper, said feebly: 'I—guess—you—will have—to get on—whoa there, you blank fool!—the best way—you can.'

[illegible] and go to bed, but he straightened up for the first time, and said: 'No. I'll die first. You blamed fool, whoa there! (Just then his horse tried to climb a tree-box.) Besides, I can't get off. I never expect to again.' At this moment, as if to clinch his prediction, the horse seemed to acquire a desire to light the gas with sparks from his heels, for he projected them out about five yards, to the entire destruction of the gas-lamp.

"I crept out carefully and led my horse around to the back fence and clambered on ignominiously with the aid of a sympathetic maid.

"Meanwhile the air was splintered with adjectives and snorts by the restive couple in front. My husband showed his fine horsemanship by sticking on, but all lofty desire seemed to be swallowed up in that one feat. At least he gave no further illustration of his happy and accomplished boyhood. He will do that, I thought as I rode up the street, when we have entered the 'green lanes and bosky dells.'

"There was a patient look on the face of my foaming escort as he came down from looking over a telegraph wire a few minutes later. I thought I heard his vertebræ give way, and asked if it were not so, but at this instant he dashed the perspiration from his crimson brow and hoarsely commanded me to ride on ahead. He said his horse didn't like company. I rode on obediently, for I felt I had never been so near the verge of eternity before. Just as my thought had reached the point of gratitude, I heard a shout, and looking back saw horse and rider tearing over the road—

"'With a terrible grumble, rumble and roar.
Telling the battle was on once more.'

"On they came, shedding foam flakes like the spray that drives before the typhoon. My spouse was sawing at the bits; his elbows were flapping like wings; his trousers had jolted up to his knees leaving his hosiery exposed to the rude gaze of the jeering crowd. His hat clung faithfully to the back of his bobbing head. His coat had assumed dropsical proportions; and made him look like a toy balloon. There was a wild, weird look on his face as he churned past me yelling out like a Comanche Indian: 'Do you want to kill me?" There was an explosion at the end of the sentence, but the sound was in a measure lost in the hubbub of clattering hoofs, barking dogs, and the screams of the frightened populace.

"I watched them rush down the deserted street like a wild express train. I momentarily expected some feat in horsemanship, but the horse seemed to have a corner on feats and was working the monopoly for all it was worth.

"The last I saw of them was when the horse went around a corner on two legs and the boss rider with both arms flung around his lathered neck was clinging to him like glue. There was nothing reminiscent in the attitude.

"I rode sadly home to build a fire in the domestic altar and be in readiness for the pieces when kind friends should bring them home.

"When next I saw my husband he was standing up in a street car. He got off carefully and waddled into the house with a most diabolical expression on his face and said grimly, as he tried to kick the cat, that if his long-lost brother wished to recognize him now was his opportunity, as he abounded in strawberry marks of a perfectly distinct character.

"The 'altar fires' went out entirely for several weeks, and the joys of boyhood have never since been referred to within our family circle. And now, when I wish to go horseback riding, I get up before daylight and slip out the alley gate."—Chicago Tribune.

Wanted the Color to Match.

A young man from Kalamazoo—which is in the state of Michigan, by the way—was in Detroit not very long ago, drawn hither by the fascinating attractions of one of the brightest and best-looking girls in this City of the Straits. The visitor was more or less of a Kalamazooiu and the girl didn't feel flattered by his attentions, but she did the best she could under the circumstances. In the evening he asked her to go with him to the ice cream very and she went.

"Waiter," he said, in a loud and commanding tone, "bring us two ice creams, the best you've got in the shop, mind."

The waiter bowed.

"And, waiter," said the girl in a low, sweet voice, "bring me pistache to match the young man here," and the young man didn't know what pistache was till he saw the color.—Detroit Free Press.

BUSINESS IS GOOD.

Trading Is Remarkably Active for the Period.

The Volume Is Far Beyond Any Precedent for a Similar Time—The Impetus Toward Expansion Is Powerful.

CONTINUES ACTIVE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says:

"Even in the last week before a presidential election business has continued active; indeed the volume is far beyond any precedent for a similar period. The coming election has plainly diminished business in two ways; multitudes have been diverted from trade to political activity and many more have chosen to postpone transactions until the political uncertainty has been removed.

"The fact that even under such circumstances trade has been of enormous volume shows how powerful is the impetus toward activity and expansion. The people are clearly buying more goods than ever before, and in some branches manufacturers are realizing a slight advance in prices. Money is closer at some western points, but nowhere is stringency seen, and there is no apprehension as to the immediate future.

"Wheat has touched the lowest point ever known in this (New York) market, 73¼ cents, receipts at western points being still enormous, though this week averaging a little less than 1,500,000 bushels daily. Exports have much increased and a recovery in price to 74¼ cents has resulted, but the decline for the week is still 1¼ cents. Corn has fallen a cent with moderate movement, but oats are a cent higher.

"At Cincinnati business somewhat exceeds last year's—in groceries 20 to 30 per cent. At Cleveland business is good, exceeding last year's, especially in rolled iron. At Detroit trade is larger than a year ago, and manufactures active. At Indianapolis business is active especially in foundries, machinery and saw manufacture. Trade at Chicago has been satisfactory, with especial increase in real estate transactions. Receipts of corn have been double last year's, wheat and hides show a gain of 70 per cent for the week, butter 50, barley 40 and dressed beef 25 per cent., while in rye, oats, sheep and hogs a decrease of a third appears, in lard 50 per cent. and in wool 75 per cent. Two clothing failures are due to overtrading, and money is in strong demand at 6 per cent., little returning from west centers. At Milwaukee many of the largest houses were burned out, but none appear to be crippled so far, and collections are still fair. At St. Paul business is active, though collections are retarded by good weather for plowing, and at Minneapolis lumber is strong and wheat moving more freely. At Omaha and Denver trade is good. At Kansas City business is large in volume, with liberal receipts of live stock and better prices. At St. Louis, though the weather checks trade, woolens and clothing, groceries, boots and shoes, and dry goods generally are strong and grain receipts heavy. At Louisville business is a full average, and at Memphis slightly improved, though below the normal volume. At New Orleans labor troubles retard trade, but cotton is higher and active and receipts of sugar liberal with good demand.

"In general nothing seems to foreshadow monetary difficulty, and with colder weather and political uncertainty removed a great business is anticipated.

"The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number 238, as compared with 187 last week."

POPE LEO VERY ILL.

Found Motionless in His Room—Facts Concealed by Clerical Papers.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—A dispatch from Rome to the Pall Mall Gazette says that the pope is very ill. The clerical papers, the Gazette's correspondent adds, make every effort to conceal the fact of his illness. A few days since his holiness was found motionless in his room and his condition caused a panic in the vatican. Physicians were summoned, and they succeeded in restoring him to consciousness. His holiness is very feeble and faints easily. He has been forbidden to do any work.

Had $100,000 When He Disappeared.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—W. B. Britton, of San Francisco, on Friday asked the central office police to make a search of the city for Charles Gill, of South Africa, who had mysteriously vanished from a cheap hotel on West street, near Menton. Gill is a wealthy mine owner and at the time of his disappearance is said to have had $100,000 in his possession. The police think that Gill may have gone to Philadelphia, where he has relatives living. The missing man, who is 58 years old, is a cripple and uses cruches.

Unconstitutional.

LANSING, Mich., Nov. 5.—The opinion of the supreme court filed Friday in the case of William McRae and Michael Lally vs. the Grand Rapids, Lansing & Detroit Railway Company is of far reaching importance, inasmuch as it holds the act of 1861, authorizing a trial by a jury of a less number than twelve in circuit courts and six in justice courts, which has been extensively followed in the state, to be unconstitutional.

Heber Newton Not a Heretic.

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—"Not proven" is the verdict arrived at by the commission appointed more than twelve months ago by Bishop Potter to investigate charges against Rev. Dr. Heber Newton, rector of the Episcopal Church of All Souls, that he "uttered heretical sayings."

Not Free from Cholera.

HAMBURG, Nov. 5.—The report that this city had been declared free from cholera is incorrect. The hope upon which the report was based was premature. A patient who was suffering from Asiatic cholera and was taken to the hospital on Monday died on Wednesday.

Property Damaged by a Cyclone.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 5.—News has been received here of a terrible cyclone visiting Old Providence and San Andrea in the Caribbean sea on October 9, prostrating houses and whole cocoanut plantations. The loss is placed at $100,000.

Shook Hands with Washington.

BENTON HARBOR, Mich., Nov. 5.—Miss Parmelia Wright died Friday of old age. She was nearly 102 years old. In her younger days she had shaken hands with Gen. Washington and Gen. Jackson.

Gen. Samuel W. Crawford Dead.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 5.—Gen. Samuel Wylie Crawford, who commanded the Pennsylvania reserves at the battle of Gettysburg, died Thursday night, aged 55 years.

Policeman Kills a Drunken Man.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 5.—Christopher Henderson, arrested Thursday night for being drunk, was shot dead by Officer Kolontersky while attempting to escape.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., NOV. 10, 1892.

F. D. Lancaster went to Detroit Monday.

Hiram Saxton returned to Clio Wednesday.

Daniel O'Reilly returned to Lansing Monday.

Chas. Thompson went to Tecumseh Monday.

Rev. H. R. Williams was in Detroit last Friday.

F. B. Wood, of Adrian, was in town last Tuesday.

Will Gosmer, of Bridgewater is working for Will Kather.

Miss Minnie Perry is home from Ypsilanti for a few days.

Alonzo Clark came home from Chicago, Monday morning.

Abram Hendershot came home from Southern Indiana to vote.

Born Thursday Nov. 3d, 1892, to Mr. and Mrs. Dow Draper, a son.

Mrs. M. E. Tenny, of Ann Arbor, is the guest of Mrs. Louise Clark.

Mrs. J. L. Tuttle entertained a small number of Friends last Friday.

Dr. Hunter and Dell Ordiway came down from Jackson to vote Tuesday.

Clinton Chapter, R. A. M. has an exaltation Friday evening, Nov. 11th.

Mrs. Hattie Johnston and Mrs. J. W. Bradner went to Manchester Saturday.

D. H. Davis and E. T. VanDeMark came from Chicago Tuesday morning, returning Wednesday.

Miss Bertie Johnston is the happy possesser of a new Wheelock piano, a gift from Carl S. Burton.

Mrs. E. VanDeMark went to Blissfield Thursday, to deliver goods sold during her recent canvass there.

A special meeting of Golden Rod Chapter No. 85, will be held Thursday evening for installation of officers.

Mrs. Peter Kishpaugh and her mother, went to Dundee last Monday, Mrs. Lambert will remain there during the winter.

The dinner and supper given by the L. O. T. M., at their hall, last Tuesday was a splendid success. They cleared about $24,00.

The first recital given by the Clinton musical society was at Mrs. L. W. Kimball's Wednesday evening. It was greatly enjoyed by all present.

A horse belonging to Billy Arnold, of Tecumseh, while being driven through main street here Sunday evening, became frightened at a cow, he freed himself from the buggy almost immediately, and run south along the railroad, up church street and north to the Lancaster House when he was caught; no one was injured.

As Simon Anglemeyer was returning home from town Wednesday about noon he met with quite an accident. He was found on the ground insensible, near Jas. Kehoe's, while his horses had run until they reached Joseph Dillingham's where they fell into a ditch, injuring one of them quite seriously. It is not known at this time how the accident happened, but it is believed that Mr. A. had a fainting spell causing him to fall out of the wagon.

The election here Tuesday resulted in a complete Democratic victory. The Republicans had claimed such a large majority for themselves as a result of their canvass. Their surprise may be imagined by a glance at the following democratic majorities:

State ticket entire, 43.
William Newton, 43
David E. Haskins, 43
James S. Gorman, 37
George H. Durand, 41
Archibald McDowell, 41
Edwin R. Smith, 50
Wiley R. Reynolds, 43
James H. Morrow, 44
Horace Holdridge, 41
Chas Burridge, 51
Lenard Hock, 41
Ira Waterman, 42
Chas. R. Keeber, 50
William H. Wiggins, 34
Frederick B. Wood, 47
Bert D. Chandler, 44
John B. Ayers, 43
John E. White, 43
William H. Wise,
Franklin B. Phillps, 43

O'Donnell, for Congress, received several votes on split Prohibition tickets, hence Mr. Gorman's majority is less than that of most of the other candidates. News of the victory here was received with the wildest enthusiasm. The band played from 10 p. m, until 4 a. m., around town and at the hall, where many remained all night to hear the returns from various points.

A Great Popular History of the World.

The story of the world's history is, after all, the most interesting and most instructive story which has ever been told. It was probably never better presented, for general reading and reference, than in Alden's Cyclopedia of History, recently published. Every nation of the earth, ancient and modern, is treated in its alphabetical order, excepting only the United States, which is to form a separate work. You have ancient history as far back as 5004 B. C. and modern history down to A. D. 1892. All countries are described in their physical aspects, as well as historically, so you have the equivalent of a book of travels round the world. There are many illustrations, none for mere ornament, but all helpful for instruction. Considering the magnitude of the work its small cost is astonishing. The entire history comprises about 800,000 words—equivalent, you will find by comparison, to about ten volumes of ordinary size—and yet is issued in two handy volumes, in small but clear type, well and handsomely made, and sold in cloth binding for only $1.25 for the set, plus 20 cents for postage, if by mail. For 10 cents the publisher sends postpaid a paper-bound volume of 160 pages, containing the complete history of several nations, by which you can judge of the character of the entire work. Every home ought to have a good Universal History; this is probably the best for general use. The publisher's catalogue of choice books, over 100 pages, a rich feast for book lovers, is sent post-paid for 2 cents. John B. Alden, Publisher, 57 Rose St., New York.

School Sketches.

German I. are now struggling with German script.

The geometry class are now studying about polygons.

Latin III. are reading Cicero's second oration against Catiline.

The North Branch school is doing some fine work in the Kindergarten line.

Some want the afternoon sessions to close earlier. It will mean a shorter morning.

The Physiology class are interested in specimens in comparative anatomy furnished by the various markets.

Only nineteen pupils were present last Monday in the West Branch school. The other fifty-four are at home with the measles, whooping cough, etc.

Mr. Kellogg has been appointed a member of the State board of visitors to Hillsdale College by State Superintendent Fitch.

Scribner's Magazine for November contains the second of its group of preliminary articles on the World's Fair, this one being an account of Chicago's part in the World's Fair, by Franklin McVeagh, one of the prominent citizens of Chicago, who writes about the enterprise without any bias, frankly stating that he "has no connection with the World's Fair management." His account of what Chicago has accomplished is a wonderful record of enterprise and successful achievement. He shows how that city has shouldered responsibilities which belonged to the United States Government Commission; how she has supplied eleven million dollars instead of the five that it was expected she would furnish; how she has arranged a site for the Fair which in extent, situation, plan and adornment exceeds anything ever before attempted, and that she has provided buildings equally remarkable in size, variety, and artistic value. Mr. McVeagh then points out how Chicago will adequately meet the question of transporting people to and from the Fair grounds; how it will comfortably lodge any number of visitors who may seek the city, and how ample provision is being made for an abundant and perfectly pure supply of water.

St. Nicholas for Young Folks.

John G. Whittier long ago wrote of St. Nicholas, "It is little to say of this magazine that it is the best children's periodical in the world." Edward Eggleston, the author of "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," says of it, "There is not one of the numbers that does not stir the curiosity, inform the memory, stimulate thought, and enlarge the range of the imagination." Founded in 1873, and from the first number edited by Mary Mapes Dodge, St. Nicholas is now entering upon its twentieth year. The most famous writers have contributed to its pages in the past, but never has its editor been able to offer a better program of a more distinguished list of contributors than for 1893.

There is to be a series of illustrated papers on "The Leading Cities of the United States."—the story of each city told by a prominent resident. Edmund Clarence Stedman will write of New York; Thomas W. Higginson, of Boston; New Orleans by George W. Cable, and Baltimore by President Gilman, of the Johns Hopkins University. Dr. Lyman Abbott will tell the story of Brookyn, and other cities will be treated by other famous men. There will be articles on the World's Fair, and a number of pages of funny pictures and humorous verses.

Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, the well-known author of "The Birds' Christmas Carol," etc., will contribute the leading serial for St. Nicholas during the coming year. The November opens with a three-page poem by John G. Whitter, which has some of the most beautiful lines the good Quaker poet has ever written, describing the visit of a party of young girls to his home.

The School Journal says, "Place St. Nicholas in your household, and you need have no fears for the lessons taught your children." The magazine is the greatest aid that the teacher and the conscientious parent can possibly have. It entertains, and at the same time educates and instructs. The subscription price is $3 a year. Remittances may be made directly to the publishers, The Century Co., 33 East 17th st. N. York.

IN OLDEN TIMES

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action, but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Wm. McCarthy, 122 E. 8th St., Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "I used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in my family with good results." We recommend it to all heads of families as the best."

ESTATE OF ELIZA GRAY.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

We wish to correct the statement in this column last week, which stated that Cornelius Hoagland was found dead. This was not true, although he died very suddenly, with his wife and two children at his side. Mr. Hoagland was born in Seneca Co., N. Y., in 1817. He came here and settled in 1845. He won many friends and, after a life of 75 years, passed quietly away to the other world, loved and respected by his many friends, who deeply mourn their loss. He leaves a wife and five children, two boys and three girls.

LAKE RIDGE LACONICS.

W. W. Ambrose's health is very poor.

C. E. Triplet came here from Washington to vote.

Olds & Bacon will sell thirty swine and other property at auction, Thursday afternoon.

Frank Southard bought a spanking span of four and five year old horses at A. Russell's auction for $70 each. Who pays the tariff?

C. H. Baker and family (son of J. W. Baker) who has been in the western states the past six or seven years, returned home Thursday and will remain all winter.

Election was a cold day "in more ways than one." The Democrats carried the town by one plurality, for the first time in forty years. The Prohibs cast 36 votes, again of 17 since last spring There were two or three away on business, and one stayed at home sick. So Macon in reality doubled her vote. The report of 35 from Tecumseh is wrong The 3 should be on the other side of the 5. Nearly every candidate received 53 votes, as reported by the Herald.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

is the greatest blessing ever offered child-bearing women. I have been a midwife many years, and in each case where Mother's Friend has been used, it has accomplished wonders and relieved much suffering. It is the best remedy for rising of the breast known, and worth the price for that alone. Mrs. M. Brewster, Montgomery, Ala.

A Welcome Visitor.

December makes the opening number of "The New Peterson," an illustrated magazine devoted solely to literature and art. The names of the editors are a host in themselves; they comprise Frank Lee Benedict, Howard Seely, Octave Thanet and M. G. McClelland. Among the contributors are such names as E. E. Hale, T. W. Higginson, Hamlin Garland, Joseph Kirkland, John Vance Cheney, William Archer, Margaret Kent, Rebecca Harding Davis, Gertrude Atherton, Ruth McEnery Stuart, Charles W. Coleman—in short, the cream of the essayists, story-writers and poets in the entire length and breadth of the country. It will be the cheapest literary magazine in the world, but in every respect it will be the equal of the highest priced literary monthlies. The initial or December number is full of good things—it must be seen to be appreciated. Terms, $2.00 a year; $1.00 for six months. A sample number will be sent for five cents. Address, The Peterson Magazine Co., Philadelphia.

A Rosebud Dinner.

The very name invokes a vision of lovely young girls, fragrant flowers, soft lights, entrancing music and youth and hope and love and all things beautiful. You may learn all about this dainty and beautiful affair through a charming paper, charmingly illustrated, describing a debutante's winter in New York City, which appears in Demorest's Family Magazine for December. This number is fairly crowded with Christmas good things, in the way of poems, stories and illustrations. If you are in doubt what presents to make for Christmas you can't do better than to consult its Home Art department, which gives all needful information on the subject. 20 cents a copy, or $2.00 a year. Published by W. Jennings Demorest, 15 East 14th St., New York.

The Forum for November.

In the United States we have a system of protection with a constant agitation for free trade. In England the established system is as nearly as possible free trade with a constant agitation for protection. A discussion of the subject by Englishmen, therefore, throws an important light upon our own controversy. In the Forum for November will be found two articles by the most prominent English writers upon this subject: Sir Thomas H. Farrar, for many years Secretary of the English Board of Trade, who explains the several English views of the McKinley tariff and its effects upon British exports; and Lord Masham, President of the Fair Trade Club and the largest textile manufacturer in Great Britain, argues in favor of a protective policy. "For Whom I Shall Vote and Why," comprises eight short papers by prominent men not actively identified with politics: Mr. Schouler, the historian, Mr. Schiff, and Mr. Cannon, two of the most prominent bank presidents of New York; Mr. Franklin McVeagh, of Chicago, and Mr. John Claflin, of New York, two of the largest merchants, being among the number. The other article is by Mr. Charles Francis Adams, who writes of the lessons from the municipal experience of the historic town of Quincy, Massachusetts.

Sunday School Institute.

The Cambridge Sunday School Institute will be held at Springville on Saturday, Nov. 26, 1892, at 1:30 p. m. Below is the program:

Recitation—Mrs. Carrie Alderdyce.
Question Box.
Bring Gospel Hymns No. 5.

Effect of the World's Fair.

"I am dreading next year for business," said a Morenci merchant the other day. "Why? Because of the great World's Fair. The whole country must be largely drained—millions upon millions of money must flow into Chicago—to make that vast enterprise the financial success which it is expected that it will be; and especially will this be felt in places so contiguous to Chicago as is Morenci. Why, it is reasonable to suppose that the larger part of our population will go to see the Fair. The desire is a very natural one, when you consider the fact that the Fair will be the biggest thing of the kind which the world has ever seen, and this desire by our people will be gratified quite readily by our close proximity to Chicago and the cheap railroad rates that will prevail. Indeed, the boy who doesn't calculate to save his pennies whereby to be in Chicago next year is regarded as very unambitious and lacking in the patriotism of the forefathers. Hence much money will be taken from the ordinary channels of trade; and also our country agricultural societies will be seriously affected. The World's Fair will doubtless be a grand educator, bring thousands of foreigners to our country, and all that; yet from the local business standpoint I could wish that New York had captured the prize.—Morenci Observer.

Cleveland's Cabinet.

Politicians are already figuring on the personnel of President-elect Cleveland's Cabinet. Although Michigan did not give him her entire electoral vote, it is loudly whispered that a place will be given one of her most distinguished sons and that he will travel on one of the new 1,000-mile family tickets issued by the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan Ry. They are good for the purchaser and members of his family and are now on sale at all ticket offices of the Company. Price $20.00.

Hood's Pills cure liver ills, jaundice, biliousness, sick headache, constipation

The World's Columbian Exposition Illustrated.

For December will be especially interesting to all the citizens of this State. In addition to its usual amount of authentic general World's Fair information, it has a large and beautifully executed engraving of our State Building as it will appear when completed. This engraving alone is worth much more than the cost of the whole copy. It has many large photographs of the members of our State Board, with their complete biographies. This truly great and unexcelled magaziue is published simultaneously in English, German, Spanish and French. Price 25 cents a copy. Subscription price, $3.00 for 12 copies. Published semi-monthly in October, 1892. Send $1.50 and receive all the magazines from July, 1892, to January, 1893, 10 in all, which cover one of the most interesting periods in the history of the Exposition. Address J. R. Campbell, Pres., 159 and 161 Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

THE TESTIMONIALS

Published on behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla are as reliable and as worthy your confidence, as if they came from your best and most trusted neighbor. They state only the simple facts in regard to what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done, always within truth and reason.

Constipation, and all troubles with the digestive organs and the liver, are cured by Hood's Pills. Unequalled as a dinner pill.

The great value of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a remedy for catarrh is vouched for by thousands of people whom it has cured.

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 17, 1892.

The tariff is a tax.

Good bye, Benny, good bye.

Public office is a public trust.

Tariff reform has come to stay.

The fat frier's occupation is gone.

American tin will now be taken in out of the wet.

It was the people vs. the trusts and the people won.

And the "star-eyed Goddess" was in the thickest of the fight.

Within four days after Cleveland's election wheat advanced four cents a bushel.

The melancholy days have come for the Republican newspapers and office holders.

The American people evidently disagree with Major McKinley in regard to the effect of his tariff law.

What did it? Our Republican friends are spending all their leisure moments now trying to solve this riddle.

When Ohio deserts the G. O. P. in a Presidential campaign, Major McKinley can well exclaim, "Et tu, Brute."

One of the best features of the victory is that the Democracy will control the U. S. Senate in the next Congress.

Major McKinley lost his own Congressional district, his own county and only won his own state by a scratch.

The people have had two years experience in trying to get rich by taxing themselves for the trusts and they have had enough.

Harrison places the blame on Blair and Quay, they shift it upon Depew, Depew blames Major McKinley and the Major keeps mum.

The Republicans are taking their medicine now in large doses, but to their credit be it said, most of them are taking it like men.

There is no use crying over spilled milk. The Republicans should now take Henry Clay's advice. Pick their flints and try it again.

Turkeys will be in extra demand next week in all Democratic families. They can celebrate Thanksgiving with more than usual enthusiasm.

The Democratic majority in the next House will be considerably less than in the present one, but it will be large enough for all practical purposes.

The Republicans saved Minnesota, but they saved it by running Knute Nelson, an avowed tariff reformer, for Governor, who voted in Congress for the Mills bill.

We were confident that Cleveland would be elected by a safe majority, but we hardly expected to carry the whole western hemisphere, including the Nutmeg state and Chicago.

Congressman Gorman made a brilliant fight in this Congressional district. He had to stand the brunt of the Republican onslaught but he came out of the campaign with flying colors.

New York City and Brooklyn gave 140,000 majority for Cleveland. The commercial metropolis of this country believes in commercial freedom, and it spoke its views in thunder tones on election day.

Chicago has nobly done its work by the democracy, it would be fitting for the Windy City to get up a national celebration over the victory, thus giving us an opportunity to witness the preparations in progress for the world's fair.

A Republican exchange takes it pretty impudically in this wise. The bright, cheerful Indian summer has come to a quick end. Rainstorm Monday, landslide Tuesday and sworm Wednesday, and

"We may be happy, yet
You bet."

The World says: It is a great victory well and worthily won. The Democratic party displayed the courage of its convictions in its nomination for President. It wanted Grover Cleveland as its candidate and it nominated him. It believed in its principles and boldly declared them. Courage and honesty have won. Long live the Republic!

THE PEOPLE'S VICTORY.

As the smoke lifts from the field of battle and the complete election returns are received, the full significance and far-reaching effects of last week's victory can be carefully examined and analyzed. Although not so much of a landslide as the elections of 1890 the victory will be tenfold more effective in its practical results.

It was truly and emphatically a People's victory. The politicians of the Democratic party, the men who guide the machine and manipulate the canvasses, were opposed to Cleveland's nomination at the outset. But the Democratic masses arose in their majesty, sent their delegates to Chicago and placed Grover Cleveland at the head of the ticket. As the campaign developed and the issues shaped themselves, this [illegible] and more manifest: The rich combines and monopolies which have fattened at the expense of the consumer, the trusts that have grown and thrived under the McKinley law, the tariff barons who bought Harrison's election four years ago, were all arrayed against the Ex-President; while the masses of the people rallied under Grover's banner and marched to the music of tariff reform. It was a fair and square fight between boodle and brains, between plutocracy and honest politics, between the classes and the masses, and the people won.

The issues shaped themselves most opportunely for the Democracy from the first. The menace of the force bill made the South solider than ever before. The tyranny of the federal officeholders disgusted thousands of Republicans. The disappointment occasioned by Blaine's defeat made thousands more lukewarm. The "billion dollar Congress," with its prodigal extravagance, still cast its shadow over the political horizon. The McKinley iniquity was like a double-edged sword; it cut the party in twain in two directions. By robbing the consumer it alienated the Republican farmers of the Northwest and wiped out the majorities which have been the chief reliance of the party since the war. By treating importing merchants as no better than blacklegs and criminals it drove the big wholesale houses of New York and Chicago into the Cleveland ranks en masse. To this fact, more than any other cause, can be attributed the overwhelming majorities for Cleveland that were rolled up in Chicago, New York and Brooklyn. Each and all of the causes contributed to the most crushing defeat that any party has sustained in a Presidential year since the collapse of the old Whig party in 1852, just forty years ago this November. It was one of the most stupendous political revolutions in our national history. Pennsylvania, the chief beneficiary of the [illegible] remains true to her colors. And why should she not? A few other scattering States still cling to the Republican hulk, but the irresistible tide for reduced taxation and revenue reform has swept over the Republic from the lakes to the gulf, and from Cape Cod to the Golden Gate.

President Lincoln once said that it was possible to fool some of the people all the time and to fool all the people some of the time, but it was impossible to fool all the people all the time. There are times when a closely contested election can be turned by a prodigal use of money, as was demonstrated four years ago in New York and Indiana, but when the people get down to a sober, common-sense view of a square political issue, neither boodle nor bonanza can control them. This year the people thought for themselves. The canvass was remarkably free from the red fire and brass band clap-trap of previous political contests. The voters attended public meetings freely and listened calmly to all sides. They read, they considered, they made up their own minds and then they voted. The millions of money collected from the tariff barons was engulfed and swept from sight like straws in Niagara's whirlpool. They saw the menace to free government involved in federal control of elections. They saw that the McKinley tariff was devised to benefit a few and oppress the many. They determined that government extravagance must stop, that the looting of a bankrupt treasury by boodle must stop, that war taxes, which ought to have been abolished many years ago, must cease now. The revolt against the unjust taxation left us as a legacy of the civil war, was wrought out at the ballot box between the rising and the setting of the sun.

Only one word is adequate to describe the result and that is Revolution. The election of 1890 was the Gettysburg of the conflict. The victory of last week was its Appomattox. We have not simply won a victory, we have ended the war. For the first time since 1856 the Democracy controls both branches of Congress and the Executive. For the first time since the war the party has the power to enact the needed legislation which the people need to wipe out war taxes and reduce the tariff burdens which have so long oppressed them. Not only this, but the victory will have a far-reaching influence upon other issues likely to arise in the near future. It inaugurates a new era, which will kill the old war issues, dissolve the coalition between New York and the solid South and make the great West a controlling factor in national politics. Hereafter the West and South, whose interests are identical, will act and vote together.

THE NOVEMBER NORTH AMERICAN.

The North American Review for November, besides being very strong as usual in timely articles by famous writers, presents from Mr. Blaine the fullest utterance that statesman has made on the issues involved in the forthcoming National contest between the parties. His article is entitled The Presidential Campaign of 1892, and is written with great vigor and characteristic purity of style. It offers many new points of view. The publication in The North American Review of this important paper is significant of the vigilance of the editor in providing the public with utterances of authority adapted to the moment. The Democratic Outlook describes the article contributed by the Hon. W. F. Harrity, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Mr. Harrity, with a marked degree of frankness, goes over the ground and urges many reasons for his belief that the control of the government will be transferred to the Democratic party by the November election. The Rev. Bishop Foss, of Philadelphia, in his article, Politics [illegible] a contribution to the series of articles on this subject that have recently appeared in The Review, and he, like other writers in this series, urges the duty of the citizen to concern himself with important issues in politics. Prof. H. H. Boyesen, in The Scandinavian in the United States, gives an interesting account of the conditions of life among these new citizens points out their value to the country, a race easily assimilated, but holding close to their own native prejudices. Wanted, a New Party, is a plea from T. V. Powderly, who, speaks with official authority, for a better appreciation of the rights of the laboring class.

A RAILWAY HORROR.

Terrible Fate of Passengers in a Blazing Car in Iowa.

Four of Them Are Burned to Death in a Collision Near Ottumwa—Carelessness Was the Cause—Wreck in Wisconsin.

ESCAPE CUT OFF.

OTTUMWA, Ia., Nov. 11.—A fearful accident occurred on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road Wednesday night at Highland Center, a small station north of Ottumwa. A fast freight train dashed into the caboose of the local freight, which was standing on the track, telescoping the caboose and four cars. The caboose caught fire and with several cars was burned. The scene was heartrending.

FOUR BURNED ALIVE.

Four people perished in the flames, and a number of others had narrow escapes. The caboose was split in two by a car of grain, wedging in four people on the right side. The most pitiful sight was that of Miss Lizzie Butler, of Ottumwa, who got her head out of the window, and piteously pleaded with those about the wreck to save her, but her body was pinioned by the freight car and it was impossible to extricate her. Mrs. Samuel Jones, also of Ottumwa, tried to escape through a window, but she was an unusually large woman and could not get through. The other victims were an unknown woman and Joseph Thornton, a butcher at Sigourney.

THE INJURED.

The injured are Mrs. Clyde Millisack and Mrs. C. D. Rickey, of Ottumwa, and Miss Lizzie Corey, of Sigourney, who are badly burned, but not fatally. A curious incident of the accident was that one of the passengers was disguised, and, in the crash, his disguise came off, revealing a noted crook. He quickly disappeared in the excitement.

CRIMINAL CARELESSNESS.

The cause of the accident seems to have been due entirely to criminal carelessness on the part of the crew of the fast train. The local train was standing at the station unloading freight. For 4 miles away the track is perfectly level and straight, so that the danger lights of the standing train could easily be seen by the engineer and fireman of the fast train, and everybody saw it approaching, but never dreamed of a collision. In fact, the company's rules are so strict that when trains enter station yards if they are not under such absolute control as to be brought to a stop before striking another train, even through accident to switches or anything else, heavy penalty attaches to the employes guilty of violating them. The conduct of Engineer Richardson and Conductor Wood, who had charge of the fast train in this instance, cannot be accounted for by the officials of the road. No report has been made as to whether they were placed under arrest, but an investigation is being made. In the fire one carload of barley and two carloads of merchandise were burned.

The responsibility for the accident is not yet fixed. Before the coroner's jury Thursday Engineer Richardson, of the fast freight, testified that he could not see the lights on the caboose until within 75 rods. Two of the lights were out, and the third was so badly smoked that he could not see it farther away, although he could see the switch lights. He called for brakes, reversed his engine and jumped.

WRECK IN WISCONSIN.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., Nov. 11.—A collision took place on the Wisconsin Central road at Summit, 16 miles west of this city, between two freight trains at 6 o'clock Thursday evening. William Witzing, fireman, of this city, was instantly killed and John Lynch badly scalded. Both engines were badly smashed and the cars piled up as high as telegraph poles.

Horses In a Wreck.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 12.—By a freight wreck near Ludlow Grove, 7 miles from this city, Friday, a parlor horse car with fourteen valuable horses belonging to Green B. Morris, of Westchester, N. Y., was thrown down an embankment. None of the horses were killed, but all were more or less injured. One is an imported stallion valued at $25,000 and the others were valued at $35,000.

Two Men Killed.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 12.—There was a collision Thursday night on the Louisville, New Orleans & Texas road near Babo, Miss., between two freight trains. The southbound train passed a meeting point ten minutes ahead of time and the collision followed. Engineers Weaver and Heiner were instantly killed and their bodies were brought here.

World's Fair Souvenirs.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The treasury department has arranged for the immediate shipment of 5,000,000 half-dollar silver pieces to the United States mint at Philadelphia for coinage into souvenir half-dollar coins for the world's fair. It is expected that the first lot of the souvenir coins will be completed by the close of the present year.

An Important Mission.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—The representatives of the United States to the international monetary conference at Brussels have sailed on their mission. It is believed they were instructed to use all the influence of the United States toward securing an agreement by which the parity of silver and gold may be established.

Killed on a Crossing.

EFFINGHAM, Ill., Nov. 12.—Frank Willenberg, a cigar maker of this city, was struck by a light engine on the Illinois Central crossing, and sustained such injuries as to produce death within an hour. He was 52 years of age.

A Village Burned.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 12.—The mining village of Federal, 13 miles from here, was entirely destroyed by an incendiary fire yesterday.

AT WORK AGAIN.

The Strike at New Orleans Has Been Declared Off.

The Demand of the Strikers for Recognition of the Unions Is Withdrawn—Indignation Over the Terms of Settlement.

THE MEN YIELD.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 12.—The strike was declared off Friday. The amalgamated council virtually surrendered. They abandoned the demand for recognition of the union and agree to arbitrate the questions of time and wages and to allow the merchants to retain the men employed. They ask, however, that union men be not discriminated against in the future. After some haggling the merchants agreed to this. The parties to this agreement declare that they will use their best endeavors to adjust any differences which may result or may have resulted from any strike made in sympathy with the strike hereinabove referred to, in accordance with the above terms. The arbitration clause is to be effected within the next forty-eight hours.

INDIGNANT WORKMEN.

There is intense indignation among a large number of the workingmen over the manner in which the strike was settled, and the committee of five representing the interests of the laborers is openly denounced and charged with treachery and having sold out the labor element. A thousand men were crowded into Exchange alley during the morning. They included whites and blacks and represented many men who had been unable to secure their places again. They have been out for nearly three weeks and their families are in want. The leaders, they say, had sold them out and had surrendered every point that had been contended for.

UNIONS DISORGANIZED.

The street car companies have about broken up the car drivers' union and the contract that was broken will undoubtedly remain so. The companies will employ new union and non-union men indiscriminately. All the ringleaders on the street car lines have been discharged and the unions are so badly disorganized that they cannot do anything about the matter.

Business is gradually being resumed. None of the non-union men are being discharged. The colossal failure of the strike means that the backbone of the unions is broken and that the American Federation of Labor is out of business in this state.

SHOOK THE EARTH.

Great Damage Done by a Powder House Explosion at Niagara Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 14.—A fearful explosion startled this city shortly before 10 a. m. Saturday. Houses, business blocks and hotels were swayed and windows shattered. The powder house of Douglas & Johnson, the canal and tunnel contractors, had exploded, killing John Hoban, master mechanic of all the immense works of the contractors. William Weir, an engineer, and Sherman Dismuth (colored), a fireman, were badly cut about the face, head and body. Search was made in the ruins for the bodies, which it was feared were to be found there, but none was discovered, and it was believed that all of the other men at work escaped.

Will Discourage Immigration.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—In view of the possibility of a fresh outburst of cholera in European countries in the spring and the consequent danger of its introduction into the United States immigration will be generally discouraged and the provisions of President Harrison's proclamation of September 1, imposing a quarantine of twenty days on all suspected immigrants, will be vigorously enforced.

The Letter Came at Last.

FAIRBURY, Ill., Nov. 12.—It took five years and a half for a letter to travel from this city to Galesburg, Ill. The letter was mailed here May 11, 1887, and shows on the face of the envelope that it was mailed that day. It also bears the Chicago (Ill.) stamp as having been received there November 4, 1892, while in the proper place on the back of the envelope is the Galesburg stamp of November 5.

Died from Exhaustion.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Nov. 11.—William F. Keck, the murderer who was to be executed at noon Thursday, was found dead in his cell Thursday morning. Everything was ready for the hanging. The gallows were in position, the rope greased and fastened, the gallows tested. The doctors who made the post-mortem examination found no traces of poison and swore that it was nervous exhaustion.

Domestic Breadstuffs.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The chief of the bureau of statistics reports that the total values of the exports of domestic breadstuffs from the United States during the ten months ended October 31 were $293,280,583, against $169,488,629 during the previous ten months in 1891.

PRONOUNCED HOPELESS, YET SAVED.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at J. J. Orr's drug store. Large size 50c. and $1.00.

"At last," said the author to the sociable man, whom he met on the train. "I find someone who has read my book. "Yes" replied the stranger, "I didn't skip a line. I was proof-reader in the office where it was published."

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a Common Pimple to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

DR. RANSOM'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such, that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE LATEST ELECTION NEWS.

The returns from last week's election have been very slow in coming in and even yet the result is clouded with doubt in some states and congressional districts. The table of electoral votes published last week in the HERALD is somewhat changed this week. The result in Ohio is so close that it will require the official count to settle it. The Populists gain one state not in their column last week. California is still in doubt on electors but has a fusion legislature which will send an anti-Republican to the U. S. Senate. Oregon elects one Populist elector and three Republicans. The Senate will be safely Democratic without the Populist vote and on all tariff measures the Democrats can rely upon their co-operation.

Of the twenty-five senatorial seats vacant March 4, 1893, the Democrats will name the occupants of thirteen, the Republicans of nine and the Populists of three, one being Senator Stewart of Nevada, who has gone from the Republican party. The Democrats lose no seats they now hold and gain five from the Republicans, one each in California, Montana, New York, Wisconsin and Wyoming. The Populists gain Senators from the Republicans in Kansas and Nebraska, besides Senator Stewart in Nevada, who will succeed himself.

From the most careful estimates that can be made at present, the Democrats will have 43 members of the next Senate, the Republicans 40 and the Populists 5. Upon the inside pages will be found carefully prepared tables giving the electoral vote, the popular pluralities in each state, and the political complexion of the next House. These tables are substantially correct, although the official count may change them slightly.

"Ole Olson" at Good's.

Ole Olson at Good's last night drew one of the largest audiences the opera house ever had. Extra chairs were put in the aisles clear down to the stage. This is the fourth appearance of the play in this city and on former occasions it drew nearly as large an audience as greeted its appearance last night. James T. McAlpine plays the leading role, Ole Olson. Mr. McAlpine's rendition of that part was effective and won the plaudits of the audience, who were unstinted in their audible marks of appreciation. Miss Alice Irving, as Mrs. Agnes Jordan, was excellent. Mrs. Bridget O'Flannigan brought down the house several times with her quaint Irish drollery. This character was depicted by Miss Louise Arnot, who is an actress of no little ability. Marie Heath's place was filled by Dolly Foster, who played the part of Gene Dimple as satisfactorily as Marie. Miss Foster has a decided advantage over Marie in several particulars. The innovation, the Swedish quartette, was fine. The singing of these Swedish ladies is of a most pleasing character.—South Bend Daily Times.

The Ole Olson Company will appear at Sutton's Opera House on Thursday evening, Dec. 1st.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE IN 1893.

It would be hard for a person who cares for good reading to make a better investment than a year's subscription to The Century Magazine. No reign is too remote, no expense too great, if it will only produce what the Century's readers want. This is the policy that has made it, as the Pall Mall Budget, London, says, by far the best of the magazines, English or American.

The November number begins a new volume and contains the first chapters of a powerful novel of New York society called 'Sweet Bells Out of Tune,' written by Mrs. Burton Harrison, the author of The Anglomaniacs. In this story the fashonable wedding, the occupants of the boxes in the Metropolitan Opera House, the smart set, in the country house are faithfully reflected, and the illustrations by Charles Dana Gibson, Life's wellk nown cartoonist, are as brilliant as the novel.

In this November number begins also a great series of papers on The Bible and Science, opening with Does the Bible contain Scientific Errors, by Prof. Shields, of Princeton, who takes decided ground that the Bible does not, contain scientific errors of any moment, and who most interestingly states the case from his point of view. Other articles in the series will include one in the December (Christmas) number. The effect of Scientific Study upon Religious Beliefs.

An important series of letters that passed between General Sherman and his brother Senator John Sherman are also printed in November, which number contains also contributions from the most distinguished writers, including an article by James Russell Lowell, which was not quite completed at the time of his death. The suggestion which Bishop Potter makes in the November Century as to what could be done with the World's Fair if it were opened on Sunday, is one which seems the most practical solution of the problem yet offered.

The December Century is to be a great Christmas number.—full of Christmas stories, Christmas poems, and Christmas pictures,—and in it will begin the first chapters of a striking novel of life in Colorado, Benefits Forgot, by Wolcott Balestier, who wrote The Naulahka with Rudyard Kipling.

Papers on good roads, the new educational methods, and city government are soon to come.

Four dollars will bring you this splendid magazine for one yrar, and certainly no cultivated home can afford to be without it. Subscribers can remit directly to the publishers, The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York.

OBITUARY.

Died, at her home in Macon on Saturday, October 29th, 1892, Mrs. Ida Martin, wife of Frederick Beleand and daughter of Michael Martin, aged 35 years, one month and 11 days.

Mrs. Beeland leaves a husband and two small children, a little boy and girl. Her death was so unexpected and sudden that it was a great shock to all. She had been busy all morning preparing for the pole-raising at James Clarkson's and had just left the dinner table when she fell under the stroke of death and passed away without a word.

Mrs. Beeland's life had been one of very few changes. She had always lived in the same community where her death occurred, except for a very short period, when she moved with her husband into Monroe county. Reared by a godly mother her activities were with the church of her mother, who died just thirteen years previous to her daughter's death. She was an active worker at home, in the neighborhood and in the church. She will be sadly missed, not only by her husband and little children, who have the sincere sympathy of all, but in the neighborhood and in the church. Her generous spirit, her untiring devotion to her family and her management of her home will be remembered. "She being dead yet speaketh." Her funeral was attended on Tuesday, Nov. 1st, from her late home, by a large company of friends and relatives. Her remains were interred in the Lake Ridge Cemetery, in good hope of a glorious resurrection.

In Memoriam.

We clip the following from the Jackson Daily Citizen of Nov. 9th. The deceased was for many years a resident of Franklin and will be kindly remembered by the older residents of that township.

Entered into rest, Charles Oliver Reynolds, beloved husband of Madaline S. Reynolds, in the 57th year of his age, at his home, 1,242 East Ganson street. The long illness, which lasted more than three years, and which was borne with a cheerfulness and heroism seldom equalled, had a tendency to chasten and subdue a once imperative spirit, and the end was approached calmly and trustingly in the life beyond.

The deceased was born in Franklin, Lenawee county, Mich., Nov. 2, 1836. He responded to the first call of his country and became a member of the First Michigan infantry, serving the three months for which that regiment was enlisted. In October following he re-enlisted in Company K, Third Michigan Cavalry, and after five years of active service returned to his home commissioned first lieutenant of Co. B, proud to see the surviving members of his company discharged with himself, March 16, 1866.

A good citizen has gone from our midst, a kind, and devoted husband is no more, and a brave soldier has awakened to the long reveille and is at rest forever.

Funeral at residence at 10 a. m. Tuesday, Nov. 8. Interment at Leoni.

The Hon. John F. Smith, of Westminster, Md., Judge of the Circuit Court of Carroll Co., Md., says: "I have used Salvation Oil for rheumatism. Its effects were prompt and lasting.

STATE OF MICHIGAN County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 15th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate

In the matter of the estate of Lodema Sherman, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Mary Mathews, administrator, with the will annexed, upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred have been fully paid, and that she is now ready to close said estate and to render her final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be assigned and distributed to the parties entitled thereto, and that she may be discharged and her bond canceled and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 12th day of December next at 9 o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

Christmas falls on Sunday this year.

Paint the town red to-morrow evening.

The Ole Oleson troupe will appear at Patton's opera house on the evening of Dec. 1st.

We understand that several of our Democratic citizens will illuminate their fires to-morrow evening.

The defeated candidate and the fellow who lost the money he put up on them are alike sad of heart, and refuse to be comforted.

The second lecture in the Star Course will be given by Rev. Russell H. Conwell on Tuesday evening, Dec. 6th.

James Lowry, Tecumseh's veteran soldier, must feel pretty happy since election. If you don't believe it read the double column ad on the left hand side.

The new folding postal card has made its appearance. It is a cheap and convenient method of asking for a reply through the mails and does away with enclosing a two cent stamp.

John T. Clark will sell at auction the increase of his herd of Jerseys, some forty head of cows, heifers and bulls, at the stables in Clinton, on Friday Nov. 25th, beginning at one o'clock P. M.

Died Nov. 9th, the sweet little two year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Marshall, after a short struggle with whooping cough and measles. The parents feel grateful to kind friends for sympathy through sickness and at the funeral.

The Democrats will hold a big jollification meeting in Tecumseh to-morrow evening. Hon. Jas. S. Gorman will speak, the Blissfield Glee Club will sing and the Kid Band will play. There will be a grand display of fireworks at 8 p. m. Paint the town red.

Rev. Gorton will preach on the following subjects at the Universalist church next Sunday, "Religeous enthusiasm." Evening subject: "Is opportunity for repentance, reformation, and salvation, unless for every soul? Or is it limited to this life? The public cordially invited.

A grand masquerade ball will be given at Kelby's Hall in Britton, on Wednesday evening, Nov. 23d. Music by the Britton orchestra, assisted by Prof. Skinner. Four prizes will be given, one for the best gent's and lady's costume, and for the most comical gent's and lady's costume. Bill $1,00, including supper. Joe Mellon, Flour Manager.

Now is the time in the fall when stove pipes are being put up and fires built that great pains should be used with careful previous inspection. It may save your house.—Addison Courier. Also, remember while putting up the stove that "he that ruleth his own spirit is greater than he that taketh a city." It may save your title to a harp hereafter.—Adrian Press.

Prof. Kempton, of the Addison school, gave a discourse on the "Logic of Life" at the Addison M. E. church, Monday evening. He gained a few important points about his subject, during his recent struggle with malarial fever. The Press is glad to learn that Prof. Kempton comes out, best man.—Addison Press.

The long flavor of Christmas will pervade the Editor's Drawer in Harper's Monthly for December. Thomas Nelson Page will tell the amusing story of "How Whittier's Christmas Party," which will be illustrated by A. B. Frost; Frederick Bangs will have a characteristic poem on "Christmas at the Farm"; and there will be a variety of anecdotes, poems, etc., especially appropriate to the holiday season.

The measles are still on the rampage in this town.

Wm. C. Heck and wife were in Adrian over Sunday.

W. R. Bresie, of Decatur, Ill., was in town Monday.

Robt. McClure spent last Sunday with friends in Adrian.

L. D. Dewey is having a big run now in his poultry and egg trade.

Mrs. J. W. Patterson, of Elkhart, is visiting friends in town this week.

We are glad to see Dan Hall out again. He has been on the sick list for several days.

Everybody should come to Tecumseh to-morrow evening and help the Democrats celebrate.

F. R. Stebbins, of Adrian, has a new message on the first page which will repay careful perusal.

We are glad to see Elijah Ames out again. He was able to come over to town on election day and vote.

Mrs. S. W. Morse and Mrs. A. Gage are in Manchester attending their sister, Mrs. G. Conklin, who is very low.

The county canvassing board met at Adrian last Tuesday, to declare the official canvass of the late election.

Edgar Coddington is spending a few weeks at home now. He has been stopping in Chicago during the summer.

Rev. Adkins and family left Thursday for their home in Granville, Ohio. The best wishes of their friends will go with them.

D. L. Whitenack & Co., have a message in to-days paper about the Monitor Oak Stove. Every householder should read it.

C. E. Williamson is taking in an immense amount of poultry now. His shipments for Thanksgiving have already begun.

E. F. Kirchgessner has a new card this week. In the line of books and jewelry Ed. does not intend to take a back seat to any of them.

Township treasurers would do well to call on us before ordering their tax receipts. We print them in any form desired, neatly bound in books.

S. V. R. Ely of N. Y., is shaking hands with his old Macon friends for a couple of weeks. He cast his vote for Cleveland before leaving home.

Mrs. Wm. A. Wood, who has been visiting friends in town for the past two weeks, returned to her home in Ulrichville, Ohio, last Saturday.

The sheet of American tin, nailed on the telegraph pole at Henry Jones's corner, should be taken in out of the wet. It is sadly out of date now.

Geo. Monaghan, who has been spending several weeks at his old home, has gone to Buffalo, and may possibly conclude to remain there for a time, if he can secure a job in the cattle yards.

Wm. Bresie has purchased J. S. Kinney's furniture business and already taken possession. He intends to close out the stock within sixty days and offers some big bargains in furniture. Give him a call.

Eighteen years ago last Tuesday, Nov. 15th, 1874, S. C. Stacy bought the HERALD printing office and took possession the same day. Providence permitting, he is more than likely to run the business eighteen years longer.

The result recalls the story related by Prohibitionist Wolfenbarger, concerning the Republican who bet $10 he could tell what was meant by "vox populi vox dei," and then gave us the interpretation: "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me!"—Adrian Press.

Capt. Hayden and Lieut. McClure went to Jackson Tuesday to participate in the election for officers of the first Mich. Infantry. Capt. John Tyrrell, of Jackson, was elected Colonel and Capt. Fred. Shubel, of Lansing, Lieut. Colonel. They are both regarded as good selections.

The semi-annual meeting of the B. Y. P. U. was held at Weston last Friday, with a large delegation in attendance. Will Fisher, Will Hushen. Fred Sheldon and Rev. Smith, Misses Ellen Fisher, Gertrude Fisher, Luella Sutherland and Carrie Osborne were the delegates from here.

Clinton Local; Rev. D. H. Ramsdell returned from Omaha Monday, accompanied by his bride. They were given a reception at the M. E. church last night, which was largely attended. Mrs. R. makes a valuable acquisition to Clinton society, and the welcome tendered last night, will surely make them both feel that they already have a place in the hearts of our people.

Hunters take notice: Section 2221, compiled laws of Mich., relative to hunting on lands of another reads as follows: "That it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to hunt for game with fire arms, dogs or otherwise, on any enclosed lands or premises of another in any county of this state without the consent of the owner or lessee of such lands or premises."

Harper's Bazar for November 19th will be a superb Thanksgiving number, particularly attractive on account of its numerous beautiful illustrations and its valuable miscellany of stories, poems, and short articles appropriate to the thanksgiving season. Among the features worthy of special mention there will be a striking story by Bessie Chandler, entitled "The turning of the Worm," and a poem by Margaret E. Sangster, "Mother's Thanksgiving," illustrated by Irving Wiles.

Thanksgiving one week from to-day.

Yesterday was almost a September day.

Miss Etta Coddington is clerking at Adamson Bros.

The Adrian Democrats had a big jollification meeting Tuesday evening.

Editor Blosser, wife and Mrs. John Spafard, of Manchester, came down to attend Cable's lecture last evening.

Clinton, Franklin, Raisin, Ridgeway and Britton were all well represented at Geo. W. Cable's lecture last evening.

Rev. G. W. Hudson, a former pastor of the Tecumseh M. E. church, will occupy the pulpit next Sunday morning and evening.

We are indebted to Miss Manie Monaghan for a program of the Columbus Day exercises, given by the public schools of Artesia, Cal.

A new Wheeler & Wilson, No. 9, Sewing Machine for sale at a bargain. Call at this office and see the machines. This chance cannot go begging long.

Miss Clarinda Walker, who has been spending a few weeks with nieces, at Battle Creek and Thompkins, has returned to Tecumseh for a season.

The contractors are rushing the laying of the water mains as rapidly as possible. If the weather continues good the pipes will be all laid by the first of December.

Mac G. Fritz has finished his job in Indiana and come back to live in Tecumseh once more. He will soon open a Bazaar stock in the vacant store west of Adamson Bros.

A Wheeler and Wilson No. 8 Sewing Machine, right from the factory, can be purchased at a very low figure if taken soon. Call at this office and examine the machine.

Dr. Julia P. Greene, of Adrian, will be at the Lilley House Wednesdays from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. Chronic diseases of women and children; also, diseases of the nose, throat and lungs as specialties.

Monday evening J. H. Smith, Mrs. A. Hardenburgh, Mrs. E. S. Tate went to Dundee to attend the installation of officers of the order of Eastern Star. J. H. Smith acted as installing officer and Mrs. Tate as Marshall.

We have received from the A. J. Showalter Co. of Dalton, Ga., copies of their two latest songs: At Twilight Time, and Come and Meet Me, Nora Darling. They are both beautiful pieces of vocal music and ought to have a large sale.

Dr. Julia P. Green, of Adrian, has made arrangements to be at the Lilley House every Wednesday from 10 a. m., to 4 p. m., for consultation and treatment of chronic diseases of women and children. Also especial attention given to diseases of the nose, throat and lungs.

Mrs. A. E. Gridley, of Washington, D. C., was in town the first of the week the guest of Mrs. J. D. Sholes and other Tecumseh friends. She still holds a government clerkship in Washington, and is enjoying good health and good prospects.

To-night Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Hicks, Mrs. A. Hardenberg, Mrs. M. E. Corey and Mrs. E. S. Tate go to Clinton to attend the installation of officers of the Order of Eastern Star. J. H. Smith acts as installing officer and Mrs. Tate as marshall.

The County Canvass may be delayed several days. County Clerk Waterman has demanded a recount of the votes in the third ward of Adrian and the townships of Rome, Palmyra and Wood. stock. That recount is now in progress. Mr. Mills is likely to ask for a recount of the whole county if the count now in progress should go against him.

E. D. Stair, manager of the Grand Rapids opera house, in a letter to manager Sutton, says: "I take pleasure in warmly endorsing J. H. Shunk's Ole Oleson company, that will soon appear in your city. In spite of election excitement, the attraction drew crowded houses to ten performances in the city. The cast is very strong, particularly Jas. T. McAlpine in the character of Ole Oleson."

Dr. Nelson of Ridgeway was a staunch Harrison man. Jos. Emery of the Hotel Emery was a staunch Cleveland supporter. If Harrison had been elected the Doctor would have secured $40 worth of first class Hotel Emery board for $20, but as he wasn't, he now pays $40 for $20 worth of board. To get licked is bad enough, but to have to pay two prices for board after being soundly threshed is pretty tough.—Messenger.

A fine audience greeted Geo. W. Cable last evening and listened to a program of peculiar and unique interest. It consisted of readings from his own novels, which were rendered in his own inimitable style. Mr. Cable is rather under size in stature, but possesses a full clear voice and dramatic talent of a superior order. He would shine as an actor. The audience was thoroughly interested and delighted with the entertainment.

Mr. Cleveland breaks the record in one respect. He is not the first citizen elected for a second term as President. Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Lincoln and Grant were all re-elected and Mr. Cleveland comes eighth in the list of two-term Presidents. But no other citizen of the United States was ever returned to the Executive Mansion by the vote of the people after having once departed from that desirable place of residence. Mr. Cleveland will be the first two-term President whose service was not continuous.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to extend our hearty thanks to the many friends who remembered us with their aid and sympathy in our recent affliction.
THOS. BOYD AND FAMILY.

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do you know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough. The surprising Press witness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements, and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods who never introduced, conclusively prove that true modesty is always recognized and the quality of merit takes care of itself, metaphorically our statement is the Button—the Public Press it, and

"Do the Rest."

The existing Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements, that so much comfort for $1.66 (the price) is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal dimenities and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to loan for twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Eletric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt) and credit $3 on the price of new order. Remember the Electric Foot warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

Cleveland and Stevenson Receive a Big Majority of Electoral Votes—Both Branches of Congress Lost to Republicans.

THE RESULT.

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—Indications now are that the electoral votes of the various states will be cast as given in the table below. By it Ohio is placed in the republican column, North Dakota and Idaho in that of Weaver, and California in the democratic list. Conservatives claim that the official count is necessary in Ohio and North Dakota. The list is:

THE SENATE.

The principal change in the senate probabilities is that the California legislature will be controlled by the democrats, which insures a gain of a democratic senator. In Kansas the republicans will elect a successor to Perkins, while in Montana instead of a republican, a silver man, probably a populist, will be chosen. The following table shows the results:

THE HOUSE.

There have been several changes in the house probabilities, as shown by Thursday's returns. In Illinois the victories of Childs and Funk made the delegation a tie. In Michigan Van Kleeck, rep., defeats Weadock, while in Minnesota Baldwin, dem., and Boen, peo., win in the 6th and 7th districts respectively. In Montana Hartman, rep., wins, and in Nebraska Meickle-john, rep., 3d district, and Whitehead, rep., 6th, are victorious. In Virginia Goode, peo., is successful in the 4th, while the entire West Virginia delegation is democratic, a gain of two democrats over previous lists. The following table gives the status:

LATEST FROM SEVERAL STATES.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 12.—Claims are even at the republican and democratic state headquarters and each side insists on the honors. Chairman Dick claims the election of the republican state and electoral ticket by over 1,100 plurality, and the democrats claim 1,000 plurality for the Cleveland electors.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 12.—The unofficial figures from all the counties give the democrats a plurality of 3,048 in Indiana. Present figures on joint ballot in the legislature show ninety-seven democrats, fifty republicans and three doubtful.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 12.—The latest returns show that Gov. Peck will have more than 8,000 plurality in this state. He will run about 1,000 ahead of Cleveland.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 12.—Returns from seventy-nine counties, pluralities from nineteen more and an estimated plurality from one (Humboldt) give Harrison a plurality of 22,872. The republicans elect ten of the eleven congressmen.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 12.—While the republicans conceded Kansas to the people's party they claim that it is still in doubt, and that the official vote will be necessary to determine the result. The legislature is probably republican by 7 majority on joint ballot, thus insuring the election of a republican United States senator.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 12.—Returns from the state show that nine of Michigan's electoral votes shall be cast for Harrison and five for Cleveland. Rich (rep.), for governor, has 14,000 plurality. The state being republican in every branch, the legislature will repeal the democratic electoral gerrymander. The counties heard from give Rich (rep.), for governor, 119,681; Morse (dem.), 106,826; Rich's majority over Morse, 13,475.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 12.—The returns of the state of Minnesota were canvassed at the county seats Thursday. Harrison carries the state by 16,000, and Nelson (rep.) is elected governor by a plurality of 14,000. Official figures give the republicans 63 members of the house, the fusionists 51. The senate stands: Republicans, 25; fusionists, 29, giving the republicans 8 majority on joint ballot.

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 12.—Returns make the defeat of the republican state ticket certain, except secretary of state, but the legislature will be republican on joint ballot by at least twenty, thus insuring the election of a United States senator.

HURON, S. D., Nov. 12.—From figures wholly reliable the republicans have elected 53 of 61 representatives reported. Of 31 senators reported 28 are republicans.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 12.—Returns up to 6 o'clock Friday afternoon from all but thirty-nine precincts in San Francisco and 258 outside precincts give Harrison 106,730; Cleveland, 103,937; Weaver, 20,997; Harrison's plurality, 3,623.

TACOMA, Wash., Nov. 12.—Harrison carries the state by 4,060. For governor, McGraw (rep.) will have a plurality of 2,000.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 12.—Thirteen counties of Nebraska out of ninety give Harrison, 74,697; Cleveland, 21,772; Weaver, 68,643. The same counties gave Crounse (rep.), for governor, 69,264; Morton (dem.), 58,395; Van Wyck (pop.), 57,760.

CHICAGO, Nov. 14.—Returns from all the counties in the state show that Cleveland received 420,246 votes; Harrison, 393,296; Cleveland's plurality, 26,950. Altgeld, for governor, received 419,914 votes; Fifer, 395,494; Altgeld's plurality, 24,420.

FAIL TO DO THEIR DUTY.

Everybody has at times failed to do their duty toward themselves. Hundreds of lady readers suffer from sick headache, nervousness, sleeplessness and female troubles. Let them follow the example of Mrs. H. Herbechter, Stevens Point, Wis., who for five years suffered greatly from Nervous Prostration and sleeplessness, tried physicians and different medicines without success but one bottle of Dr. Miles' Nervine caused sound sleep every night and she is feeling like a new person. Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler, Laramie City, Wyoming, Wao tried all other remedies, declares that after three weeks use of Nervine for headache, nervous prostration, etc., she was entirely relieved. Sold by Baker & Hall, Druggists. Trial bottle free.

CARLETON, Mich., Aug. 25, 1890.

To whom it may concern: After an acquaintance with Dr. O. J. Fay extending over a period of eighteen years, I can cheerfully testify to his sincerity of purpose, integrity and high social and professional standing in this, the county of his residence. Having used the New Treatment for Consumption in my family for coughs and colds, I find that it possesses more real merit than any other medicines we have used for these complaints, and heartily recommend its use as a family medicine.

They all Testify

To the Efficacy of the World-Renowned

Swift's Specific.

The old-time simple remedy from the Georgia swamps and fields has gone forth to the antipodes, astonishing the skeptical, confounding the theories of those who depend solely on the physician's skill. There is no blood taint which it does not immediately eradicate. Poisons outwardly absorbed or the result of vile diseases from within all yield to its potent but simple remedy. It is an unequaled tonic, builds up the old and feeble, cures all diseases arising from impure blood or weakened vitality. Send for a treatise. Examine the proof.

No flowery rhetoric can tell the merit of Hood's Sarsaparilla as well as the cures accomplished by this excellent medicine.

THE ADVERTISING

Of Hood's Sarsaparilla is always within the bounds of reason because it is true. It always appeals to the sober, common sense of thinking people because it is true; and it is always fully substantiated by endorsements which, in the final court, the world would be accepted without a moment's hesitation.

For a general family cathartic we confidently recommend Hood's Pills.

I can recommend Ely's Cream Balm to all sufferers from dry catarrh from personal experience.—Michael Hoy, Pharmacist, Denver.

I had catarrh of the head and throat for five years. I used Ely's Cream Balm, and from the first application I was relieved. The sense of smell, which had been lost, was restored after using one bottle. I have found the Balm the only satisfactory remedy for catarrh, and it has effected a cure in my case.—H. L. Meyer, Waverly, N. Y.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a certain mortgage, bearing date April 13th, 1891, executed by Charles H. Aten to Fred J. Landgraf, which has become operative. Said mortgage was on the 28th day of April, 1891, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Lenawee County and State of Michigan, in Liber 121 of mortgages, on page 562. There is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date hereof the sum of five hundred and fifty-six and thirty-three hundredths Dollars ($556.33), and no proceedings have been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof, either at law or in equity.

Notice is therefore hereby given that the premises described in said mortgage, by virtue of the said power of sale and of the statute in such case made and provided, will, on the 30th day of January, 1893, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, at the East front door of the Court House in the City of Adrian, in said County (said Court House being the place where the Circuit Court for said County is held), to pay the sum due as aforesaid and the interest thereon accrued and then to become due, together with an attorney fee of $20 in said mortgage provided, and all other legal costs of foreclosure. Said premises are described in said mortgage as follows: All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, in the County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point in the East line of Pearl street, continued northward from Hewitt's addition to said village, said point being four rods south of the North west corner of a parcel of land formerly owned by Wm Spath; thence running parallel with and four rods distant from the South line of said Spath lot eight rods; thence South parallel with Pearl street two and one-half rods; thence West parallel with said two and one-half rods distant from the first course eight rods to Pearl street; thence north on the East line of Pearl street to the place of beginning, excepting therefrom all that part thereof heretofore sold and conveyed by said Landgraf to said Temple by deed dated November 20th, 1891, and recorded in Liber 127 of Deeds, on page 282 in the office of the Register of Deeds of said County; also excepting and reserving all that part of the above described premises covered by the Adrian Brick Planing Mill.

Dated Oct. 31, 1892.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

Story of a Maniac and His Invention.

There were a dozen of us who were waiting for a train that was loafing along four or five hours behind time. The junction where we were held unwilling prisoners was a remote and lonely crossing without any scenic attractions of any kind, and totally innocent of any means of passing away the time. Not a book or paper could be bought, and the alleged restaurant was a place in which to contract an aggravated case of dyspepsia. We read the time-tables and computed the distances between the stations on the various roads represented; we got hungry and fell to talking of the hotels in various cities, until, satisfied with the Barmecide feast our imaginations set forth, that subject grew old; we criticised the railway managers of the country and suggested laws with dreadful penalties for allowing trains to vary a second from the published time; we compared our watches and each insisted that his was just right and had not varied for months, and still the train did not come. Then with one accord we fell to watching a flock of pigeons that were flying about. One of them was a beautiful tumbler. She would rise to a height of two hundred feet and suddenly her wings would drop as if she were dead and she would come tumbling over and over until she would almost strike the earth, when she would recover herself and sweep up into the air only to repeat her performance. Among the party there was a portly gentleman who was evidently delighted with the bird's action and his exclamations of delight were frequent.

"That must be a glorious sensation for the bird," he said, "to fall as if limp and lifeless, with the speed of an arrow, knowing that she is in no danger. I was reading not long ago in some paper that men who have been saved after falling long distances invariably claim to have experienced a delightful sensation while dropping through the air."

"I had a little experience in that line a short time ago," said another of the party, who was dressed like a priest or an Episcopal minister, "and I assure you my sensations were the reverse of pleasant."

Here was a chance to kill time which we were quick to avail ourselves of, and half of us asked the gentleman to relate his experience. He seemed perfectly willing to do so, and a moment afterward we had disposed ourselves on the edge of the platform and the trunks that stood around, in as comfortable positions as we could find.

"I am a clergyman," began the gentleman, "and among the members of the church under my care is a gentleman who is an enthusiastic student of electric phenomena, and to him the world is indebted for a number of improvements in the telegraph, telephone and incandescent light, which is credited to better-known inventors. Recently he has been investigating the claims made that telephonic pictures were possible, and I have become very much interested in his researches, though I lay no claims to being an electrical expert.

"My friend's office is in the twelfth story of one of the high buildings in Chicago, where my home is, and from the windows there is a distance of not far from one hundred and fifty feet to the pavement below. I have often thought that there would be no shadow of a chance for a man who should fall from one of these windows; little thinking what was in store for me.

"I frequently call on my friend because his talk is interesting, and because his office is high enough to be about as cool a place as there is in the city.

"One morning about two weeks ago I dropped into his office just as he was preparing to go out. He sat down, but I insisted that he should not stay on my account, and finally he suggested that I stay till he returned, which he said would be in the course of an hour. I agreed to this and was soon deeply interested in a new work which I found lying on the table.

"I had not been alone long when a gentleman entered and saluted me, saying: 'Are you interested in electrical apparatus?' I answered that I was to a certain extent, and that my friend who occupied the office was an expert.

"'I have something here that I want to show you,' said the stranger. 'It is going to revolutionize the whole electrical system of the country.'

"'I shall be glad to examine it,' I replied, as he proceeded to unlock a small metal box he carried in one hand. From the box he took a curious looking machine that appeared to be made of some metal resembling aluminum. It was in the shape of a box, on one side of which was a funnel-shaped orifice resembling the receiver of a telephone. The sides of the box were glass, and inside was a complicated system of wheels. Taking a key from his pocket the stranger wound the machine up and the wheels began to run with astonishing rapidity. Little glass tubes were inside the machine and a substance which fluctuated as quicksilver was in them. As soon as the machine began to run, this substance began to shoot back and forth with the rapidity of lightning.

"Going to the telephone in the room, the stranger quickly detached the transmitter and replaced it with his machine. Ringing up the central station he asked me the number of my telephone and I gave it to him, and soon the connection was made. Turning to me he said:

"'Now look in.'

"I did so, and to my amazement I saw that the interior of the room in my house, in which the telephone is situated, was in plain view, though more than three miles away. I saw my wife come through a door and approach the instrument, and when she spoke I could hear her so plainly and see the motion of her lips so perfectly that I could hardly believe that she was not standing face to face with me.

"'It is wonderful!' I exclaimed, looking around at the stranger, who was standing near; 'what is the principle upon which it works?'

"'It is a discovery of my own,' he answered. 'I worked it out with much labor and at large expense. I have spent a million dollars on it. I reasoned that if the vibrations of sound waves could be transmitted long distances, the vibrations of light waves were subject to the same laws, and only needed the proper medium to be transmitted also. This medium I discovered, and with it the glass tubes are filled. The light waves strike the diaphragm of the receiving instrument and are transmitted with the sound waves over the wires. When they reach the receiver they are transferred to the medium I have discovered and the light from it is reflected in such a manner that a perfect picture of the speaker is thrown on the retina of the eye of the person who is at the receiving end. The invention is only in its infancy yet, and its possibilities are only dreamed of. When it shall be perfected the mysteries of the stars shall be made plain and the secrets of the heavens shall be opened to every man. In that day the whole world shall be of one family and you can sit in your home and talk with the remotest people, seeing and hearing them as well as if they were in the same room with you. Then we shall know whether Mars is peopled or not, and no star is so remote that we cannot study it as well as if we were on it.'

"This flow of eloquence on the part of the stranger," continued the clergyman, "astonished me and I looked at him to see if he were in earnest. I saw that he was only saying what he believed, and I also noticed that there was in his eyes a glitter that showed that he was on the border of insanity. Much application in working out the wonderful invention had no doubt caused him to lose his judgment and made him over-enthusiastic. I had no fear of him for I knew that, even if he were insane, humoring his whims would keep him from offering me any violence, and even in that event I have some use of my hands and some confidence in my strength.

"I had seen enough with my own eyes to convince me that a new application of electricity had been discovered and I was really not prepared to dispute with my visitor about the limits within which it would be confined, for it is not safe in these days to say to investors, 'thus far shalt thou go and no farther,' for they are constantly overstepping the bounds, and the impossibilities of yesterday are the unremarked facts of to-day.

"What is this medium you have discovered?' I asked; 'it looks like quicksilver.'

"Before I had time to think or defend myself the stranger had me fast. With one bound he grasped me around the arms with one of his and had me by the throat with his other hand. Then began the most awful struggle I was ever engaged in.

"'Aha!' exclaimed my assailant, 'you have guessed part of my secret, have you, and want to steal my invention. It is time for you to die.'

"Then I realized that I was in the hands of a raving maniac, who was bent on compassing my destruction. Struggle as I would I was as a child in his hands. Without apparent effort he carried me to the window and thrust me far over the sill. I could see down that awful height and I noticed that the people in the street were looking up. A policeman rushed toward the entrance, but I knew he could not help me, for no elevator could bring him up quick enough to save me from the death that stared me in the face. I could not speak, for the maniac held my throat in a grip of steel.

"'Die! die! die!' cried my assailant, and in an instant I was falling headlong toward the stone pavement a hundred and fifty feet below.

"It is wonderful how rapidly the human memory works on occasion, I remember that my whole life flashed before me. Little incidents of childhood came back as clearly as if they had not happened half a lifetime before. I wondered what my wife would say, and how I would look after I had struck the pavement. I speculated as to whom they would call upon to preach my funeral sermon and what they would say. I imagined what the papers would say, and what would be done with the man who had murdered me. All these things and a thousand more rushed through my mind, but above all and over all was an awful horror of the death I was about to die. I imagined the dreadful crash as I struck and the feelings I would experience as my bones and flesh would crash onto the stones below. It would take a lifetime to detail my thoughts and sensations during four seconds, for all of my life rose up before me. I could see I was nearing the pavement, and in an instant I struck it with dreadful force."

"'Wonderful! wonderful!' exclaimed the portly gentleman, "most wonderful! By what miracle were you saved from instant death?'

"I have thought," answered the reverend gentleman, gazing reflectively down the line toward the belated train, which came into view around a curve, "that my escape was due to the fact that I fell out of my chair and woke up."—Harry N. Carew, in Ohio Farmer.

The Size of the Earth.

To us who live upon it the earth seems to be a very large affair, and men have been found who would be content to own as little as a tenth of it. In comparison with some other bodies, however, it is small almost to the point of insignificance. Five hundred earths like our own placed side by side could be easily encircled by the outermost ring of Saturn; and if by any process we could hollow out the sun, it would require three hundred thousand globes like our own to fill the space thus created. In spite of all this, however, the world is large enough for our purposes, and, for all we know, more comfortable to live upon than any other planet in the universe.—Harper's Young People.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Death of Dr. Abbott.

Dr. Theophilus C. Abbott, ex-president of the state agricultural college, died at his home in Lansing after an illness of six years. For the last year he had been confined to his bed. The immediate cause of his death was pneumonia. He was a native of Maine and a graduate of Colby university. In 1863 he was elected president of the agricultural college and resigned in 1885 because of failing health. He was 70 years old.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy-two observers in different parts of the state for the week ended November 5 indicated that typho-malarial fever, whooping cough and typhoid fever increased, and cholera infantum, measles and inflammation of the bowels decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at forty-two places, scarlet fever at thirty-six, typhoid fever at fifty-five and measles at four places.

Both of Them Were Dead.

When Carrie Lathrop went to call her aged parents who live on a small farm near Bad Axe she found both of them dead in bed. First it was thought to be death from natural causes, but a search of the room revealed an empty bottle of laudanum which they had evidently taken on retiring at night. Both Mr. and Mrs. Lathrop were over 70 years of age and had become greatly despondent over family quarrels.

Eleven Jurors Illegal.

The opinion of the state supreme court in the case of William McRae and Michael Lally vs. the Grand Rapids, Lansing & Detroit Railway Company is of far-reaching importance, inasmuch as it holds the act of 1861, authorizing a trial by a jury of a less number than twelve in circuit courts and six in justice courts, which has been extensively followed in the state, to be unconstitutional.

Death of a Michigan Pioneer.

Alonzo N. Shelley, aged 83 years, died of old age in Detroit. He came to Detroit in 1831 and had since been prominently identified with the city's commerce, being one of the founders of Farr, Williams & Co., a wholesale drug house. His wealth is estimated at $1,000,000. Back in the '50s he erected the lighthouse on Thunder bay—the only one of the old lighthouses still standing.

Important to Farmers.

The director of the agricultural college experiment station has issued a circular giving a new method for the treatment of smut of oats and stinking smut of wheat. The damage smut has done to this year's crop in Michigan is estimated at $1,000,000. The method is simple and consists of dipping the seed into hot water.

Michigan Railway Earnings.

The earnings of Michigan railroads for July amounted to $9,819,495; for the same month in 1891, $8,425,542; an increase of $1,393,953. The total earnings from January 1 to August 1, 1892, were $58,595,842; for the same period in 1891, $51,033,069. The increase for 1892 is $7,502,773, or 14.98 per cent.

Clinton Column.

CLINTON, MICH., NOV. 17, 1899.

Miss Eva Shimman returned to Adrian Monday.

Applicants for the postoffice are numerous.

C. D. Keyes is employed in nursing Fred Barrett.

James Priest has the wall laid for his new house.

Henry Fox, of Tecumseh, was in town Saturday.

E. R. Smith attended the jollification at Jackson Monday.

Mrs. Levi Richmond has been quite sick for some time.

Mrs. Ella Leek visited friends in Adrian over Sunday.

Mrs. Orrin Safford, of Flint, is at her brother's, Dr. Tuttle's.

Mrs. W. C. Hopkins called on Clinton friends last Saturday.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Demuth has scarlet fever.

Mr. and Mrs. William Mather spent Wednesday with friends here.

George VanGieson has returned from the northern part of the State.

Miss Laura Montgomery, of Canada, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Roper.

The Baptist Church is being painted. George Williams is doing the work.

Frank Blatchford, who has been very sick with malarial fever, is able to be out.

Pollie June has been very sick for two weeks. She is slightly better at present.

Louise VanDeMark and Grace Stevens visited friends in Blissfield last Thursday.

Mrs. Smalley, of Manchester, visited her daughter, Miss Jennie Smalley, over Sunday.

Miss Celia Brewster, who has been with her sister in Ridgeway, returned last Saturday.

Installation of officers of Golden Rod Chapter takes place this evening at Masonic Hall.

One of Jeff Fisk's horses was seriously injured by being mired in an elderberry marsh last Sunday.

Albert Kishpaugh is in Adrian this week attending the meeting of the Board of Canvassers.

Quite a number of Masons from here attended the meeting of Tecumseh Chapter Tuesday evening.

The new bridge over the race is completed and is a very fine structure, entirely satisfactory in every respect.

A little child of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Mercer's, of Tecumseh, was buried here last Thursday afternoon. The funeral was held at the home of Mrs. Mercer's father, Shove Alvord.

The Sunday School that has been organized at the Lancaster school-house held a social at Orville Barnes' last Tuesday evening. None but members of the Sunday School were present and a very enjoyable time is reported.

Dr. Tuttle was called to Ann Arbor last Thursday to see Mrs. Nancy Caldwell, who had been taken sick while visiting a brother there. He found her seriously ill with inflammation of the lungs but with fair prospect of recovery.

Fred Barrett, an employe at the woolen mill, fell from the fourth story to the basement through the elevator shaft, a distance of about 50 feet, last Thursday afternoon. He was carried to his boarding place but was soon after moved to Mrs. Kate Sutfin's. Dr. White was called and upon examination found that no bones were broken, though he was terribly bruised and had several severe cuts about his face and head. He has lain in an unconscious state ever since, but the doctor has strong hopes of his recovery. It is not known exactly how the accident happened but it is supposed that in attempting to reach the elevator rope his foot slipped, causing the fall. He came from Ridgeway about three weeks ago to work in the mill and is only fourteen years of age.

ALBERT D. LAWRENCE, P. M.

The November North American.

The North American Review for November, besides being very strong as usual in timely articles by famous writers, presents from Mr. Blaine the fullest utterance that statesman has made on the issues involved in the forthcoming National contest between the parties. His article is entitled The Presidential Campaign of 1892, and is written with great vigor and characteristic purity of style. It offers many new points of view. The publication in The North American Review of this important paper is significant of the vigilance of the editor in providing the public with utterances of authority adapted to the moment. The Democratic Outlook describes the article contributed by the Hon. W. F. Harrity, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Mr. Harrity, with a marked degree of frankness, goes over the ground and urges many reasons for his belief that the control of the government will be transferred to the Democratic party by the November election. The Rev. Bishop Foss, of Philadelphia, in his article, Politics and the Pulpit, adds a contribution to the series of articles on this subject that have recently appeared in The Review, and he, like other writers in this series, urges the duty of the citizen to concern himself with important issues in politics. Prof. H. H. Boyesen, in The Scandinavian in the United States, gives an interesting account of the conditions of life among these new citizens points out their value to the country, a race easily assimilated, but holding close to their own native prejudices. Wanted, a New Party, is a plea from T. V. Powderly, who speaks with official authority, for a better appreciation of the rights of the laboring class.

St. Nicholas for Young Folks.

John G. Whittier long ago wrote of St. Nicholas, "It is little to say of this magazine that it is the best children's periodical in the world." Edward Eggleston, the author of "The Hoosier Schoolmaster," says of it, "There is not one of the numbers that does not stir the curiosity, inform the memory, stimulate thought, and enlarge the range of the imagination." Founded in 1873, and from the first number edited by Mary Mapes Dodge, St. Nicholas is now entering upon its twentieth year. The most famous writers have contributed to its pages in the past, but never has its editor been able to offer a better program of a more distinguished list of contributors than for 1893.

There is to be a series of illustrated papers on "The Leading Cities of the United States,"—the story of each city told by a prominent resident. Edmund Clarence Stedman will write of New York; Thomas W. Higginson, of Boston; New Orleans by George W. Cable, and Baltimore by President Gilman, of the Johns Hopkins University. Dr. Lyman Abbott will tell the story of Brookyn, and other cities will be treated by other famous men. There will be articles on the World's Fair, and a number of pages of funny pictures and humorous verses.

Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, the well-known author of "The Birds' Christmas Carol," etc., will contribute the leading serial for St. Nicholas during the coming year. The November opens with a three-page poem by John G. Whitter, which has some of the most beautiful lines the good Quaker poet has ever written, describing the visit of a party of young girls to his home.

The School Journal says, "Place St. Nicholas in your household, and you need have no fears for the lessons taught your children." The magazine is the greatest aid that the teacher and the conscientious parent can possibly have. It entertains, and at the same time educates and instructs. The subscription price is $3 a year. Remittances may be made directly to the publishers, The Century Co., 33 East 17th st. N. York.

It is not what its proprietors say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story of its merit. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures.

"Yes, Harry, I love you, but we can never wed," said the Boston maid with a sigh. "And why?" asked Harry. "You say eether for eyether," and she hid her face on his shoulder and wept.

I've used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in my family for a long while, and wouldn't be without it. I know its a good medicine. John Harrison, Postmaster, Guyton, Effingham Co., Ga.

She: I saw somebody this morning for whom you have great admiration. He: You did, eh? I guess you must have looked in the mirror.

The enormous sale of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has brought to the surface numerous imitations. Keep a sharp look-out when you buy.

Stiffness in the neck or joints may be instantly relieved by a few applications of Salvation Oil. It is cheap. Safe and reliable. 25 cents.

Mr. Staylate: Is your sister expecting me to-night? Tommy: I guess so. She's been sleeping all day.

"I don't want to go to school," sobbed Walter. "Don't you want to learn to read?" asked his nurse. "What will you do when you grow to be a man if you can't read?" "Oh," said the little fellow, "you can read to me just the same."

IN OLDEN TIMES

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action, but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Wm. McCarthy, 122 E. 8th St., Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "I used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in my family with good results." We recommend it to all heads of families as the best."

ESTATE OF ELIZA GRAY.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, on Tuesday the 23th day of October, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Eliza Gray, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Melia Ann Gray, a daughter of said deceased, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this Court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to petitioner and Alice Rynd, Mary E. Gray and Joseph E. Gray, the executrixes and executor in said instrument named, or to some other suitable person,

It is ordered, that Monday, the 28th day of November next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

Glen Smith, while riding a horse last Thursday morning, was thrown over the animals head by her stumbling with such force as to cut a deep gash in his chin and knock several teeth loose and split them up badly. Three stiches were taken in the gash, and at present he is able to be out again.

Our citizens were shocked Saturday morning by learning that Mr. Charles Hart was dead. He attended prayer-meeting Friday evening in his usual good health and passed away without hardly a moments warning, with heart disease. The funeral services were held at his late home on Monday afternoon, Elder Yager officiating.

EAST FRANKLIN.

Mrs. Platt of Clinton, visited at R. Taylor's last week.

Hollis Taylor commenced teaching in the Bradley Dist., last Monday.

School opened in Dist. No. 3, last Monday with Thos. Conlin as teacher.

Miss Blanche Dunn spent Sunday in this vicinity; she has gone to her home in Saline for a visit, before returning to Tecumseh.

Those who attended the Teachers Association last Saturday felt well repaid for going. Com. Fields and Prof. Kellogg presented some very interesting an instructive ideas on teaching. Steps were taken towards the organization of a teachers reading circle. There will be a meeting held at the school-house on Saturday evening Nov. 26. for the purpose of making further arrangements. We would be glad to see all of Franklin Teachers present. And last but not least, when it comes to a picnic dinner, the ladies of the Center School Dist., are not to be outdone.

Cleveland's Cabinet.

Politicians are already figuring on the personnel of President-elect Cleveland's Cabinet. Although Michigan did not give him her entire electoral vote, it is loudly whispered that a place will be given one of her most distinguished sons and that he will travel on one of the new 1,000-mile family tickets issued by the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan Ry. They are good for the purchaser and members of his family and are now on sale at all ticket offices of the Company. Price $20.00.

We understand that W. Lenardson of the firm of Lenardson & Sons will withdraw and the sign will hereafter probably read Lenardson Bros.

All persons indebted to us will please settle their accounts in full with cash or approved note by the 15th day of Dec., and oblige W. Lenardson & Son.

Conductor Wm. Austin, of the mixed passenger train on the C. J. & M., in making a coupling, about 10 o'clock p.m. Monday, caught his foot between the planking and the rail at the road crossing, throwing him under the train, horribly mangling his right leg and probably breaking his right arm. He was taken to the hotel where all was done that could be to make him comfortable. The Hospital Surgeon arrived by special train from Toledo at one o'clock; also, Mrs. Austin and friends. The surgeon decided that nothing could be done at that time and returned to Toledo. The sufferer, although probably fatally injured, betrays not his pain by groans and lamentations but bravely endures it all. He is a very exemplary young man and a general favorite with all who know him. This is another evidence of a necessity in improved couplings and we trust the time will come when the laws will require and enforce the improvement.

OBITUARY.

Died at Tecumseh Mich., on Thursday Nov. 3 1892, Mrs. Margaret wife of Thos. Boyd, in the 59th year of her age.

On the 23rd of Dec. 1833 Miss Margaret Calhoun was born at Londonderry Ireland. On the 22nd of Nov. 1855 she was united in marriage with Mr. Thomas Boyd. There remain besides the husband to mourn the loss of a beloved wife, five children, four daughters and a son, who feel themselves deeply bereft in the removal of a mother to whom they were, and had reason to be, devotedly attached, Mrs. Boyd was extensively and favorably known in the town of Tecumseh. She had quite a wide circle of relatives. It is not merely those however, by whom she is missed and mourned. In the neighborhood where she lived her loss is felt, as a neighbor and a friend. She had a kindly heart, disposed to sympathize with those in distress and ready to render aid to any that stood in need of it.

Hers was one of those quiet lives of whose good deeds the public does not hear, but of which the one who sees in secret takes account.

In the year 1869 Mrs. Boyd became connected by letter with the Presbyterian church of Tecumseh. During all the 23 years of her connection with it she has led a consistent christian life, attending its services as she was able and holding firmly to the faith which she professed. Her last sickness was a brief one, being only a week in duration. She bore with patience, her sufferings, and when the consolations of her faith were presented by her pastor. she responded to them gladly and earnestly, showing that she knew in whom she believed. The legacy of a christian life and a christian death is left by her to her family. None more precious could be theirs.

Sarah A. Reels was born in the town of Phelps, Melvin Hill, Ontario Co., N. Y. She lived in New York till she was sixteen years of age, when she moved to Michigan with her mother and two sisters. She was married to Horace Burgess June 25, 1856. Nov. 20, 1860, she moved with her husband to Macon. where she lived until her death. She was always unhealthy, but she was stricken down with the contagious disease three years ago, but was taken worse last January and died Nov. 18, 1892. She was a very patient sufferer. She was a devoted wife and mother. She leaves a husband and two daughters, Daisy E. Burgess and Florida N. Burdette; two sisters, Charlotte C. Rice, of Griswoldsville, Ga., and Elizabeth Peck, of Oakes Corners, N. Y., and a brother living in Salina, Kansas.

She was prepared to meet her fate and passed peacefully away. When asked about her dying she would say, "I am all right with Christ."

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our most sincere and heartfelt thanks to those who so kindly assisted us during our dear wife's and mother's long and lingering illness, and in our late and sad bereavement; also to those who furnished the beautiful floral offerings.

Farmers' Social Club.

Met at John Schreder's Nov. 15. There was a small attendance on account of the measles being in the homes of so many of the members. The program was not carried out. Quite a discussion on the life and character of Columbus was carried on by those present. The Club adjourned to meet at J. K. Waldron's Tuesday evening, Dec. 6, but on account of the lecture on the regular course for that evening it has been changed to Monday evening, Dec. 5. This being the annual meeting for the election of officers, etc., there will be no question for discussion but it is hoped there will be a full attendance of members and any who may desire to become members.

Open the Gates.

Chicago, Nov. 11.—At the regular meeting of the World's Fair directors this afternoon a resolution was passed favoring the opening of the world's fair gates on Sunday, provided that the machinery be not run. The directors declare that as all the nations of the earth have been invited to attend the fair it would be highly discourteous and inhospitable to inform them that they cannot do on Sunday what they would do were they at home. "The closing of the gates on Sunday," says the resolution, "means that thousands of artisans and mechanics, to whom the exhibition will be of inestimable advantage, will not be able to attend it." The directors say they are in favor of allowing every nation to hold within the grounds such religious service as it may desire on Sunday. They also think it desirable that the gates should be open to allow visitors from different portions of the union to meet socially at their state buildings.

"I don't want to go to school," sobbed Walter. "Don't you want to learn to read?" asked his nurse. "What will you do when you grow to be a man if you can't read?" "Oh," said the little fellow, "you can read to me just the same."

Wedding Bells.

A pretty home wedding took place on Tuesday evening, November 15, at the pleasant residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Blood. It was one of the most social events of the season, the contracting parties being an only daughter, Miss Mary Ina Blood, of Tecumseh, and Fred J. Howland, of Adrian. The graceful young lady is well and favorably known among our best society people and we congratulate the groom upon his choice of a life partner; also we are favorably impressed with her selection of one of Adrian's most popular young men. It is the custom for the bride to have her choice, but as Rev. Varner of the M. E. Church was in Virginia it was the groom's pleasure to choose his own pastor, Rev. W. K. Spencer, of the Presbyterian church of Adrian. The bridal party was received under a canopy of festooned white ribbon, banked by potted flowers, in the south-east corner of the pleasant parlor. The ceremony was most beautiful and impressive, uniting two hearts as one in the holy bonds of matrimony.

The bride was lovely in her gown of white, wavy crepon, tastefully trimmed with lace and ribbon, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid, Miss Bertha Smeltzer, was nearly as sweet in her attire of cream Henrietta. The groom and best man, Mr. John Nyland, were attired in the conventional black. The gifts were numerous and beautiful, testifying to the high esteem in which the young couple are held by their many friends. After congratulations had been tendered the Sabbath School class, of which the bride was a member assisted in serving the bountiful supper Among those present from abroad were Mrs. Jacob Tallman, Mt. Morris, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Worthington, Brooklyn: Mr. and Mrs. Langford Howland and daughter Edna, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Howland, Adrian; Mr. and Mrs. J. Howland, father and mother of the groom, West Adrian; Mrs. Loomis and daughter Jennie, Jackson; Mr. and Mrs. Warren Segar, Rome; Mrs. Nettie Taylor, Hudson.

The World's Columbian Exposition Illustrated.

For December will be especially interesting to all the citizens of this State. In addition to its usual amount of authentic general World's Fair information, it has a large and beautifully executed engraving of our State Building as it will appear when completed, This engraving alone is worth much more than the cost of the whole copy. It has many large photographs of the members of our State Board, with their complete biographies. This truly great and unexcelled magazine is published simultaneously in English, German, Spanish and French. Price 25 cents a copy. Subscription price, $3.00 for 12 copies. Published semi-monthly in October, 1892. Send $1.50 and receive all the magazines from July, 1892, to January, 1893, 10 in all, which cover one of the most interesting periods in the history of the Exposition. Address J. R. AMBITIOUS MARGARET.

THE great thing in this world is not so much where we stand as in what direction we are moving—but we must not drift, nor lie at anchor.

All the Mr. Machines and Miss Machines who are a necessary part of the daily grind of a busy city office were hard at work.

There was the pale, pleasant-faced bookkeeper, whose shoulders were stooped from daily bending over ledgers. Next to him sat the cashier, wiping his gold-rimmed glasses with a quick nervous motion before he ran over a bundle of checks with lightning rapidity and plucked out the one he sought.

The secretary's pen scratched away as he signed the mass of letters.

The group of "lady" stenographers, thick and thin, long and short, sat at their machines in one corner mechanically clicking out the hundreds of letters.

The clerks who did "billing" (not cooing) were working away.

Hugo, the office boy, whose legs were a daily example of the possibility of a perpetual motion machine, flew hither and yon, obeying the quick, sharp calls from every desk.

The red-haired, stalwart, Yorkshire man who was entry clerk and invariably replied when told to do this or that: "Yis sur, straight awch, sur," was "reading off" the orders to his "curate", as he wittily dubbed the younger entry clerk. Their voices sounded like a monotonous chant.

Moses, the colored janitor, sat at a long table looking as wise as an owl in his big brass-bowed spectacles, stamping the snowbank of letters on the table before him.

Into all this rush and hurry of money getting quietly walked a beautiful young girl, glancing nervously at the office clock as she took her seat at a desk five minutes late.

From his desk across the office the sharp-eyed general manager's glance followed hers to the clock. The red-haired Yorkshireman stole an admiring glance at the girl, then dropped his eyes bashfully and went on with his chant.

"SHE FLATTED THERE."

The girl bent her pretty head over her work as she tried to make up for lost time. Lost time was accurately counted by the general manager.

She did not seem to be a part of the office machinery. Surely there was little in common between her and the typical office machine, an expert at figuring, whose desk was next to hers. His one ambition in life had already been reached. He had climbed as high as an office stool, where he sat proudly, with dangling legs, bending contentedly over his papers covered with figures and lines, a red penholder for red ink above one ear and a black penholder for black ink above the other.

He spoke of "ouh office" and "ouh Mistah White" and "ouh Mistah Brown." He also knew how to turn a certain set ring around on his white hand so that the set would show to advantage.

The young girl next to him had noticed that he only talked figures. She sometimes wondered when he laid down his red penholder and black one with clock like regularity each day, when twelve was the figure at which the clock pointed, to go to lunch, if he did not eat these small crackers cut into ones, twos, threes and fours.

Her active imagination saw his stomach and head both lined with nothing but figures.

As the busy day wore on, into the rush and noise of business there came the sound of music from the Auditorium, across the way. Some one was practicing a vocal lesson. In an instant one pen in the office stopped traveling. The pretty face of the young girl next to the ambitious fellow on the stool was turned wistfully and dreamily toward the window. She rested the end of the penholder against her lips as she listened, absorbed, following the voice in its wanderings among the trills. "She flatted there." Unconsciously the girl spoke aloud.

"I beg pawdon, did you speak to me, Miss Quivey?"

"No, oh, no—I was just thinking aloud," replied the musical voice. Then she bent again to the work before her.

"Thinking!" Mr. Groovelet—the machine—looked at her in a puzzled, commiserating sort of way, as he carefully dipped his red penholder into the red ink and returned to his figuring.

At last the clock's long finger pointed downward to six and the short finger hurried along and posed between the V and VI. The scene changed. Down went the pens! The clicking of the typewriters ceased. Machinery and machines all stopped.

Quietly, Miss Quivey walked into the ladies' toilet room, where the group of stenographers were noisily talking "shop"—wondering who would get the next "raise" and if "his royal nibs" would give them a "vacashe."

Out and away from it all walked the young girl, humming as she hurried down the street to the doorway marked "Entrance to the Elevated." Up the stairs she ran, running a scale at the same time in a low, sweet undertone, each step a tone to her music-loving fancy. She was soon in the train. On, on, on whizzed the elevated, down alleys and past the back windows of houses of all sorts and conditions. On, on to where it was stiller and rents were cheaper.

At last our pretty little music-box left the elevated and, walking quickly down a street, was soon climbing more stairs in a "flat" building. Up, up she went, not humming now, but going softly down the hall and into a room at the end.

Margaret Quivey was Scotch-Irish-American. Born of a musical family on both sides, small wonder that her soul vibrated to all melody. Her mother had sung always, it seemed to Margaret, with the ease of a bird. The father had been an organist in their home town and a musical composer. He had recognized Margaret's gift and always called her his little music-box. He died without the means to show his precious little music-box how to use her gift.

After the father's death, Margaret and the mother turned their faces toward Chicago.

The mother gave piano lessons at the conservatory, but overwork caused nervous prostration, and it now became Margaret's duty to care for the mother. They struggled on together. One of the professors at the conservatory had heard Margaret sing and said: "Go to Costello, the tenor."

So Margaret went daily to the office to help her on her way to Costello. How she struggled! How much the lessons of all sorts cost her! A wealthy colored family lived some blocks away. Margaret gave their little boy singing lessons in the early mornings before she went to the office.

She practiced nights, her mother playing her accompaniments.

Lately an advertisement had appeared in one of the leading dailies. "Wanted: A position as soloist in a church choir; a soprano voice sweet and sympathetic."

Margaret's teacher told her she had climbed to the point where she was worth twenty-five dollars a Sunday, so he had written the advertisement for her. Day after day passed and no answer came.

The night on which Margaret had come back from the day's weary grind at the office, her mother held up a letter with a smile, saying: "Perhaps it is good news, daughter, for it looks like Ferdinand Costello's writing."

It was good news, for it said:

"Come to my rooms at your lunch hour to-morrow and sing for Rev. J. C. Gilbert and the musical committee of his church. If you suit them, the position of soloist in their choir will be yours. I remain, Yours respectfully,

"FERDINAND COSTELLO."

She went. The pastor was a music lover and music connoisseur. She sang. The last sweet sound died away, and there was a stillness in the room broken at last by the low-toned voices of the committee and the pastor.

It seemed an age to the ambitious little singer leaning against the piano before the minister took her hand in his and said:

"We feel that your voice will be a power for good among our people. We want you."

So Margaret took one step up.

There was a little ripple of excitement the next day at the office when Miss Quivey walked up to the general manager's desk and told him she was about to leave.

Mr. Groovelet looked after her wonderingly as she walked out of that most wonderful of places, "ouh office."

The years marched steadily on. Toiling, studious, climbing, struggling years to Margaret. It was up hill all the way to the singer.

Wider experience and a broader culture were now hers.

The mother in the invalid chair had journeyed by her side through these years of study abroad. Costello the tenor had advised and directed and never lost sight of her.

Then came dark days when the mother seemed to be slipping away before Margaret's dream was realized.

When those days were past, there came one never-to-be-forgotten time when through nervous strain and anxiety the little music-box suddenly became mute. She sat at the piano, with her head bowed in her hands, realizing how precious her gift was to her and how slight was her hold upon it.

This cloud passed away and people who heard Margaret sing in those days listened with tears in their eyes at the touching pathos of the singer's voice.

At last, after years of trial and struggle, years of careful training, the musical star was to sing in Chicago, the scene of early struggles.

Thanksgiving eve was the night. The Auditorium was a blaze of light and life.

Outside there was the long procession of carriages blocking Congress street and Michigan avenue. Inside there were the throngs of people, many beautiful women and beautiful toilets. "A brilliant audience," some one remarked.

Behind the scenes apart from the rest stood a group of three. The nervous, gray-haired man was Costello, the famous tenor. There was the pale-faced lady in the invalid's chair whose wonderful love had sustained the singer. Beside her stood the beautiful woman who was about to try to sing her way into the hearts of the people waiting.

Margaret stood holding her mother's hand in hers thinking of many things.

SHE FACED A SEA OF UPTURNED FACES.

Then, with one last pressure of her mother's hands, the singer glided forward and faced the sea of upturned faces.

From the first tremulous notes through all to the hush that fell upon the audience as they leaned forward forgetting that the singer had ceased, the mother, leaning forward in her chair with tightly clasped hands and lips apart, breathlessly followed each curve and bend of that dearly familiar voice, knowing that her child's purity of life, her trials and her joys had all helped to give her this power over her audience.

A wave of sound floated to them—that thrilling sound of the clapping of thousands of hands.

Away from it the singer turned toward the figure in the invalid chair.

As the audience slowly wound its way out, commenting upon and praising the singer, a narrow-chested man with a set ring on a slightly wrinkled right hand remarked to his companion as he lighted a cigarette on the pavement: "By Jove! that singer looked like a little girl who used to be in ouh office years ago. I'm suah ouh Mistah Brown would say so."

At last all was over. In the gray of the early morning the coach containing the singer and her mother rolled away from the Auditorium.

They were both silent, busy with their thoughts, for their return to Chicago had revived many memories of former struggles.

At last the mother said: "Daughter, do you know this is the commencement of Thanksgiving day? How much we both have for which to give thanks to-day and always, haven't we?"

As Margaret did not reply, her mother laid her hand on her arm and said, gently: "I know how thankful you are that your ambitious dream has come true, but the thought often comes to me, my child, are you happy?"

And Margaret answered, thoughtfully: "Yes, there is much for which I am truly thankful. The world says I can sing to them, and you have been spared to listen, to love the singer. If there are shadows in the picture, they are cast perhaps by the musical heights yet unclimbed.

"Is your music-box happy? I wonder if she is! With such a mother and a successful music-box in her throat she ought to be, gifted creature!

"And yet you know, mother mine: 'If none were sick and none were sad, what service could we render?' I think, and so should you, 'if we were always glad we scarcely could be tender.'"

Then they were silent.

In a few minutes Margaret began to laugh (and to hear Margaret laugh was a pleasant thing.) She said: "Now, mamma, you know you object to a musical husband. Well, I don't know but I do myself. Often they are not promising, I admit.

"A real musician with brains, one who thinks thoughts, who has 'a temperament,' is of this world, yet hears unheard melodies, etc., etc. Is that it? Do you imagine that's the sort of a son-in-law to make your daughter happy? Well, since so many good things have come our way let us be thankful for them. If you are longing for a musical son-in-law doubtless he will come singing along the road that leads to to-morrow or some day.

"Now, there's Bruno Oscar, the famous"—added Margaret, censingly.

But the rest, after the mother's protesting "Oh, Margaret!" was lost as the door closed behind them

Caused by
Catarrh in the Head

Catarrh is a CONSTITUTIONAL disease, and requires a CONSTITUTIONAL REMEDY like Hood's Sarsaparilla to cure it. Read:

"Three years ago, as a result of catarrh, I entirely lost my hearing and was deaf for more than a year. I tried various things to cure it, and had several physicians attempt it, but no improvement was apparent. I could distinguish no sound. I was intending putting myself under the care of a specialist when some one suggested that possibly Hood's Sarsaparilla would do me some good. I began taking it without the expectation of any lasting help. To my surprise and great joy I found when I had taken three bottles that my hearing was returning. I kept on till I had taken three more. It is now over a year and I can hear perfectly well. I am troubled but very little with the catarrh. I consider this a remarkable case, and cordially recommend

THANKSGIVING HYMN.

SPIRIT of love! Creator! Ruler! Friend!
From whom we come and unto whom we tend!
All humbly now,
Thy presence drawing near,
We sing thanksgiving for the fruitful year.

Thy gracious care in every good is seen!
Beneath Thine eyes the planets move serene,
Spring, summer, autumn, following in their round.
With rich abundance rural toil is crowned;
The seeds that fell along the hillside bare,
A thousand fold returned, demand our care;
With soothing cud the meadows yet supply
The browsing herd; the clover's ruffled tuft
Above the stalls—beneath contented feet
Sleek fattening steer and glossy-coated steed.
Devout of heart we here our thanks renew
To Thee who gave the sun, the rain and dew.

Thanks, too, for these! the anvil's hearty ring;
The merry lathes that labor as they sing;
The wheezing plane, the saw, the plumb, the rule,
And every useful, honor-bearing tool
That may on man one comfort more bestow—
I'll sing them still and aye my verse shall flow.

Now double blessings to the generous man
Who measures nature by the liberal plan!
Upright and honest; of forgiving mind,
E'er thoughtful of his less successful kind;
Prompt in his action; just in his decrees,
Pleased most to see a fellow being pleased;
No'er over proud because his ventures float;
Who judges not his fellow by the coat,
But cries: "Let's prove the heart that throbs beneath!
Damascus blade hath oft a ragged sheath,
While swords of lead in gorgeous scabbards shine;
The dearest metals from the deepest mine.
By honeyed accents greatest kingdoms fall;
The dross is nothing, but the man is all!
Go! Give thy thanks! not as the Pharisee,
But in thy closet on a humble knee."

What comfort should we bring to grieving hearts
Did we but act as we do know our parts;
How much regret ourselves, ourselves should spare
If what we win we might with temperance wear.
Proud, halting, weak! O God, of all above!
Still be Thy justice tempered by Thy love.

A WORD TO THE WISE.

Turkey—Say, young man, do you expect to celebrate Thanksgiving?

Young Man—No—o, I dess not!

Turkey—Well, all right; I wish to remark that a word to the wise is sufficient.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

The Cabinet Discusses the Forthcoming Document.

Some of the Recommendations Outlined—The Finances, Federal Elections, Cholera and Immigration Will Be Discussed.

HAS NO REGRETS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—The president's message was the chief topic of discussion at the cabinet meeting Friday afternoon. In the document the president will naturally make few recommendations for legislation, but his resume of the condition of public business will be such as to show that the administration, in giving up power, has no regrets.

THE FINANCES.

The president will make it clear that the legislation which the people seem to want should come from the party that will soon be in complete power. In discussing the financial conditions he will indirectly answer some of the partisan criticisms that are heard about the condition of the treasury, and is likely to point out wherein the expenditures of the government have grown, and to show what part of the burden of the increase is due, in his estimation, to the democratic legislation. He may recommend the suspension of further payment on public works until the public finances justify it. At the same time he will probably show how the expenditures are in excess of the revenues, because of the removal of the sugar tax, and leave it to the people to judge whether they want that tax removed.

FEDERAL ELECTIONS.

The president's views regarding the supervision of federal elections have not been changed. To show where his convictions are he will again recommend the creation of a non-partisan commission, and he is certain to deprecate the repeal of the laws now on the statute books.

THE CHOLERA.

The cholera epidemic will be discussed, and congress will be advised to legislate more specifically, possibly to the establishment of a national quarantine. While power was found for the executive department the desirability of having this power clearly defined points to a national quarantine as the safest way of avoiding conflict with local health officers and of making the quarantine effective for the whole country.

IMMIGRATION.

Immigration naturally grows out of the cholera discussion, and on this point the advisability of congress defining the position of this country will be shown. President Harrison will not recommend the total prohibition of immigration for ten years as some have advised him to do, but he will emphasize the necessity of further restriction than is now imposed.

FIFTY-THIRD CONGRESS.

Democrats Will Have a Majority of Ninety Over All.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—A complete list of representatives in congress elected last week, made up from the returns received by the democratic national committee, and compared with those received by the clerk of the house, agrees substantially with the estimates previously sent out. It shows that the democrats have elected 223 members, the republicans 125, and the populists seven, giving the democrats a majority of ninety. If the democrats carry the election for congressmen in Rhode Island they will have a majority of ninety-two over all opposition.

Threatened with Famine.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov 21. — Count Tolstoi, in the Russian Gazette, calls attention to the continued miserable condition of the peasantry of Russia. He says that famine again threatens the district in which he resides. The rye harvest is as bad as it was in 1891. Oats are an utter failure. There is a complete dearth of material for fires and the people are exhausted by last winter's miseries. The outlook, Count Tolstoi declares, is as black as possible.

Baseball in 1893.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—Baseball will not be played in divided championship series by the national league next year. The season will opeu the last Thursday in April and close the last Saturday in September. During this period each team will be scheduled to play 132 games. The league decided this important point late Thursday night and then adjourned to meet in New York on March 7.

Acquitted of Murder.

FAIRBURY, Ill., Nov. 19.—The jury in the Mote murder case, on trial in the circuit court of this county, returned a verdict declaring Mote not guilty. Mote in self-defense threw Miller, a tenant farmer, off a straw stack last August, breaking his neck.

Minister Killed by a Runaway.

MARION, Ill., Nov. 21.—Willis Cordor, a Baptist minister residing in this county, came to town Wednesday, and while on his way home his team of mules ran away, throwing him out of the wagon and breaking his leg. He died Saturday morning.

Eighteen Years in Prison.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 19.—A special to the Wisconsin from Fond du Lac, Wis., says Mrs. Cherney, of Kewaunee, who confessed the poisoning of her husband, was sentenced to eighteen years in state prison by Judge Gilson last evening.

Immigration Decreases.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The chief of the bureau of statistics reports that the number of immigrants arriving in the United States during the month ended October 31 was 16,428, against 54,182 during the same period last year.

Ex-Congressman Saylor Dead.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Ex-Congressman Milton Saylor, of Ohio, was found dead in his bed Friday morning in his room in a boarding house. Death is supposed to have been caused by heart disease.

THEY ARE PLEASED.

Prohibitionists Satisfied with the Showing Made at the Polls.

C. L. Stevens Says There Has Been a Large Increase in the Vote Over Former Years—Where the Gains Were Made—The Estimates.

MUCH ENCOURAGED.

CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—"Leaders of the prohibition party are very much encouraged over the results of the election just passed," said C. L. Stevens, editor of the Lever, the official organ of that party. He continued:

"We think the national vote will run to about 250,000, against 250,000 for 1892. In the western states, such as Kansas, Nebraska and Minnesota, where the people's party movement was very strong, we lost some from our vote of four years ago. On the other hand, in most of the states east of the Mississippi river [illegible] and California we made substantial gains. Nearly every state shows some increase over 1888. I believe that the official returns will show the increase in Illinois to be the greatest of any state. Indiana made good gains and also New York, including New York city, and most of the New England states."

VOTE BY STATES.

Mr. Stevens gives the following table as a conservative estimate of the prohibition vote by states:

	1888.	1892.
Alabama	583	600
Arkansas	614	1,500
California	5,761	15,000
Colorado	2,191	2,200

MR. STEVENS' VIEWS.

Mr. Stevens says "there is a great deal of talk about forming a new party during the next four years under the caption of the liberal party and embodying the leading issues as part of its platform. The prohibitionists have a splendid organization—the most complete of any except the two big parties—and we will not give up until there is a good prospect of something better to take its place."

First Coins Minted.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—The work of coining the Columbian half dollars began at the mint on Saturday. Over 2,000 of the souvenirs were struck, and the work will continue until all of the 5,000,000 donated by congress are completed. The first coin has been sold for $10,000. It was delivered to Joseph W. Ellsworth, representing the world's fair commission. In addition to this first one there were also coined and delivered to Mr. Ellsworth the 400th, 1,492d and 1,892d of the new half dollars.

Mrs. Lease for the Senate.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 19.—The opinion exists here that stranger things might happen than the election of Mrs. Mary E. Lease as United States senator from Kansas. Mrs. Lease's candidacy for the senate has become a serious reality. She is fixing wires for the place and her popularity with the rank and file of the party will give her at least an equal chance with other aspirants, especially as there seems to be no constitutional disqualification.

New Political Organization.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 21.—An organization styled "the Industrial Legion of the United States" was formed here Saturday by prominent leaders of the people's party, who are also prominent in the Farmers' Alliance, the object of which is to carry out politically the measures embodied in the declaration of principles of the Omaha platform of the people's party, together with free speech, a free ballot and a fair count.

Appointed by the President.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The president has made the following appointments: John H. Gear of Iowa, to be assistant secretary of the treasury in place of Lorenzo Crounse, resigned; William M. Stone of Iowa, to be commissioner of the general land office, vice Thomas H. Carter, resigned; George W. Miller to be collector of internal revenue for the Twenty-third district of Pennsylvania.

Caught in a Sand Bank.

ZANESVILLE, O., Nov. 21.—A sand bank at Taylorsville caved in and buried Richard Peach, Calvin Waxler, Louis Green, William Sheppard and William Irving. Sheppard and Irving escaped without a scratch, but Peach was killed instantly and Green and Waxler fatally injured. It required three hours to dig out Peach's body.

Jones Declared Elected.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 21.—Both houses of the Alabama legislature met in joint session Friday to count the vote for governor. Jones' official majority over Kolb was announced to be 11,435. There was no interference by the populists with the count.

Chinamen Found Guilty.

AUBURN, N. Y., Nov. 18.—Lee Fen and Lee Sin Fun, indicted under the Chinese exclusion act, have been tried in the United States court. Congressman Crowley appeared for the Celestials, who were found guilty.

Will Try Again.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—Lieut. Peary intends making another effort to reach the north pole. The National Academy of Science of Philadelphia is behind the present project.

Dr. O. J. Fay & Co.:

Gentlemen,—It is with pleasure that we reply to your letter asking about our success with Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption. Six months ago we gave our first order and since then we have sold eight times as much as our first order amounted to more than any other lung medicine we sell. Our customers after once using it want no other and they are always sure to recommend it to some other sufferer. It could not give better satisfaction and we have so much faith in what it will do that we are not afraid to recommend it to any person in need of a lung medicine. With many wishes for your success,

Yours truly,

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a Common Pimple to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you. It will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

D'ARCY'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by dealers in medicine.

Fifteenth Annual Convention of the Lenawee County W. C. T. U.

The fifteenth annual convention of the Lenawee County W. C. T. U. was held at the M. E. Church in Ridgeway Nov. 15, 16, and 17, 1892.

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

The Convention opened at 9 o'clock with devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. Anna E. Clark, of Adrian.

The President, Mrs. Louise Casey, of Hudson, being absent, Mrs. M. J. Briggs of Rome, President of the Rome Union, was called to the chair.

Reading of the minutes of the last County convention held at Adrian, November, 1891, by the Secretary, Miss Sarah Greene, of Addison.

Report of the Committee on Credentials.

It was voted and carried that the convention adopt the motto on the program, "Victory is ours if we work and wait," as the County Motto. It was voted that each union in the County send a banner with their delegates, with the name of their union upon it, so they may be more conveniently located in the conventions hereafter.

Report of Addison union by Miss Sarah Green, giving an excellent report of the work done by the union.

Report of Adrian union by Miss Belle Cassie, reporting a large amount of work being done.

The Blissfield report was given by Mrs. Mary Ford and the Britton report by Mrs. Flora Exelby.

On motion it was voted upon and carried that greetings be sent to the missionary convention then being held at Adrian.

Recitation by Master Paul Palmer of Rome, a bright little advocate of prohibition.

Report of Tecumseh union was given by Mrs. Anna Bryant Smith.

Mrs. Julia Stannard, of Dexter, district president, reported over five hundred dollars sent to the Temple fund from this district.

Mrs. Stannard presented the question of a district banner for the several districts. It was voted that each member pay five cents into the treasury for that purpose.

The president asked that all rise who were in the Crusade at the time it was sweeping over our land. Quite a number of ladies rise. Rev. Yager asked that he be included, as he was in the crusade and had been ever since. The convention applauded him for his remarks.

Mrs. Malvina Martin, of Geneva, gave a stirring address on Evangelistic and Sabbath observance.

Mrs. Lois Bartholomew, of Blissfield, gave Mrs. W. N. Goff's paper on Scientific Temperance Institution.

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

The session opened at 1:30 by Mrs. Mary E. Sutton, of Tecumseh, conducting the memorial services.

Mrs. Julia Stannard spoke some very impressive words in memory of Mrs. Norman Geddes, of Adrian, and of her devotion to the temperance cause.

Mrs. Elizabeth Comstock was a noted worker, as well as in every other good work. In her death the union sustains a great loss.

Mrs. Esther Coryell, of Ridgeway, who passed away at a ripe age during the past year, was an earnest worker in the union at Ridgeway and a sincere advocate of temperance.

Mrs. Helen Pease, of Hudson, gave the report of their union.

Mrs. Persis Hatch gave the report of the Macon union.

Mrs. Bailey gave the report of the Raisin Valley union.

Mrs Mildred Hathaway gave the report of the Addison union, referring to Grandma Brown, 82 years of age.

A very interesting paper on Narcotics was read by Mrs. Annie E. Clark, of Adrian.

Recitation—Master Paul Palmer of Rome.

Mrs. Lois Bartholomew, of Blissfield, gave a report of juvenile work.

Mrs. Julia Stannard of Dexter gave an excellent talk on juvenile work and its importance.

The exercises opened at 7 o'clock with an organ voluntary by Miss Kittie Clark and singing by the Convention.

The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Susan Carpenter, of Blissfield, followed by an anthem by the Ridgeway choir.

Address of Welcome—Mrs. Libbie Atwell of Ridgeway.

Response—Mrs. Melvina A. Martin.

Violin solo—Emma Bailey, Macon.

Gold Medal Contest.

While the committee were out making their decision on the contest little Silva Pilbeam, of Ridgeway, gave a recitation, "The goblins will get you if you don't watch out." She is only six years of age but captivates her hearers whenever she recites. She was called back and gave another selection, "The Unfinished Baby," after which it was moved and carried by the convention that she be admitted as a member of the W. C. T. U. and was presented with a white ribbon and introduced by the President as the youngest white ribboner in the State.

The committee, after being out and carefully weighing the points of the contestants, rendered a verdict in favor of Miss Minnie Payne of Adrian.

All taking part in the contest did finely and recited good selections. The convention closed by singing the temperance doxology, and benediction by Rev. Yager.

THURSDAY MORNING.

The Convention was called to order by the President, Mrs. Louise Casey.

Report of Ridgeway union by Mrs. Addie Kelly, giving an excellent report.

Report of Rome union by Mrs. M. J. Biggs.

Six silver medal contests have been given during the year.

Miss Sarah Green gave the report of the minutes of the previous day's doings.

Report of the Rollin Y's given by Miss Green.

Report of Hudson Y's, given by Mrs. Susan Cone.

A report for the Industrial Home was given.

Mrs. M. Martin presented the advisability of increasing the County dues from five to ten cents.

Mrs. Myrtie Palmer, of Rome, secretary of delegates, reported forty-six voting delegates present.

Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter, of Blissfield, gave an excellent paper on social purity,

Mrs. Julia Van Etta, of Hudson, Superintendent of Franchise, made a few remarks, and reported $26.45 remaining on hand.

Mrs. Myrtie Palmer read a paper entitled, "Why do we work?" a most comprehensive and excellent production.

Mrs. Stannard asked that Rev. Yager be introduced to the Convention and in response presented in a few remarks some stirring thoughts.

The Convention took up a collection to purchase presents for the little boy and girl who gave recitations during the evening exercises and delegated Elder Yager to make the purchase.

The election of officers resulted in the following:

President—Mrs. Louise Casey, Hudson.

Cor. Secretary—Mrs. Susan Cone, of Hudson.

Rec. Secretary—Miss Sarah Green, Addison.

Treasurer—Mrs. Myrtie Palmer, of Rome.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Convention called to order by Mrs. Julia Stannard. Reading of the minutes by Miss Sarah Green.

Mrs. Julia VanEtta read a very able and interesting paper on Franchise.

Rev. Gulick of Macon gave a short address, followed by Mrs. Stannard, giving a description of her trip to Denver, Colorado.

THURSDAY EVENING.

The exercises opened with an organ voluntary by Miss Leila Sutton, Ridgeway, and devotional exercises conducted by Mrs. Ella Yager.

Quartette—Miss Dora Grayson, Ella Hall, D. W. Smith and J. D. Arner.

Reading of the resolutions as drafted and adopted by the Convention, by Mrs. Elizabeth Carpenter,

The President then introduced Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop, of Jackson, State President of the W. C. T. U., who delivered a very eloquent, interesting and telling address, defining the duty of the voter.

Vocal solo—Miss Fannie Schureman, of Rome.

Master Paul Palmer, of Rome, and little Silva Pilbeam, of Ridgeway, were called to the platform, each giving a selection, after which Mrs. Lathrop, in behalf of the convention, presented each with a silver cup, a gift from the ladies and friends of the convention. To little Silva was given a gold locket for her recitations and part taken in the Wednesday evening entertainment.

Violin solo—Emma Bailey, Macon.

The convention closed with singing, "God be with you till we meet again," and the benediction by Mrs. Lathrop.

The attendance was very large throughout, a deep interest taken and a grand work done. J. D. A.

STATE OF MICHIGAN County of Lenawee, ss.

At a session of the Probate Court for the county of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office in the city of Adrian, on Tuesday, the 15th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate

In the matter of the estate of Lodema Sherman, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition of Mary Mathews, administrator, with the will annexed, upon the estate of said deceased, alleging that the funeral expenses and debts of said deceased and the expenses of administration thus far incurred have been fully paid, and that she is now ready to close said estate and to render her final administration account, and praying that said account may be allowed, and that the residue of said estate may be assigned and distributed to the parties entitled thereto, and that she may be discharged and her bond canceled and for such other order and decree as to this Court shall seem proper.

It is Ordered, That Monday, the 12th day of December next at 9 o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

Dr. Julia P. Green, of Adrian, has de arrangements to be at the Lilley use every Wednesday from 10 a. m., p. m, for consultation and treatment chronic diseases of women and ildren. Also especial attention given diseases of the nose, throat and gs.

"Uncle Billy Nixon," who has been feeble health for several months had shock of paralysis a few days ago lingered in an unconscious state until last Sunday when he passed peacefully away. The funeral services were ld at the house of Chas. Aten, his son-law, Tuesday afternoon.

About fifteen people from here attended the district convention of the W. C. U. held at Ridgeway last Wednesday d Thursday. There was a large number present and a most enjoyable and thusiastic meeting was held. Especially interesting were the two evening ssions, the first being a gold medal ntest and the second evening an address by Mrs. Mary T. Lathrop of Jackson.

Rev. Gorton will preach next Sunday ening on the following subject: "Hell modern thought. Has it any existence in the Bible? Can it and will it eliminated from all rational religion? it a christian doctrine or is it purely athen in its origin? Has modern eology, by the reflex influence of odern civilization, been compelled to tinguish the literal fires and greatly reduce the temperature of hell? Does y enlightened, free and progressive nd any longer believe in the existce of such a place?"

Ole Olson next Thursday evening.

Jud DePuy, of Detroit, was in town a portion of last week.

Mrs. Frank Merrill is visiting friends in Detroit and Port Huron.

County Clerk Waterman found a recount very serviceable in his case.

Waterman, Wiggins and Wood, the three Democratic double-yous, all got there.

Don't forget the Ole Olson Company at the opera house on Thursday evening of next week.

Rev. Frank Arnold occupied the Baptist pulpit last Sunday both morning and evening.

Mrs. J. H. Osborn, and daughter Carrie, have gone to Saginaw to attend a family reunion.

Miss Nellie Conklin came up from Toledo yesterday to spend Thanksgiving at home.

Probate Judge Robbins has been compelled to pass sentence on five insane persons in the county within the past two weeks.

The measles have struck the Tecumseh postoffice. Only one clerk is fit for duty and Miss Loana Stacy is rendering her assistance this week.

The new time table went into effect on the Lake Shore road Sunday, without a jar in the efficient service there rendered. There are no changes to speak of in the passenger trains.

Miss Mary Anderson went to Ann Arbor Monday to attend the Thomas Orchestra Concert on that evening. She prolonged her stay a couple of days, returning yesterday.

A Thanksgiving Musicale will be given at Mr. Albert Anderson's this evening. It will be a family gathering of the Anderson family, and will doubtless prove an enjoyable occasion.

Mrs. Will H. Smith, of Saline, is in town this week taking care of her sister, Mrs. G. W. Mead and child, who have been very sick with the measles. They are now on the gain.

Mac G. Fritz has opened his bazaar stock in the store west of Adamson Bros' and will offer great bargains until the 1st of January. For particulars examine his card on the eighth page.

The large barn belonging to the Thos. Logan farm, in Summerfield township, about two miles southeast of Deerfield village, was struck by lightning and burned with contents. Wednesday night. Bert Logan had about twenty tons of hay in the barn.

Geo. O. Schreder has the agency for "Kem-Kom." This is a new chemical compound, which combined with coal saves 25 per cent of the fuel. It prevents coal gas, reduces ashes and makes a very clean fire. It is sold in both large and small packages of convenient size. Call and see him and try a package.

Several young ladies of our village made arrangements to give the young gentlemen a farewell leap year social at the Armory to-night. Many of the girls are down with the measles and their partners are trying to catch the whooping-cough. Just enough remain convalescent to carry out the original design—not one to spare.

We call attention to Wm. Bresie's new card in another column. He has purchased the stock of furniture at J. S. Kinney's old stand and proposes to make business boom during the holidays. Mr. Tansley will answer calls for undertaking and Frank Page will repair furniture in the latest style. The business will continue as usual.

Dr. C. M. Woodward has sent in his resignation as Surgeon General of the Michigan State Troops. He has been connected with the medical department of the state service for over thirteen consecutive years and he thinks he should now step aside for other aspirants. The Doctor has proven himself to be a very efficient officer and we are afraid that the state will be the loser by his decision.

A complete list of representatives in congress, elected at the last election, has been made up from the returns received by the Democratic national committee, and compared with those received by the clerk of the house. It shows that the Democrats have elected 222 members, the Republicans 125, and the Populists 7, giving the Democrats a majority of 90. If the Democrats carry the election for congressmen in Rhode Island, they will have a majority of 92 over all opposition.

"Fifty years ago to-day, said Mr. Abel Whitney to a friend on the street this morning, "was preceded by a beautiful day, similar to that of the day before yesterday, when the weather changed suddenly, and with a high wind, rain and sleet, it froze up, and the eaves on the south side of the buildings did not run again for 90 days." Mr. W. S. Wilcox replied, "I remember it, for we had news that the transport Chicago had been lost on Lake Erie with our goods, and I went to Monroe that day; then to Detroit by stage, making inquiry along the shore about the lost steamer. I came back to Monroe, purchased 200 barrels of salt, and sold them for $7 a barrel."—The Times of Friday.

Do you eat Thanksgiving turkey today?

Remember the Ole Olson troupe at the opera house on Thursday evening Dec. 1st.

Chas. Burridge went to Benzie Co., last week on a business trip, returning on Monday.

Lamont C. Bidwell is in town this week and will enjoy his Thanksgiving turkey at the old homestead.

An immense amount of Thanksgiving poultry has been shipped from this station during the past week.

Mr. W. J. Ide and wife went to Detroit yesterday to spend Thanksgiving and a week or so with their sons Lavern and Edgar.

The ladies of St. Peters' Guild will hold a fair and sale of fancy articles at Armory Hall on Wednesday of next week, Nov. 30th.

The Ole Olson troupe seldom visits towns of the size of Tecumseh, and our citizens should repay them for the compliment by giving them a full house.

Judge Andrew Howell and wife, of Detroit, are spending the present week with Edwin Howell of Macon and Dr. George Howell of this village.

The Clinton Democrats will jollify to-morrow evening. There will be a torchlight procession, fire works, speaking by Congressman Gorman and others.

Misses Anna Bailey, Mary Burridge and Ida Rector, who are attending the University at Ann Arbor, came home yesterday to spend the Thanksgiving recess.

Attorney General A. A. Ellis, who was endorsed by the People's party, has been re-elected as now conceded by the Republicans. He is the only Demoorat on the state ticket who pulls through.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet at the home of Mrs. Dr. Jones on Friday of this week at 2 o'clock sharp, to sew for several poor families. A picnic supper will be served at 5 p. m.

Rev. David Lewis, Pastor of Friends Church Tecumseh, will fill his own pulpit next Sabbath, and if sickness in his family permits, he will, with others to help, begin a series of revival meetings Sabbath evening.

The supreme court has affirmed the decision in this court in case in which Mrs. Finn received a verdict of $3,000 against the city on account of a defective walk, and the city will now be compelled to pay that sum.—Adrian Messenger.

The injury sustained by Conductor Austin of the Mackinaw road at Britton Monday night, the particulars of which appear in our Britton letter, has since terminated fatally. He died yesterday at the hotel in Britton. It was a very sad affair.

The Democrats of Manchester had a blow-out Tuesday evening. Col. Davidson of Tecumseh gave one of his characteristic addresses, attired in grandfather's hat and an old umbrella, and the boys said it was the best speech of the evening. There was a fine display of fireworks and a big crowd.

Avery & Co. have put in their store a mammoth zinc-lined refrigerator, which will be used for keeping oysters, butter and other goods requiring cold storage. They receive a supply of oysters several times each week and the refrigerator keeps them always in splendid condition.

There will be a called meeting of Macon Grange on Tuesday, Nov. 29th, at 7;30 p. m. A full attendance of members is requested. Mrs. Perry Mayo, of Battle Creek is coming into our county and wishes to visit every Grange in the county, and it will be necessary for our Grange to take action if they wish to have her visit us.

M, J. MARTIN, W. M.

Ira Waterman has been declared county clerk by a vote of 16 to 7 of the county board of canvassers. In the third ward E. L. Mills gained one vote, while in Palmyra Waterman gained one making the figures stand as before the recount began, four plurality in favor of Mills. In Woodstock a discrepancy of thirteen votes in favor of Waterman was discovered which placed him nine ahead in the race.

The Democrats had a blow-out last Friday evening and the unterrified were out in full force. The boys whooped-er up at a lively rate. There was a splendid display of fire works at seven p. m., which reminded one of an old fashioned Fourth of July celebration At eight o'clock the crowd assembled in the opera house which was soon filled to overflowing. Addresses were made by Congressman Gorman, L. H. Salsbury of Adrian, Col. Fenn of Clinton. The Blissfield Glee Club was present and sang some of their latest and best campaign songs. Every time they appeared they received a rousing encore, and their selections all brought down the house. Taken altogether the meeting was a very successful and enthusiastic one.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Kolkloesch last Friday, a 9 pound boy. Let us smoke a beauty.

The Raisin Valley celery company, capital $10,000, has filed articles of incorporation at Lansing.

Mr. G. H. Tansley, whom Mr. Wm. Bresie retains in his employ at J. S. Kinney's old stand, will continue to have charge of the undertaking department. Mr. Tansley has had eighteen years experience in this branch, having graduated at the leading schools in this state and Pennsylvania. For the past eight years he has had charge of the undertaking department of Kinney's store and the manner in which he has conducted this branch has won for him a wide reputation.

A complaint of George Kuder, of Macon, alleging that he was afraid of his neighbor, Frank Odell, and asking that the latter be required to keep the peace, was tried before Justice Wightman on Tuesday. After hearing the testimony of George and his son the prosecuting attorney came to the conclusion that the complaint was groundless and that there was nothing in Macon that a man of George's size ought to be afraid of, and asked the Court to dismiss the case.

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC
BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do you know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough. The Surprising Promptness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements, and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods wherever introduced, conclusively prove that true modesty is always recognized and the quality of merit takes care of itself. Metaphorically our statement is the Button—the Public Press it, and

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC SPECIALTIES
"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements that so much comfort for $1.00 (the price) is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Electric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt) and credit $3 on the price of new order. Remember the Electric Foot warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

'TIS time to be thankful again, and, by Jiminy, it don't seem more than sixty days since last Thanksgiving day. For thus it is that the seasons are a continual merry-go-round for those of us whose hearts are pure and consciences are clear.

It's always in the fall that we are thankful, you notice, but 'twas different with Adam and Eve. The fall didn't bring them much to be thankful for, but with the most of us what a host of mercies rise up to comfort us every time we would become discouraged and discontented. The very fact that we saw that orange peel yesterday in time to save us from falling and breaking a leg ought to make us truly thankful, and if we did tumble and our leg is busted we ought to be thankful that it isn't fractured in two places.

I never get to feeling kind of down on my luck and envious and mad because my lot in life isn't a more exalted one but what I'm sure to go out and almost run over a poor cripple working his way along the street on his knees, or see a pair of sightless eyes that used to lighten up the face of one of the brightest business men in town, or hear the doleful strains of the hand organ played by the deaf and dumb man on the corner, and then I want to kick myself all of the way home, and I can't be thankful enough; and on the way I meet a millionaire who has the dyspepsia so bad that if he should eat the Thanksgiving dinner I'm going to tackle to-morrow he would be dead and embalmed before Tuesday next. This is the trouble with the most of us; we always feel that we could be so tickled to be thankful for something else than what we've got. Isn't that the way you feel? Now, honest, own up.

Last Thanksgiving eve, under the auspices of the S. F. P. I. P. C. A. H. of the West Rock Hollow church and in conjunction with an oyster supper, I gave my unjustly celebrated entertainment. As I overheard a man remark in a sarcastic vein to another man afterward, "there was entertainment for man and beast." Now whether that man disliked oysters or funny lectures I shall never know. After I had done my duty by the Society for the Purpose of Introducing Paper Collars Among the Hottentots, and the admission money had been refunded to the usual number, we all went down into the church parlors to the oyster supper. Here we found those who had gone out with saddened faces during the lecture cheered up and happy again. After we had all finished playing "Oyster, Oyster, Who's Got the Oyster," and the facetious man had remarked:

"Oh, when you brought my oyster stew,
Why didn't you bring some oysters too,"

I went home with good old Deacon Swipely to sleep in the spare bed "that hasn't been slept in since the church was candidating two years ago, and that young minister that everybody liked so much died of congestion of the lungs before he could be engaged."

While the deacon was trying to get a coal out of the stove to light my candle with he said: "Mr. Hood, you ought to be very thankful for every mercy."

It's kind of mean to jump on a man in a round-about way like that, but I said that I thought so too, in fact I never got through with a lecture alive and eggless but what I felt that way.

He smiled in the pained sort of style I have often noticed among people who come in on "D. H." tickets, and went on: "The thankfulest man I ever knowed was deaf and blind, had club feet and a withered arm, and was poorer than poverty."

"Well, for goodness' sake, what was he thankful for?" I asked.

"Well, it's funny," said the deacon; "but that man was jest 's thankful 's he could be, 'cause he didn't like roast turkey. You see he couldn't 've had none, anyway, an' he thought 'twas the grandest blessin' he c'd have showered on him that he despised that kind o' meat."

And I took my candle and went up to bed; but I've thought a good many times since of that poor man when it has occurred to me that my mercies were not keeping quite up to the demand, and have been content. This autumn we all ought to be thankful. Those of us who elected our man ought to be thankful for that, and those of us who didn't ought to be thankful that we weren't beaten any worse than we were.

Therefore, let us eat, drink and be grateful. CHARLES NEWTON HOOD.

Profitable for Him.

"Have we any special reason to give thanks?" asked Mrs. Boneset, as her husband packed his surgical case on Thanksgiving day.

"We have," replied the doctor, putting in an extra roll of plaster; "we should be thankful for the invention of football."—Puck.

ONCE a year the prudent business man takes invoice of his possessions. Once a year he foots up his profits, subtracts from them his losses, and strikes a balance of net increase.

Then there are details. He has gained so much on this investment. He has lost so much on that. Some things have been handled simply because it was an accommodation to his customer. Some things he carried because he was compelled to by the demand. Not one in twenty of the people who came to his store knew what the curious things were for. Others did not care. Some things he carried simply because it was a gratification to him to see them in stock. In the general casting up of accounts for the year, all these considerations find place. As the merchant grows older in years and in business his possessions increase. With every successive annual invoice he finds about him accessory details which add to or detract from his business profit. It takes good judgment and a strong will to prune away the delightful losses, and encourage the distasteful profits.

We are all in business. We may not "buy and sell and get gain," but our lives are our stores, none the less. Our patrons are the people we meet. The profit we make from the intercourse may be summed up in the one word—pleasure. That is the capital of this fanciful trade. Memory is the informal day book, checked and posted, which we look over from time to time, and which shows us past transactions. Here was a greeting. There was a compliment. Further on was a generous service. Scattered through it was the record of good advice, valued information, nameless and numberless benefits conferred. Something from each of these is profit.

Then there are the services we have rendered to others. And it is one of the blessed things of this more golden year that our chiefest profits are derived from our expenditures. We have grown richest on that for which we paid the most in benefits conferred. The millionaire is the generous man. The totally impoverished is he who never does a benefit for his fellows.

The wise man's annual day of reckoning comes in the end of November. Maybe he is a farmer who has watched the corn from sharp, green blades that cut the soil to autumn's haze, when "Ragged husks reveal the golden grain."

Maybe he is an artisan, who has armed in summer against the wolf of winter. Maybe he is a patriot, who sees his country richer for the overflow of twelve months' blessings. Whoever he be, Thanksgiving day brings him a time for reflecting. It is not in dollars alone, not in columns of figures, not in the heaped products of the mill or the mine, that we measure the richest riches. It is the gain each heart has won, the wealth each soul has garnered as the months ran by.

Here in the twilight of a blessed year let us gather together about the tables which bear our plainer blessings, and cast up the record of the twelvemonth's trade. How much of wisdom we have gained; how much of happiness, how much of charity! How well we have learned the blessedness of giving; the priceless privilege of pardon, the unspeakable pleasure of a fragrant memory.

Having these, it matters little how went the trivial fortunes of the year. Having these, finding a balance on the credit side, our board is rich indeed, though it bear but bread and water. Having these—the choicer blessings of the year—let us make thanksgiving for a summer ended, and pray to "Him who counts life's sands,

And holds our loved ones in His hands," to send us forward cheerfully into that undiscovered country of the future.

LEROY ARMSTRONG.

The Editor's Thanksgiving.

For his Thanksgiving dinner he had such goodly cheer,
It offset all the labor and starvation of a year:
One load of wood from Farmer Brown, potatoes from his patches,
And from his grocery man a ham and one big box of matches.

He baked the sweet potatoes, he boiled the goodly ham
And served it in connection with a stavin' pot of jam:
He locked the door and spread the feast, and ate till eventide,
Then shouted "Praise the Lord!" and then—well satisfied, he died!

Mrs. Tomdik—We ought to be happy on this Thanksgiving day. I'm sure we have much to be thankful for.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a certain mortgage, bearing date April 18th, 1891, executed by Charles H. Aten to Fred J. Landgraf, whereby the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative. Said mortgage was, on the 28th day of April, 1891, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Lenawee County and State of Michigan, in Liber 121 of Mortgages, on page 562. There is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date hereof the sum of five hundred and fifty-four and thirty-three hundredths Dollars ($554.33) and no proceedings have been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof, either at law or in equity.

Notice is therefore hereby given that the premises described in said mortgage, by virtue of the said power of sale and of the statute in such case made and provided, will, on the 30th day of January, 1893, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, at the East front door of the Court House in the City of Adrian. In said County (said Court House being the place where the Circuit Court for said County is held) to satisfy the sum due as aforesaid and the interest thereon accrued and then to become due, together with an attorney fee of $20 in said mortgage provided, and all other legal costs of foreclosure. Said premises are described in said mortgage as follows: All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, in the County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point in the East line of Pearl street, continued northward from Hewitt's addition to said village, said point being four rods south of the southwest corner of a parcel of land formerly owned by Wm Spath; thence running easterly parallel with and four rods distant from the south line of said Spath lot eight rods; thence south parallel with Pearl street two and one-half rods; thence West parallel with and two and one-half rods distant from the first course eight rods to Pearl street; thence north on the East line of Pearl street to the place of beginning excepting therefrom all that part thereof heretofore sold and conveyed by said Landgraf to Samuel W. Temple by deed dated November 30th, 1883; and recorded in Liber 137 of Deeds, on page 236, in the office of the Register of Deeds for said county; also excepting all that part of said above described premises covered by the Temple Brick Planing Mill.

Dated Oct. 31, 1892.

ROMANCE OF A JAIL.

Love Affair and Engagement of a Burglar and a Female Prisoner.

The sentence in Detroit of Adam Restrich to five years in Jackson prison for burglary has revealed a romance in connection with his imprisonment at the county jail. Through the medium of a clothesline post office he made the acquaintance of a female prisoner named Bertha Fliske. The two used to spend the day writing letters to each other. This little drama continued for some time. Finally the two became engaged. Just before his trial he told her that he was certain to be acquitted, that he would manage to make her free and take her away and marry her. The next day he was convicted and sentenced to Jackson prison for [illegible]

BRUTALLY MURDERED.

A 75-Year-Old Pensioner Beaten to Death with a Club.

The village of Grand Ledge, Eaton county, has a murder mystery. When the family of David Butcher returned from a three days' absence they found the body of William Landman, who boarded with them, on the bed in his room. He had been bound and gagged and his head crushed with a club. The murdered man was 75 years old and a pensioner. It is supposed that the murderers thought he had a sum of money and killed him to secure possession of it. In this they were mistaken, as Landman had recently disposed of his possessions.

Sunday Schools in Michigan.

The State Sunday School convention was held at Bay City with 1,500 delegates present. The secretary's report showed a membership in the state of 302,492; officers and teachers, 45,800; Sunday schools, 3,825; 11,564 children baptized during the year; Catholic population of Michigan, 270,375; priests, 282; parochial schools, 120. The treasurer's report showed receipts, $2,314.13; disbursements, $1,665.76. Officers were elected as follows: President, A. H. Swartout, Saginaw; recording secretary, A. H. Cross, Lyons; treasurer, W. L. C. Reid, Jackson.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy-seven observers in different parts of the state for the week ended November 12 indicated that inflammation of the brain and cholera infantum increased, and typho-malarial fever, whooping cough, typhoid fever and diarrhea decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at thirty-six places, scarlet fever at thirty-eight, typhoid fever at forty-four and measles at four places.

Married a Millionaire.

Edward Nicholas Breitung, son of the late Congressman Breitung, and Miss Charlotte Gravenaet Kaufman, daughter of Mr. Samuel Kaufman, were married in Marquette. The groom is just past 21 and is a several-times millionaire. Among the numerous gifts were a diamond necklace and brooch from the groom to the bride valued at $30,000.

Bay City Industries.

The census bureau has issued a bulletin giving statistics of manufactures of Bay City. Following are percentages of increase: Number of establishments reported, 247.50; capital invested, 111.72; number of hands employed, 89.77; wages paid, 128.96; cost of materials used, 24.83; value of product of works, 53.80.

ENDED IN DEFEAT.

The Great Strike at Homestead, Pa., Is Officially Declared Off.

HOMESTEAD, Pa., Nov. 21.—The great strike at Carnegie's Homestead steel works has been declared off. After a five months' struggle, which for bitterness has probably never been equaled in this country, the army of strikers finally decided on Sunday to give up the fight. The action was taken at a meeting of the lodges of the Amalgamated association at Homestead Sunday afternoon, the vote standing 101 in favor of declaring the strike off and 91 against it.

The Homestead strike has proved one of the most disastrous in the history of the country. It originated from a reduction in wages in the departments where members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steelworkers were employed. The hitch was on what is known as the sliding scale. [illegible] regulates the men's wages by the market price of steel billets. Nearly every mill in this vicinity signed the scale, including the mills of the Carnegie company. At the refusal of the firm to sign the scale for the Homestead mill a lockout occurred by the Amalgamated association and they were joined by the mechanics, who struck out of sympathy only, their wages not being reduced. The strikers were determined to keep non-union men out of the mill and adopted military discipline.

The story of the arrival and bloody fight with the Pinkertons on July 6, the subsequent riotous proceeding and the calling out of the national guard and its departure after three months' duty, is too well known to repeat. For six weeks the mill has been running, but until within the last week the strikers have steadfastly refused to admit defeat.

The strike at one time involved nearly 10,000 men and the loss in wages will reach, it is said, in the neighborhood of $2,000,000. Then there is the immense loss to the firm which cannot be estimated, but which conservative people put at least at double the amount lost by the men in wages. To this can be added nearly $500,000 paid to the state troops and the costs to the county of Allegheny for the riot, treason and other cases growing out of the strike.

At least thirty-five deaths were directly or indirectly caused by the strike. Besides those killed in the battle of July 6 many soldiers contracted fever which resulted fatally, one soldier was shot accidentally by a comrade, another was killed by the cars, one striker committed suicide, one drowned, one was killed by the cars, several non-union men died from fever and several were killed in the mill, and one was murdered by another non-unionist.

The attempted assassination of Chairman Frick of the Carnegie company is also indirectly credited to the strike.

ELECTION RETURNS.

Result of the Recent Political Contest in Several States.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 18.—The official election returns show that the republicans elected twenty-one of the twenty-two presidential electors in this state.

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 18.—The official returns have been received by the secretary of state from all the the counties, and the work of verifying and compiling them is now being done. The returns show the plurality for the democratic presidential electors to be 14,885, and Judge Wert's plurality over Kean (rep.) for governor, 3,709.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 19.—The secretary of state has received official returns for presidential electors, members of congress and members of the general assembly from all counties with the exception of Cook. The vote for electors outside of Cook county is as follows: Republican, 288,034; democratic, 281,677; prohibition, 29,968; people's party, 20,593. The democrats will have outside of Cook county sixty-two members of the house of representatives in the legislature and the republicans sixty-one. The figures showing the vote for state officers cannot be made up for several days.

THE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

Populists Gain Control of the National Organization.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 19.—After spending all of Thursday night in a bitter fight between the democratic and populist factions the National Farmers' Alliance repudiated the former Friday morning. McCune, leader of the democratic wing, who was the only candidate for the presidency against Loucks, withdrew from the contest and the alliance simultaneously. He bitterly denounced the Loucks following and claimed that there was nothing left for the non-partisan element to do but leave or consent to be the tail of the third-party kite. The following officers were elected: H. D. Loucks, North Dakota, president; Marion Butler, North Carolina, vice president; Ben Terrell, Texas, national lecturer; Editor Taylor of the Nashville Toiler, secretary, and the following exective board: L. Leonard, Missouri; Mann Page, Virginia; I. E. Dean, New York; H. C. Deming, Pennsylvania.

A LITTLE GIRL'S EXPERIENCE IN A LIGHTHOUSE.

Mr. and Mrs. Loren Trescott are keepers of the Gov. lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful cough and turning into a fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones." Then she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and half bottles was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold, yet you may get a trial bottle free at J. J. Orr's drug store.

GOOD FOR NOTHING ELSE.

Parmelee's Pile Suppositories are good for nothing but Piles. They are prepared especially for that complaint and are not adapted to any other. But they are confidently guaranteed to cure Piles. Try them. Sold by druggists for 50 cents a box or sent by mail on receipt of price. Parmelee Medical Co. Dansville, N. Y.

A FLAG ON EVERY SCHOOL HOUSE

And a bottle of Parmelee's Sarsaparilla in every household and the country could be called comparatively happy and safe. Parmelee's Sarsaparilla is the great blood purifier and will cure any of the ailments which come from impure blood, sluggish circulation, inactive liver, or impaired secretions. It is a vegetable compound of perfect purity and great strength, and its effects in the system "all run down" from any of the above causes is really remarkable. Only 50 cents a bottle at your druggist's.

THE BOSS HORSE LINIMENT.

SEBRING, TIOGA CO., Pa. June 29, '92.

John Messner, a prominent farmer of this place, has cured a bad spavin and also a sweeney on the same horse with two bottles of Parmelee's Universal Liniment. Jacob Rawscher and James Bailey have also cured spavins on their horses with it. It is the boss horse liniment. HENRY DYCKER.

Sold by dealers. 25 and 50 cents a bottle.

"IT HEALS ALL WOUNDS BUT THOSE OF LOVE."

Parmelee's Household Ointment. The best ointment made. 25 cents.

THE PLAIN TRUTH

is good enough for Hood's Sarsaparilla, there is no need of embellishment or sensationalism. Simply what Hood's Sarsaparilla does, that tells the story of its merit. If you have never realized its benefits a single bottle will convince you it is a good medicine.

Do not suppose that because it is recommended for animals that Arnica & Oil Liniment is an offensive preparation. It will not stain clothing or the fairest skin.

CHRONIC CONSTIPATION CURED

Also Sick headache, Biliousness, Malaria, Indigestion, etc., by using Parmelee's Mandrake and Dandelion Bitters. 25 cents a bottle. Try it. Sold by dealers.

The highest degree of success has been attained by Pearline. It gives the highest degree of satisfaction—it has reached the highest degree of efficiency. It washes with little work and without wear. It cleans with perfect safety and without trouble. Whatever Pearline does, it does well—you will do well to see what it does.

Send it Back

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, do the honest thing send it back. 225 JAMES PYLE, New York.

IN OLDEN TIMES

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action, but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Wm. McCarthy, 122 E. 8th St., Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "I used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in my family with good results." We recommend it to all heads of families as the best."

Mr. Staylate: Is your sister expecting me to-night? Tommy: I guess so. She's been sleeping all day.

Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain, is universally accepted by horsemen and veterinarians as the ne plus ultra of liniments.

She: I saw somebody this morning for whom you have great admiration. He: You did, eh? I guess you must have looked in the mirror.

The enormous sale of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has brought to the surface numerous imitations. Keep a sharp look-out when you buy.

Stiffness in the neck or joints may be instantly relieved by a few applications of Salvation Oil. It is cheap. Safe and reliable. 25 cents.

ESTATE OF ELIZA GRAY.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, on Tuesday the 25th day of October, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Eliza Gray, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified of Melia Ann Gray, a daughter of said deceased, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this Court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and that administration of said estate may be granted to petitioner and Alice Ryal, Mary E. Gray and Joseph E. Gray, the executrixes and executor in said instrument named, or to some other suitable person.

It is ordered, that Monday, the 28th day of November next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

RICHARD B. ROBBINS, Judge of Probate.

Neighborhood News.

RIDGEWAY RAMBLES.

Ed Freer and wife, of Mason, are visiting relatives here.

Cutters and bells made their first appearance last Monday.

Lou Arner has the measles, being the latest victim in our village.

Will Bidwell, of Ypsilanti, was in the village Tuesday evening.

I. D. Loree, of Belleville, spent his Thanksgiving vacation with his parents.

Richard Cadmus, of Harvey, is visiting relatives and friends here at present.

Fred Gorton, of the Normal, visited Jennie Osgood from Friday until Monday.

Will McCrimmon, of Albion College, was the guest of Clara Temple Saturday and Sunday.

Mrs. Rose Stimpson, of Milan, called on friends in the village Tuesday and Wednesday.

Nettie Barrett, of Harvey, was called home to attend the funeral of her brother Friday.

The meetings are still in progress with a good attendance and increasing interest manifested.

Miss Carrie Holloway, of West Rome, visited her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. S. Holm, over the Sabbath.

H. J. Williams, of Adrian, with his men, did the slating on the creamery last week Thursday.

Pram Squires and family of Dansville, visited his brother and family last week several days.

John Van Vleet and wife were called to St. Johns last week Friday to attend the funeral of his sister, Mrs. Nathan Ellis.

Geo. Cone, of Hudson, who was called to Dundee to attend the funeral of his aunt, Mrs. Dudley Munger, Saturday, called on relatives and friends here Sunday and Monday on his way home.

Little Gracie Smith, who has been under the doctor's care for several weeks, has failed very rapidly during the past week, and Monday morning her little spirit took its flight to be forever with Jesus. The funeral services are held at the church this forenoon. Kind neighbors and friends sympathize with the bereaved family in their sad hour.

Freddie Barrett, who fell down the elevator shaft at the woolen mill in Clinton on the 10th inst., died Wednesday evening of last week. A postmortem examination was held and it was found that the skull was cracked on the under side nearly three inches in length, and the brain injured in several places. The funeral was held at the home of his parents on Friday afternoon, Rev. E. Yager officiating. The bereaved family have the sympathy of their friends in their sad affliction.

Uncle Benjamin Beevers, who has been in feeble health for some time past, died Sunday morning at the good old age of 84 years. The funeral services were held at his home in Raisin on Wednesday afternoon, Elder Yager officiating. Benjamin Beevers was born at Beevers Bridge, Cowick, England, November 23d, 1808. He was united in marriage to Elizabeth Lee in 1844 and came to America the same year, settling on the farm in Raisin where he lived at the time of his death. He and his wife were among the early settlers of Raisin and raised a large family of two boys and eight girls, all of whom are living except the eldest daughter, Mary, who died upwards of twenty years ago. He was converted in 1869 under Elder Ira Dean, then pastor of the M. E. Church at Ridgeway. He was a kind husband and loving father, ever ready to lend assistance to neighbors and friends in the hour of need.

CARD OF THANKS.

We desire to tender our heartfelt thanks to the Clinton and Ridgeway friends for their kindness during the sickness and death of our son and brother; also to the members of his Sabbath School class for their beautiful floral piece.

MR. AND MRS. WM. BARRETT AND FAMILY.

It is earnestly desired by the officers and official board of the Hall Library Association that a full attendance of all the members be had at the annual meeting next Tuesday, Dec. 6th. All who have not paid their annual dues will confer a favor upon the society by doing so before that date, as our report should show all dues paid.

SALOME CLARK, Sec'y.

Cleveland's Cabinet.

Politicians are already figuring on the personnel of President-elect Cleveland's Cabinet. Although Michigan did not give him her entire electoral vote, it is loudly whispered that a place will be given one of her most distinguished sons and that he will travel on one of the new 1,000-mile family tickets issued by the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan Ry. They are good for the purchaser and members of his family and are now on sale at all ticket offices of the Company. Price $20.00.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

Buy a pair of Kersey pants of Lenardson Bros.—only $2.00.

Miss Martha Ackley made a business trip to Ypsilanti Monday.

The drug store has received a new fall coat of paint. Quite slick, Will.

R. H. Hicks, of Toledo, called on friends here and at Ridgeway Sunday.

O. B. Lenardson, wife and son, visited his brother Charles at Blissfield last Sunday.

Miss Hattie Vreeland, of St. John's, is visiting relatives and friends here for a few days.

Mrs. Fred Rupp at present writing, Tuesday morning, is very low, but still hopes of her recovery.

Let all those interested, and teachers especially, attend the institute here next Saturday, Dec. 3rd.

Prof. Hugo Campbell entertained our citizens a few evenings with interesting lectures on phrenology.

E. W. Lenardson and wife ate duck with Mrs. L.'s sister, Mrs. J. B. Coller, at Macon Thanksgiving.

W. C. Babcock has moved into the Chas. Pocklington residence, formerly owned by E. E. Hendershot.

Jno. Exelby has for the seventh time returned to Detroit, where he will landlord it again in a boarding house.

Miss Alta Suydam will give private lessons in oil painting Saturday afternoons, at the home of C. B. Tripp.

Lenardson Bros. are receiving their spring stock of wall paper, which will be larger than any year heretofore.

The failure of O. P. Bills & Co. will affect some depositors here; one, we understand, in the sum of about $400.

Chauncey Dibble, Jr., who for the past few weeks has been sick with typhoid fever, was in town last Tuesday.

Samuel Kniffin and family passed Thanksgiving with O. L. Vreeland and family, returning home Tuesday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Parry, of Clio, visited the past week at C. R. Exelby's, leaving for Lenawee Junction Thursday.

There will be a conundrum supper at G. A. R. Hall Wednesday evening, Dec. 7th, for the benefit of the Women's Relief Corps.

A. J. Lee was home from Battle Creek for a ten days' lay-off, returning to his work Wednesday as lineman for the C. J. & M. between Manhattan Junction and Allegan.

All persons indebted to the firm of W. Lenardson & Sons will please remember to settle their accounts by the 18th, either with cash or note.

W. LENARDSON & SONS.

Ed Bauchman has secured a position at $60 per month and all expenses paid, as overseer in the erection of creameries, of which one is situated at Holloway and another at Ridgeway.

Many of our farmers went to Tecumseh with wheat the past week, but in consequence of the Bills failure were unable to find a sale for it, so brought it home to await further developments.

Wm. Winsley, Art Underwood, Sam'l Steele and Mrs. Tracy Ulrick, of Holloway, were the lucky ones in the lamp drawing at Lenardson's last Friday night. Watch this column for announcements of further inducements to trade with this firm.

Some days ago the young son of A. Brunk, in lifting his little brother while playing, fell with him to the floor, breaking the little fellow's leg below the knee. He is improving as rapidly as can be expected and will be about in a few days.

Attend fellowship meeting at the Christian Church Saturday afternoon and learn what Rev. Strickland has to say in regard to moving the church. This is a matter that should interest all and which if entered into with zeal and backed with pluck and the good will of all can be accomplished with satisfactory results.

"Where are my rabbits?" inquired the small boy. "Vern's dog, I think, hooked them," remarked a bystander with chin whiskers, but nevertheless we do know that Rover was most foully slandered, and, furthermore, that some of our most respected citizens ate rabbit. They were not of the sporting fraternity, either, and handier by far with a shillaly.

MOTHER'S FRIEND is the greatest blessing ever offered child-bearing women. I have been a midwife many years, and in each case where Mother's Friend has been used, it has accomplished wonders and relieved much suffering. It is the best remedy for rising of the breast known, and worth the price for that alone. Mrs. M. Brewster, Montgomery, Ala.

THE S. W. FARMERS' CLUB.

The November meeting was held at the residence of W. E. Pease, one-half mile west of Iron Creek church, on Friday, the 11th inst.

Mr. and Mrs. Pease own, it will be readily conceded, one of the most [illegible] and pleasant homes in Manchester.

The fair exhibit was the chief attraction of the day and corn, potatoes and vegetables were there in abundance, but, excepting the large quinces exhibited by J. G. English and some winter pears brought by B. F. Matteson, fruit was noticeably absent from the collection.

Mr. Matteson's exhibit was both choice and extensive. We noticed the boxes of beautiful honey and the parsnips particularly.

J. R. Holmes brought potatoes and smooth, large turnips.

J. G. English, potatoes and corn of the Strawberry dent variety and White Flint corn.

Richard Green's Strawberry dent corn was splendid but his beauty of Hebron, Late Rose and St. Patrick's potatoes deserve especial mention.

H. R. Palmer brought Strawberry dent corn, oats, barley, two varieties of wheat and Japanese buckwheat.

B. G. English, Yellow dent and eight-rowed red blaze corn and Burbank seedling potatoes.

L. S. Hulbert, red carrots, corn and potatoes, all excellent varieties.

Mrs. Hulbert exhibited beautiful samples of her canned fruit, pears and peaches.

Mrs. F. M. Palmer, a worsted crazy quilt. Mrs. H. R. Palmer brought a pair of crocheted slippers and knitted mittens.

Mrs. E. G. Green, a beautiful needle-book and Mrs. J. R. Holmes a woolen bedspread made by her mother in 1824.

Miss Nettie English brought a specimen of her work, a set of crocheted table mats.

After a bountiful dinner was served to guests whose appetites were keen after a long ride over the country, the meeting was called to order by the President, B. G. English, with a few appropriate remarks in which, however, we were disappointed, for we expected that one with his well-known political views would scarcely refrain from exultation at the election of his favorite candidate, Grover Cleveland.

Mrs. J. F. Spafard read the report of the October meeting and miscellaneous business followed.

Committees were appointed to draft resolutions of respect upon the death of two of our active members, Mrs. Carrie P. Wallace and Miss Maud Lapham.

Mrs. G. M. Sutton read an article on the Columbian Exposition written for the Michigan Farmer "Household" by "Beatrix."

Miss Lucy English read an essay in her most happy but characteristic manner.

Mrs. L. S. Hulbert repeated, by request, a poem recited at the June meeting.

Edwin Green read a paper on "Sheep-husbandry." It embodied excellent advice to all who care for sheep, as regards feed, water, etc. The paper elicited comments and remarks from nearly every gentleman present.

The cost of keeping sheep was thought to vary from $1.00 to $1.25 per head. H. R. Palmer, of Bridgewater, who buys and feeds extensively, said 75 cents would keep a sheep, but many dissented from his opinion.

Space forbids further report but all present pronounced it a fine meeting and reluctantly departed for home.

Michigan's Mineral Wealth.

Hon. Peter White, of Marquette, who is personally in charge of getting up the Michigan exhibit of minerals for the World's Fair, told the following to a Tribune reporter:

"Our display will be one of the most wonderful and wealthy collection of minerals ever exhibited. It will many times exceed in every detail the mineral exhibit of Michigan at the Centennial in 1876, and we need have no fear of being outdone by any other state or nation. We have secured 1,500 feet of space in a most desirable location. We will be directly across the aisle from Great Britain and diagonally across from exhibits of Germany and France. The copper exhibits will be very fine. Hon. Jay Hubbell, of Houghton, has done much toward getting it together. We will have large masses of pure copper, some weighing as high as five tons. We will also have in full operation miniature stamping and smelting works, showing the actual processes of getting the mineral ready for the use of the manufacturer. A splendid exhibit of the native gold and silver bearing rocks of Lake Superior will also be made. The iron ore display will not be attempted on such a large scale as that of copper, but we will have every variety of the Lake Superior ores, together with all associate country rocks. Other features of the display will be a miniature ore dock, showing the process of handling the millions of tons of ore at the shipping ports, and cabinet displays of the beautiful, and quartz specimens bearing virgin copper, gold and silver. There will also be an elaborate collection of photographs of the great machinery used at the different mines, and sectional diagrams illustrating the geological structure of the great Calumet & Hecla, and other large mines.

"The coal and salt exhibit will be located in the gallery, where we have secured 600 square feet of space, and it is to be very complete."

Captain of Police, Phillip J. Barber, of Baltimore, Md., says: "Salvation oil has been used at our station the past winter for rheumatism, neuralgia, pain in the back, etc., and I have yet to meet with its equal. It is the best."

Our baby was sick and we bought one bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and were well pleased with it. It did the baby a great deal of good. Wm. Thompson, McKeesport Pa.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Mrs. Eliza Wisner and daughter Myrtle, are visiting at Ed Wisners'.

Measles, on the pupils, prevented Irene Allen from opening her school in the old brick, Monday.

George Maine, aged 75 years, was buried last Sunday, the cause of death, inflamation of the lungs.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvinza Whelan ate their Thanksgiving dinners in Detroit with their son John, and family.

Remember the lyceum at G. Allen's Saturday night, there is sure to be a good debate on that good old money question.

Mrs. Edward Wisner received a letter stating that Jehiel Wisner and family intended to start for Louisiana last Wednesday; they expect to reside there permanently.

The December Cosmopolitan.

In view of the fact that Sir Edwin Arnold will very likely be the next poet-laureate, one turns with interest to his most entertaining article in the December Cosmopolitan on a "Japanese Watering Place." The same number contains seven portraits of Tennyson and interesting views of his late home and surroundings. A feature of the number is twenty-four portraits of Parisian journalists, with sketches of their work. The Cosmopolitan will mark its first edition of 150,000 copies—that for January—by the offer of 1,000 free scholarships. In return for introducing the Cosmopolitan into certain neighborhoods the Cosmopolitan offers to any young man or woman free tuition at Yale, Vassar, Harvard, or any of the leading colleges, schools of art, music, medicine or science. They send out a pamphlet on application telling how to obtain one of these free scholarships.

AIRSHIPS AND PROTECTION.

How They Will Affect Commerce, Wages, Prices and Trusts—Protectionists Should Clip the Wings of Flying Machines.

The Iron Age of September 1, says: "Pennington's air ship factory in Chicago is just completed and the aluminum car, which weighs 235 pound, the inventor says, will start for New York in three or four weeks."

Think what this means! If his ship can successfully navigate the air we may next year see hundreds of these man-made birds darting from city to city, and from continent to continent carrying passengers and valuable freight. How fine they will look and how they will aid commerce by reducing the time between points now connected only by circuitous railroads, rivers or ocean routes. But, horrors! What will become of McKinley, of protection, of the workingman and of the farmer, and last but not least, of the [illegible] tariff trusts?

According to the protectionist idea we already have too much commerce. As one of them puts it, we would be better off if the ocean were walls of fire. Hence every true believer in McKinleyism curses all improved means of communication and all inventions that foster commerce and cheapen the prices of commodities. But the McKinleyite sees even greater danger from this new machine. He sees it puncturing more holes in the McKinley tariff bill than a full democratic congress would make. Of what use will be custom houses when airships can cross our borders by day or night at ten thousand different points and can anchor in a million different places? What unrivaled opportunities would be provided for smuggling! The vigilance of ten thousand customs officers could not prevent smuggling by wholesale; and the competition in smuggling in large quantities of pauper made goods would soon lower the price of hundreds of articles. Woolen goods, plate and window glass, tin plate, pearl buttons and dozens of other articles that now sell here for double the prices in Europe or Canada, would soon come down almost to a common level. And what terrible effects it would have upon farmers and laborers. It would probably reduce their expenses $50 per family and they would all—free traders and protectionists alike—be foolish enough to buy all they could of these cheap goods. They would even work the harder to produce all they could to exchange and get their fill of goods for once. Increased production would make a demand for more labor and this would raise wages. Higher wages would mean increased consumption and the wheels of industry would just hum, not only on this but on the other side of the ocean. It is unchristian-like to think that our European neighbors would prosper with us, but then it couldn't well be helped while goods could be exchanged through the air so that each nation would get the benefits of the natural and artificial advantages in productions of all nations. This could not lower the prices of farm products, for our farmers have the best opportunity to produce in the world and now compete with all other nations. It could not lower wages, for it would remove no barriers that obstruct the passage of labor from one country to another—because there are none to remove. It would in fact raise wages by increasing the amount of goods that could be purchased with a certain sum. But the poor trusts, how they would suffer, and perhaps die, under such competition. The pocket cutlery trust, which has raised prices fully 30 per cent. since 1890, would have to reduce prices at least 40 per cent. because cutlery costs only about half as much in Europe as here. The cartridge trust; which has advanced prices here 99 per cent. and sells 30 per cent. cheaper in Canada, would have to have a levelling down of prices. Hundreds of other trusts now making millions out of the tariff, only thousands of which have to be spent to sustain protection, would have to be content with ordinary profits or yield up the ghost entirely.

Such are some of the afflictions that will follow the introduction of flying machines. If protectionists understand the situation they will bribe Mr. Pennington to stop work on the air ship, which will do them a thousand times more harm than Peck's report on wages will do them good.

REPUBLICAN TENDENCIES.

It is Toward Plutocracy, Aristocracy and Paternalism.

The ultimate logical result of the policy of the republican party is a centralization of power destructive of the fundamental idea of our government. This is the meaning of its tariff policy as well as its force bill policy. It means that the rich and those who are ambitious of power shall be favored at the expense of the rest of the people and by means of their subjection. The objection to the republican tariff is not more on account of the unnecessary tribute it wrests from the poor to increase the profits of the rich, than on account of its tendency to cultivate a class of selfish plutocrats who think the government is established and should be conducted primarily to exalt and enrich them. They, in fact, and not McKinley, dictated the present tariff. The republican party has become the tool of its campaign contributors.

There is not within the limits of the states a more selfish or sordid class or one more indifferent to the true welfare of the people or the future of free institutions. What they primarily seek is the quick establishment of their private fortunes. Upon the basis of such wealth they expect to secure for themselves and their families a place in the aristocracy of money and fashion.

The imposition of burdens upon the mass of the people for the profit of a class is in its motive and its direct influence subversive of the principles of liberty. The republican party is guilty of this treachery to patriotism. What is worse, it defends its guilt by a false and delusive pretext of serving the people. Wage-workers are betrayed into assisting the accomplishment of the plot of scheming sharpers. The profession that the protective tariff is designed in their interest is as absurd as the profession that the prime motive of slave-holders was the good of the slave.

The first steps of the advocates of a protective tariff, if they were sincere in their professions, would not be the imposition of a tax but the prevention of the competition of imported cheap labor. But this is a measure they will not consider. It has no place in their programme. Their whole effort is directed to securing two results—the cheapest labor and the highest prices for labor's product. This is the royal road to wealth and power for them and they are for the party which will help build it. What the ultimate effect will be as regards liberty and the conditions of a democratic state they do not care—at least they proceed as if they do not care.

This government was not intended by its founders to be a paternal government in which the poor shall be the wards of the rich, and whose chief concern must be to increase the wealth of the few so that they may [illegible] to those who by such means are wronged.

The scheme of American liberty and prosperity is best promoted by removing burdens from all in order that all may better take care of themselves. This is the democratic purpose. This is the motive and aim of Grover Cleveland's statesmanship.—N. Y. World.

WHO PAYS THE TARIFF?

Republicans Say "The Tariff is a Tax, But the Foreigner Pays It."

If this is true, when the tariff upon an imported article happens to be over 100 per cent., the foreigner not only gives us the article for nothing, but pays us to take it.

The McKinley bill provides in section 25, and elsewhere, that when a manufacturer uses imported material upon which there are duties, and exports finished goods made from said imported materials, he can go to the treasury of the United States and get back 99 per cent. of the duties which had been collected on the things entering into the construction of the goods which he has sent out of the country. If the foreigner pays the tariff, why is the manufacturer allowed to secure that money? A law which enables our manufacturers to sell to foreigners cheaper than to our own citizens is a piece of iniquity which we should oppose.

Again, when the tariff upon sugar was lowered, did not the price of sugar immediately fall? When the duty upon tin plate was increased, did not the cost of tin plates advance? Do not such facts as these demonstrate by the plainest truths imaginable, that the foreigner does not pay our tariff? Republicans, however, declare that the foreigner does pay our tariff; but they give the whole thing away when they assert, as they often do, "that the removal of the tariff upon sugar effects a saving of $60,000,000 annually to the inhabitants of the United States."

Victoria, a provience of Australia, has recently imposed a tariff of fifteen cents a can upon our fruit. In this case we are the producer. From a Victorian standpoint we are the foreigners. Now, suppose the proprietor of one of our canning establishments receives a letter from Victoria, and another from England, asking for his prices, would he quote prices fifteen cents a can less to the Australian than to the Englishman? Certainly not. The wholesale price of much of the canned fruit in this country is less than fifteen cents a can to all comers.

The republican party claims to be the party of God, the party of high-toned and irreproachable morality. Let us look, from a religious stand point, at the subject of who pays our tariff.

One of God's commands is, "Thou shalt not covet anything that is thy neighbor's." When a party favors a scheme, which, as they think, compels foreigners to furnish the money to support our institutions, and pay our debts and taxes for us, are we not justified in concluding that they are guilty of the sin of coveting and are at heart a party of thieves? For it is the very essence of theft to have the desire and intention of securing the fruits of other people's toil without rendering an eqivalent.

A. E. Brown.

An Old Humbug.

A newly impregnated protectionist has discovered that startling old fact that steel rails once sold for $155 per ton (sic) and that they are now "hanging around $30" a ton, having been taxed down to that price. They were once down to "$21 or $22," but the taxes being taken off they naturally flew up to $30.

This fresh young mind has not yet learned all the facts about steel rails. The discovery of the Bessemer process had some effect in reducing the price of rails. The Gilchrist-Thomas process had more. It enables four men, for instance, to do the work that required ten men ten years ago.

In 1873 steel rails sold in this country for $95.90. In 1895 they sold for $26. Since then a trust has been formed and rails have gone up to $30, although the price of Bessemer ore has gone down $3 a ton.

In 1873 English steel rails cost $74. In 1895 they cost $23.17. In 1892 they cost $19.44, although the ore in England has advanced $1.46 a ton.

The moral of this, as our beginner in protection economies will learn in time, is that while the inventive genius of man was reducing the cost of steel rails, thereby cheapening the cost of transporting agricultural and other products, the protective tariff stepped in and enabled a trust to put a stop to the happy state of things, which, however, continued to go on in England.—N. Y. World.

Muddled Logic.

Four years ago Mr. Harrison had only contempt for "cheapness." Now he argues that the law passed to increase prices has really lowered them. The paradoxes of protection never had a more daring adapter than the president. According to him the same law has increased prices to the farmer and made food cheaper to the consumer; has lowered the cost of manufactures by taxing their raw materials; has enabled the producer to pay higher wages by reducing the price of his product.—N. Y. World.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

A Sleep Walker Meets Death.

Steven Haven, a wealthy farmer near Fowlerville, was found lying dead in front of his barn with his neck broken. He had left his room in his sleep, gone to the stable and fallen out of an upper story door. His career as a sleep walker has been remarkable. Two years ago he was found at the bottom of a deep well. Two months later he was found wading up to his neck in Silver lake. About a year ago he fired his house while asleep and only a few months ago while asleep he tried to hang himself in his room.

Betrayed by Money.

It is believed that the man who murdered William Lampman at Grand Ledge has been arrested in the person of Joseph Butcher, a brother of the man living [illegible] Butcher is a common laborer with a large family. When arrested he had $215 secreted in his clothing. The murdered man had about $300 in his possession at the time of his death. Butcher could give no account of how he came into possession of the money.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy-six observers in different parts of the state for the week ended November 19 indicated that measles and dysentery increased, inflammation of the bowels, cholera morbus, and puerperal fever decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at forty places, scarlet fever at thirty-seven, typhoid fever at forty-one and measles at eight places.

Saw a Murder Near Charlevoix.

Robert Tremoth, a trustworthy farmer at Charlevoix, says he saw a murder committed five miles south of there. He witnessed a fight between two strangers, and saw one stab and kick his combatant and then throw the body into Twin lake, near by. Tremoth told his story in town, and a searching party found blood on the snow and tracked the murderer for a considerable distance.

Cannot Collect Tolls.

The supreme court has declared unconstitutional an act passed by the legislature of 1891 giving to cities and townships the right to acquire, either by purchase or condemnation, toll on plank roads within their corporation limits. The act provided for more than one object not expressed in its title, which violates section 20 of the constitution.

Drug Clerk Murdered.

Fred H. Kelly, night clerk in Caldwell's drug store, was found lying on the cellar floor with a bullet hole in the back of his head at the base of the brain. The cellar door was locked on the top side. It was supposed Kelly was called up during the night and was subsequently forced into the cellar and shot by the customer.

Gave Away Millions.

Delos A. Blodgett, of Grand Rapids, filed deeds dividing his whole property into three parts, one-third being given to his son, John W., one-third to his son-in-law, Edward Lowe, and his wife, and retaining the other third himself. The total value of the property divided is $7,200,000.

PARSON PLADLEY.

A Word Picture of Old Puritan Days.

It was "meeting-time" in Huddersfield, Massachusetts Bay colony, on a Sunday morning in June, 1676. The fifty or sixty log buildings which made up the settlement stood silent as so many tombs among the black stumps of the half-cleaned fields, for every soul in the place, from the old man of ninety to the youngest child, was in the meeting house on the hill—every soul, that is, except Abner True.

Abner True, whose father was a deacon and tithing-man, and counted second only to the minister himself in rigid piety, was actually playing truant from meeting; and this in a village which looked upon Plymouth and Weymouth as dangerously worldly towns, over-much prosperity.

But Abner had worked from sun to sun every day of the last week, and knew he must do the same every day of the next week and the week after that; for the corn was to be hoed, the grass crops got in, and a score of other tasks to be done.

It seemed to him too hard that, on this one day of rest, he should be obliged to sit upon a backless plank bench all the forenoon, if, indeed, he did not find himself forced to sit there longer; since Parson Pladley, who rarely preached less than three hours, sometimes preached four, and once or twice had been known to exceed five hours.

So when Deacon Amos, with his wife and younger children, were ready for meeting, no Abner could be found. Hidden in the little hay mow of the rough barn, he saw the family depart—his father marching ahead, equipped with musket, bandoleer and powder horn; for King Philip and his Indians were at war against the whites, and no man throughout the colony went to field or church without his arms.

Similar groups, similarly accoutred, paced solemnly along toward the rude sanctuary upon the hill, until Abner, seeing that all Huddersfield had passed felt that he was safe—for the present—and lay down upon the soft hay to prepare for the sound nap he had so longed for.

The time went on. The old house was still now; the hens uttered only an occasional croak. From the far distance the preacher's voice came down on the warm breeze in a softened murmur. Abner was dozing.

What was that? He heard a sound that wakened him quite, and he sprang up to listen.

Nothing but a slight swishing sound in the tall grass behind the barn—nothing but that. It was probably some fox or polecat on the watch to snatch a chicken. Abner peered out through a crack to see if he could discover the animal, for the swishing sound seemed drawing nearer.

In the meeting house Parson Pladley had turned his big hour glass twice, and now the sands of the third hour were almost spent. Before him rows of serious men, women and children looked up in reverent attention, not once removing their earnest eyes from the minister.

The heavy door was flung open and shut again with a loud bang that startled every member of the congregation. A boy, staggering and screaming with perspiration, ran up the broad aisle and fell exhausted at the foot of the pulpit.

Every man stretched out his hand to the musket that stood beside him, but no one rose, no one said a word or uttered an exclamation.

Whatever the danger was—and they knew what it might be—this was God's house, and in it none but God's servant should raise a voice or venture upon any action unless he permitted.

The minister descended from his place, leaned over the panting Abner and caught the few words the boy had strength to whisper: "Savages—full five score—stealing up—to take us unaware!"

The minister returned to the pulpit.

"Kindle your matches, brethren," said he, in a voice of perfect tranquillity.

The ring of flint and steel sounded all over the house.

"Make ready your guns," continued the minister, taking up a heavy musket, and blowing the match or fuse by which it was discharged. "Musketeers, to your stations. Ye that have but swords or pikes, sit fast."

The congregation obeyed these orders as calmly as they had been given. Twenty-five men, headed by Deacon True, silently ranged themselves at the loopholes which were pierced in the door and along the walls. Each knew his position, and took it without delay or hesitation; while the fifteen men who had no firearms sat stiffly on the benches with the women and children, most of whom had not looked behind them since Abner rushed in.

Parson Pladley looked at the hour glass, which still continued to run, and quietly resumed his sermon. Around the sides of the room the musketeers stooped at the loopholes amid the light vapor from their smoldering matches.

On the benches the body of listeners kept their composed countenances turned upon the preacher. Save his voice, there was no sound but an infrequent metallic rattle, as some musketeer examined his gun or loosened his iron-hilted broadsword in the scabbard. The words of the preacher sounded through the house:

"And even as aforetim the heathen did furiously rage, and did compass the children of the covenant with spear and with javelin round about—"

A high pitched, thrilling screech filled the air without, and now rose above the minister's voice. It was sustained and proclaimed in many savage throats. There came quick, sharp patterings on the roof and walls, like hailstones.

Enoch Brett fell backward from his loophole with an arrow through the brain. Another man rose from his seat, picked up the gun which Brett had dropped, and took the vacant station.

A dozen muskets answered the storm of missiles. Their fire seemed to check the advance of the Indians, inasmuch as the war-cry grew fainter, and the pattering of the arrows diminished.

Parson Pladley had not interrupted his sermon, although his voice had been temporarily drowned by the noise of the assault and defense, except for the instant that he cast one glance at the musket beside him and another at the hour-glass.

All the men who could act were at their posts; why should he not continue to the end, while waiting for the desperate struggle which must come? His sense of duty told him that he ought not to cease his holy office before the appointed time, except under compulsion in which he must recognize the hand of God.

His hearers understood this as well as if he had declared his determination in so many words. [illegible] with steady attention.

Again the cries grew louder and arrow-flights thicker. The guns replied, but this time the attack was not repulsed. A ponderous thumping on the door, which shook the whole building, told that some kind of battering-ram was being employed to break it down. A few more such shocks, and the door must fall.

Only a pinch or two of sand remained in the hour-glass. Still it was not quite empty, and Parson Pladley preached on.

Crash! The door was half off its hinges. The firearm men crowded behind it, and delivered a volley that appeared for a minute to clear the passage. There was yet some sand in the hour-glass. The pason's lips could be seen to move, though his voice was not heard.

A renewed yell and the crashing blows once more beat upon the door. No shots answered this time, for the muskets were empty.

An arrow whistled across the [illegible] and stuck quivering in the [illegible] pulpit. Around the edges [illegible] shattered door hatchets and clubs were brandished in the faces of the defenders, who dashed them aside with the butts of their guns. The women began to scream.

The last sand ran out of the hour-glass. Parson Pladley bowed his head and said: "Amen!" And all the congregation answered together: "Amen!"

Up sprang the hitherto motionless listeners—women to the rear, men to the front—and from the pulpit the old minister, with sword and gun, led the way to the aid of the others, who were beginning to give ground before the mass of hideously painted figures who were forcing their way through the entrance.

Then came out another side of the Puritan character. The fierce energy—almost joy—with which the colonists fought was as surprising as the stony self-control they had shown but a moment before. Ahead of them all, Parson Pladley swung his mighty sword with cries which betrayed the the old horse-soldier of Cromwell and Harrison, for such he had been; and of those who followed him, more than one had stood in the ranks of the pikemen who met the charges of Prince Rupert's cavaliers, and repelled them, too.

As if he remembered this, the minister lifted up his strong voice in the stern psalm which had thundered over the battlefields of Naseby and Marston Moor—the war song of David the king, rejoicing over his victory:

"I have pursued mine enemies and overtaken them; neither did I turn again till they were consumed.

"I have wounded them that they were not able to rise; they are fallen under my feet.

"For thou hast girded me with strength unto the battle; thou hast subdued under me those who rose up against me."

The Indians were like wolves combating lions. They shrank, wavered and were pressed back to the door, through it and outside of it. Then, by one last rush, they were broken, scattered and dispersed. They ran in every direction for the shelter of the woods, many of them fell by the way under the pikes and swords of their pursuers. Huddersfield was saved.

Within the meeting-house, now half-ruined, dim with powder smoke and heaped with broken benches, arrows and dead bodies, the congregation gathered around its minister, who, blackened and bloody, with gown torn to shreds and a great slash across his forehead, once more raised up his voice—this time in the glorious strains of one of their triumphant hymns.

All joined in it—even the wounded, who could scarcely lift their heads from the ground, and the dying, who sang their last breaths away in the grateful chorus.

When the injured had been cared for, and there was once more time for ordinary matters, Parson Pladley called Abner True to him.

"Son Abner, thou didst well so cunningly to avoid those ruthless savages, and privily warn us betimes. For this thou meritest reward."

Abner looked up, astonished.

"And this shall be thy reward—that for thy willful tarrying away from the sanctuary thou shalt receive no discipline—from the church."

"But my father will—" stammered the boy.

"Of a surety he will," placidly replied the minister, "and I trust it may do thee good."

"Come with me, Abner," said Deacon Amos.—Manley H. Pike, in Youth's Companion.

Union Butter.

"Thanks," remarked the star boarder to the landlady at the table, "but I don't care for union butter."

"I don't understand you," said the landlady, with an unctuous smile of doubt.

"No?" responded the boarder, pleasantly. "In union there is strength, you know."—Detroit Free Press.

WANT MORE SILVER.

Uncle Sam's Propositions to the Monetary Conference.

The Position of the American Delegates Explained by Senator Allison — No Action Will Be Taken Until a Later Date.

"FAVOR SILVER COINAGE.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 26.—The proposals made by the American delegates to the monetary conference were printed in parallel columns, one in English, the other in French, and were on Friday distributed among the delegates, each receiving a copy as he entered the conference room. The proposals substantially say:

"It is generally admitted that a very large depreciation of silver as compared with gold and the price of silver incident thereto have been injurious to the commercial and other economic interests of all civilized countries, and have caused and are causing serious evils and inconveniences to trade, the full extent of which can not yet be measured.

"It is the unanimous opinion of the people of the United States that the establishment of a fixity of value of gold and silver and the full use of silver as a coin metal upon a ratio fixed by agreement between the great commercial nations of the world will greatly promote the prosperity of all classes of the people. They, however, are not unaware of the fact that public opinion in some other countries whose cooperation in a successful movement is most desirable is not fully in accord with the views of the practicability of such an agreement. They believe that a sentiment in favor of a large use of silver is steadily growing throughout the world, and that the time is propitious for holding an international conference to consider the subject.

"The government of the United States, while frankly disclosing its own views of the proper remedy to be applied, does not wish to impose any conditions that will embarrass any government willing to confer on the question of the most advantageous relation of silver to the coinage of the world. The government of the United States for these reasons proposed by a convention of the powers for the purpose of conferring and determining what means, if any, should be taken to increase the use of silver as money. The United States delegates, in conformity with the general purpose of the conference, submit the following resolution:

"That, in the opinion of this conference, it is desirable that means be found for increasing the use of silver in the currency systems of the nations of the world.

"The government of the United States believes that the reestablishment and maintenance of a fixed parity between gold and silver and the continued use of both as coined money of a full debt-paying power would be productive of important benefits to the world.

"These ends will be accomplished by the removal of the legal restrictions now existing and the coinage of silver into full legal-tender money, restoring by international agreement a parity of value between the metals at such a ratio as the conference may decide upon. The essentials of such an international agreement should be:

"1. The unrestricted coinage of both gold and silver into money of full debt paying power.

"2. Fixing a ratio in the coinage between the metals.

"3. The establishment of a uniform charge, if any, to the public for minting gold and silver coins."

SENATOR ALLISON EXPLAINS.

In explaining the position of himself and his colleagues Senator Allison said that, while they came representing the government of the United States and favoring the bimetallic plan, they were willing to discuss any plans calculated to promote an increase in the value of silver bullion. With singular unanimity, he said, the people of the United States were in favor of the free mintage of silver. It was to their advantage, as well as to the interest of the other nations of the world, to secure under an international agreement a stable standard of value. In regard to the assumption that America was a silver-producing country, he said that the silver products amounted to only $50,000,000, while other products represented an annual value of $13,000,000,000.

VIEWS OF OTHER DELEGATES.

Sir Charles [illegible]s Wilson, speaking for Great Britain, said that the British delegates adhered to the American resolution, which was really the basis on which the conference met. The principle therein was set forth in the invitation issued by the government of the United States, and the presence of delegates from the countries invited implied the acceptance by those countries of that principle.

The Austrian and German delegates intimated that they had been instructed to say that they could not assent to any modification of their existing monetary laws.

The Dutch, Spanish and Mexican delegates stated that they were ready to vote favorably on the American resolution, while the Russian, Italian, Roumanian, Swiss and Greek delegates declared that under their instructions they were not permitted to vote on the resolution.

ACTION POSTPONED.

The conference ultimately resolved, in accordance with the request of Senator Allison, to postpone action on the American proposals until a later stage of the proceedings, and to meet on Monday to consider the proposals submitted by Rothschild, of the British delegation.

Killed by a Panther.

WICHITA, Kan., Nov. 26.—An enormous panther made its appearance Wednesday evening at Hopkins' trading post, in the Cherokee outlet, and killed an Indian child in the presence of its mother. William Timmons, a trader, started in pursuit of the panther and killed it near the state line. The dead animal measured 7 feet from nose to tail.

Brooms Advanced in Price.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 26.—An association has been formed of the broom manufacturers of Milwaukee. Notice has been given for 30 per cent advance in prices, to take effect at once. It is quite likely that prices will be further advanced. Shortage in new broomcorn crop is given as the cause.

A BUSINESS FAILURE.

The Bank of O. P. Bills & Co. Closed Their Doors on Monday.

Our citizens were greatly surprised and shocked last Monday morning upon learning that the bank of O. P. Bills & Co. had failed to resume business as usual that morning. All sorts of rumors were afloat at once and it was impossible to learn any particulars that day. The following facts have since come to light, which show the causes of

Monday's Evening News says:

TECUMSEH, Mich., Nov. 28.—The firm of O. P. Bills & Co., proprietors of one of the two banking institutions at this place, has its doors closed this morning. Mr. Bills, the senior partner, is also interested in a Toledo house and has large investments in shipping. Nothing definite can be learned at this hour as to why the bank failed to resume business as usual this morning. There is a rumor that some startling developments in connection with a Toledo man with whom Mr. Bills is associated has caused a temporary suspension, pending an investigation into the bank's affairs.

Mr. Bills, with other gentlemen, is locked in the bank building and refuses all requests for an interview. He has just answered a telephone call and in response to a question from the News correspondent as to whether the bank had burst, said he thought it was all right. He then hung up his telephone, refusing to reply to further inquiries.

The News also contains the following dispatch from Adrian:

ADRIAN, Mich., Nov. 28.—H. C. Smith, of Watts, Bean & Smith, attorneys for O. P. Bills, of Tecumseh, the banker whose bank failed to open to-day, says Mr. Bills claims to have become involved through his partner, a man named Koch, and it is probable Bills is ruined, though he is turning out all his property to protect the depositors of his bank, whom he thinks he can pay in full.

The Toledo Blade of Monday evening has these particulars about the Toledo failure:

Bills & Koch, lumber dealers, have failed. It came like a thunderbolt upon the unsuspecting firm. It all came about last Friday, when Mr. E. F. Loud, of Oscoda, Mich., came to this city. His visit was unexpected, but he came to secure an indebtedness to him of $69,200, which still remained unpaid by Messrs. Bills & Koch. Somehow or other the Ketcham National bank heard of the transaction.

The bank held one of the firm's notes for $5,000. This was immediately secured.

That was all that happened until to-day. Messrs. King & Tracy, attorneys for the First National bank, this morning filed a suit of attachment in the Common Pleas court for $12,000. This last settled the matter and all attempts to pacify the creditors of the firm were of no avail. The claim of E. F. Loud has been reduced, since receiving a bill of sale from Bills & Koch, about $10,000. This reduction makes the claim of Mr. Loud amount to $59,200.

The liabilities of the firm are about $132,000. The assets $150,000, and are distributed as follows: Stock in the steamer Ketcham and also in the steam barge Germania and tow; lumber in the yards, bills receivable and office fixtures.

Mr. Bills, the senior member of the firm, resides at Tecumseh, Mich., and is at present out of the city. Mr. Koch is a Toledo man. He has been in business with Mr. Bills for five years and has always been very successful. Mr. Koch said to a Blade representative this morning: "It was unexpected to us. We had an extensive credit and are now capable of paying all of our indebtedness. Why this should have occurred is more than I can see. My supposition is that our creditors wanted money and came to us for it. Not having the necessary cash on hand to pay them off we had to succumb to the inevitable. If we could have had an inkling of what was coming we could have settled the indebtedness without any publicity whatever. I feel assured that even now, if the assets are carefully handled, we can pay 100 cents on the dollar to every one of our creditors."

The Toledo Bee of Monday evening has the following:

The lumber firm of Bills & Koch, located in the Chamber of Commerce, and whose extensive lumber yards and plant are on the East Side, made an assignment Saturday afternoon in favor of creditors represented by Attorney E. W. Tolerton.

The liabilities are placed at $150,000. The company was recently reorganized, or rather consolidated with a capital stock of $100,000, under the name of the Toledo Navigation Company. The company purchased the steamer Ketcham and on her Mr. John Craig, the shipbuilder, held a mortgage of $45,000. He has also a claim of about $7,000, which is unsecured, to Edward Loud, a prominent lumber dealer of Detroit, through his attorney, Judge Tuttle, of Detroit, its entire business, including all stock, lumber and accounts, to secure a claim of $69,299. This was cash, advanced to Bills & Koch on accommodation paper tendered by Mr. Loud.

In common pleas court this morning King & Tracy, attorneys for the First National bank, filed suit against Bills & Koch, on a claim of $12,300. An attachment was issued on this claim for all property in the hands of Edward Loud to reach any surplus after the payment of his claim of $64,000.

It is claimed that the assets in Mr. Loud's possession are valued at $88,000. He has reduced his claim $11,000 since coming into possession last Thursday. The Ketcham National bank also has a claim of $7,000.

O. P. Bills is the senior member of the firm and resides at Tecumseh, Mich., where he is interested in a bank under the firm name of Bills & Co.

Advices from that point are to the effect that the bank has been closed by the depositors.

Mr. Bills is also interested in a bank and lumber business with his brother-in-law, L. B. Church, at Alma and Ithaca, Mich., which business is transacted under the firm name of Church, Bills & Co. It is stated that Mr. Bills has been unfortunate in wheat speculation. He has drawn from the business of Bills & Koch, within the last 30 days, over $35,000 in cash. Some time ago this firm bought the planing mill plant from Whitney & Tracy, but recently sold it to Merrill, King & Co. for $9,000.

As to how much the liabilities are or who are involved, nothing is definite. The firm has always done a flourishing business in Toledo and has been considered thoroughly substantial. It may be that the affairs of the business are not in such bad shape as appearances indicate.

H. M. Loud & Son's lumber company of Oscoda, Mich., is in no wise interested in the failure.

The steamer Germania and tow, in which the firm had an interest, is involved, and Bills & Koch's interests have been assigned to F. W. Tolerton.

The Free Press of Tuesday morning says:

TECUMSEH, Nov. 28.—(Special)—This village has been in a fever of excitement since business hours this morning, and it was occasioned by the failure of one of our two banks to open up the doors and shutters and resume business. The [illegible] firm is that of O. P. Bills & Co.

Mr. Bills is extensively spread out in a business way. Besides his bank here he has similar institutions at Ithaca and Alma in company with L. B. Church, his brother-in-law, extensive lumber interests at Oscoda and Detroit, and he has shipping interests at Toledo. Mr. Bills is here to-day but has been busied behind closed doors in looking up the affairs of the bank. He says matters are in a bad way for him all around, but he cannot yet tell what the outcome will be, though he hopes to weather the storm.

The Tribune of Tuesday morning says:

TECUMSEH, Mich., Special Telegram, Nov. 28.—The private bank of O. P. Bills & Co. remained closed to-day. The failure is believed to be a very serious one and comes as a sequel to the failure of Bills & Kock, of Toledo, whose liabilities are reported at $200,000. The reason given is this: Mr. Bills is interested in the lumber firm of Bills & Koch at Toledo. Last spring they bought the new steamer Ketcham. Toledo men secured a bill of sale of the Toledo property, leaving quite an amount unsecured. The bank was closed to secure the depositors here. A large amount has been deposited, including the corporation, township and school funds. A great many merchants and business men had large deposits, besides quite a number of poorer people, who had all their savings deposited there. The depositors are assured that they will be paid in full.

The bank of O. P. Bills & Co. was formed some eight years since by Mrs. Perley Bills, O. P. Bills of Tecumseh, Nathan Church and Mrs. Mary Church of Ithaca. Mrs. Bills died several years ago and the bank has continued under the old name and form.

O. P. Bills, the president, was formerly connected with the lumber and banking firm of Church, Bills & Co., at Ithaca, leaving there in 1882. He has been prominently identified with the business and social interests of the village, is a member of the school board and of the Tecumseh Table Company. He is president of the village and it was due largely to his influence that water works are now being put in. For the welfare of the business of the village it is hoped that the bank may open and resume business in a few days.

Bills refuses to give any information as to the failure.

The Adrian Times of Tuesday evening contains the following editorial particulars:

The announcement that the bank of O. P. Bills & Co., at Tecumseh, has closed its doors, made considerable excitement in this city, where the leading spirit of the enterprise, Mr. Oscar Bills, is very generally known. The bank was formed some eight years since by Mrs. P. Bills, O. P. Bills, of Tecumseh, Nathan Church and Mrs. Mary Church, of Ithaca. Mrs. Bills died several years ago and the bank has continued under the old name and form. The present Mrs. Bills was a daughter of the late Col. William Graves, who died in Toledo some years ago, and prior to the war was very popular among his townspeople here. She received a fine musical education in Germany, and was married to Mr. Bills soon after resuming a residence with her mother in this city. Mr. Bills has always rated as a financier and business man of exceptional ability, and for the sake of the many whose interests are involved we hope the present embarrassment may be only temporary.

Hon. R. A. Watts, of the law firm of Watts, Bean & Smith, of this city, who is attorney for Mr. Bills, was interviewed by a Times reporter, and said the Tecumseh depositors of the bank will all be paid in full. The Toledo partner, Ed. Koch, who is a dealer in the general lumber business and has an interest in a boat, became heavily involved and gave a bill of sale to one of his principal creditors. The claim was so heavy that Mr. Bills was advised to close the doors of the Tecumseh bank in order to protect his home interests. All the trouble was caused by the Toledo partner, and, no doubt, the bank will soon be upon its feet, and the doors again open to the public.

The Evening News of Tuesday contains these few additional particulars:

ITHACA, Mich., Nov. 29.—Besides their Toledo business, the Bills family are interested in no less than five banks in Michigan, including the one at Tecumseh. The suspension of O. P. Bills & Co. at the latter town seems likely to produce a disturbance in financial affairs in this state which has been equaled by no business trouble in years. Church, Bills & Co., bankers, of this place, failed to open their doors this morning. Cashier W. B. Scattergood says he can give no statement at present further than that the failure of O. P. Bills & Co. has embarrassed them.

ST. LOUIS, Mich., Nov. 29.—The Commercial Savings bank of St. Louis is largely run by Gen. Saviers. He married Miss Bills. Church, Bills & Co. is the name of a bank at Ithaca and also at Alma. Gen. Saviers is also largely interested in a bank at Harrison.

TECUMSEH, Mich., Nov. 29—The doors of O. P. Bills & Co.'s bank still remain closed, notwithstanding Mr. Bills' assurance of yesterday that he hoped to resume business in a few hours. No steps, so far as can be learned, have been taken for the appointment of a receiver. Considerable amounts of school money and other public funds are on deposit in the bank. Representatives of the First National bank of Detroit and of a Toledo bank are here looking after their interests.

2 p. m.—Mr. Bills has turned all his property over, it is said, for the benefit of his creditors. Last evening Mr. Mearing, president of the First National bank of Toledo, accompanied by Mr. King, of the law firm of King & Percy, arrived here. A conference lasting till late at night was held with Mr. Bills and Mr. Lilley, president of Lilley, Bidwell & Co., bankers, and as a result of the conference Mr. Bills is claimed by some to have made an assignment. Mr. Mearing and his attorney went to Adrian this morning.

The following additional items pertaining to the failure are taken from yesterday's Free Press:

TECUMSEH, Nov. 29.—(Special.)—The excitement here over the closing of O. P. Bills and Co.'s bank Monday morning has somewhat subsided. Yesterday Mr. Bills expressed the opinion that the bank would be closed but a few hours. The doors have not opened today, but nevertheless confidence in the solvency of the institution has been largely restored, the belief being quite general that Mr. Bills has ample assets at Toledo to pay his debts, and that his banking institutions will be, at most, only temporarily embarrassed. Some of the depositors are sadly down in the mouth, but they are in the minority.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 29.—(Special.)—Church, Bills & Co.'s bank, of Ithaca, failed to open its doors this morning, and it is supposed to be embarrassed by the failure of O. P. Bills & Co., of Toledo and Tecumseh.

The failure of these banks has no effect on the Commercial Savings bank of this city. In an interview with Gen. Saviers he said: "I have never had any interest with Church or Bills, or with any of the parties concerned. It does not in any way affect the bank at Harrison, or of this city, in which I am interested, as I have never handled any paper of any of these parties." The fact of the failure of Church, Bills & Co., of Ithaca, is not regarded here as an indication that they will not pay 100 cents on the dollar. It is generally understood that the embarrassment of the Ithaca bank will prove to be merely temporary. Gen. Church, the senior member of the firm of Church, Bills & Co., of Ithaca, is known here as a man of large property interests, and a careful, conservative and prudent business man.

THE PRESENT SITUATION.

From the mass of chaff given above we can gather very nearly the real situation at present. The firm of Bills & Koch at Toledo became involved. One of their heaviest creditors seems to have hastily demanded immediate satisfaction, which forced the failure of that firm. In these days, when so large a proportion of business is done on credit, but few firms could meet a heavy claim without time to realize on their assets. People here very generally believe that Mr. Koch is responsible for the condition of the Toledo firm. Mr. Bills is taking a very prudent course in not letting the public into his confidence, but from all the information obtainable at present we are satisfied that he closed the Tecumseh bank as a matter of precaution to protect his home depositors. We are very glad to know that this is the fact and that the Tecumseh bank will be opened again and the depositors here paid in full within a few days, or as soon as the Toledo trouble is adjusted.

Mr. Bills has always been regarded here as a very prudent, trustworthy financier and although he has had a good many irons in the fire his ventures heretofore have proven very successful. He is now President of the village and a member of the school board, and has always taken a prominent position in social and business affairs in town. Tecumseh cannot afford to lose such an institution and every citizen here will sincerely wish that Mr. Bills may soon extricate himself from his embarrassment and resume business again.

The December Atlantic.

In the December number of The Atlantic Monthly Mr. Crawford brings his serial story, Don Orsino, to an unexpected and striking close; and in the final passages of his novel tells us that in his hero we see a sketch of the young man of the transition period in Italian life. He intimates that this is the end of his series of histories of the Saracinesac family.

The chief attraction of this number is a collection of letters that James Russell Lowell addressed to W. J. Stillman which are very delightful reading,—full of the genial, Sunny disposition, and the quick touches of humor and feeling which were so characteristic of the man.

Frank Bolles, whose volume "The Land of the Lingering Snow" has given him a place among the keenest observers of nature, has a sketch entitled "Alone on Chocorua at Night;" and Edward Everett Hale's graphic papers on "A New England Boyhood" are continued, and are as interesting as ever in their intimate personal sketches of men and landmarks of old Boston days. In a travel sketch, "A Morning at Sermione," Ellen Olney Kirk describes the quaint old Italian town where Catullus once had his country villa. Mr. William Henry Bishops's papers on "An American at Home in Europe" give a further account of house-hunting, and his description of apartments at Venice is particularly interesting and amusing. Agnes Repplier's article an Wit and Humor is full of good things, and is written with the brightness and vivacity that Miss Rapplier puts into everything that she does. A more serious contribution, Professor Andrew C. McLaughlin's article on Mississippi and the Negro Question, discusses the manner in which Mississippi has undertaken to regulate the rights of negroes within her borders.

REV. SYLVANUS LANE

Of the Cincinnati M. E. Conference, makes a good point when he says: We have for years used Hood's Sarsaparilla in our family of five, and find it fully equal to all that is claimed for it. Some people are greatly prejudiced against patent medicines, but how the patent can hurt a medicine and not a machine is a mystery of mysteries to me.

A BIBLE STUDY CLASS.

This is for a broad, free study of the Bible, critical and historical. It will aim to give what can not be had in the ordinary Sunday school or Bible-Class, and so to be largely profitable to the Sunday school and Bible class teacher, and to all others. It is intended to give large general information about our own, the origin and character of the different books of the Bible, their authors and the time they were written, will be considered, and also, the questions of Revelation, Inspiration and Infallibility of the Bible, prophecy and miracle, will be freely examined. Here is an opportunity for free investigation and free expression of whatever opinion any one may hold. We hope for larger and better results than can be had from the ordinary treatment of the Bible. It is not intended in any sense to be a narrow, sectarian, or denominational treatment of the Bible, but to be scientific, critical and historical, and in a thoroughly candid, reverent and constructive spirit.

Who is invited to join this class? Every one, except children who may be too young. Young men and women, preachers, teachers, lawyers, doctors, and all professional men, merchants, laborers, young and old, any and all classes, are cordially invited and will be heartily welcomed. At the Universalist church, Monday evenings at 7:30. The text book will be Sunderland's "What is the Bible?"

A Bargain for Farmers.

We take pleasure in informing our readers that the Ohio Farmer is offered for the remainder of this year and all of next for only one dollar. Its circulation is now over seventy-five thousand paid annual subscribers. It goes into every state in the Union and into many foreign countries. Its advertising patronage is liberal, and this with the large circulation enables its publishers to give to the farmers of this country one of the very best, most enterprising and attractive family journals in America. It is published at Cleveland, Ohio, and is national in everything but name. It is an 80-column weekly of 52 issues a year. Its proprietors are its editors, while its associate editors are M. E. Williams and W. I. Chamberlain, both men of national reputation as practical agricultural writers. Its contributors are men who are known wherever the best agricultural papers are taken. Its proprietors spare no expense nor labor that promises to add to its interest and value, and maintain its reputation as the best and most widely circulated dollar weekly agricultural journal in America. Specimen copies and premium list will be sent free to all applicants by addressing The Ohio Farmer, Cleveland, Ohio. Agents wanted.

It is strictly an American remedy; home-made and without foreign flavor, we refer to Salvation Oil. The greatest cure on earth for pain.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

Ole Olson to-night.

Our supplement sheet this week is a busy.

Lon Haight spent Thanksgiving in Tecumseh.

Go and hear Ole Olson this evening at the opera house.

Bert Tribou, of Detroit, was at home for Thanksgiving.

Hugh Richards, of Jackson, was in town last Saturday.

Dr. Ernest Gamble ate Thanksgiving dinner in Tecumseh.

Remember Conwell's lecture next Tuesday evening, Dec. 6th.

Philip DePuy is on the gain and is able to be out doors again.

The New York Tribune: As an author and lecturer Mr. Conwell has won high honors.

The advertising cards in this week's issue should be carefully perused—Read them all.

Chas. F. Cummins, of Toledo, spent Thanksgiving with his old Tecumseh friends.

The Cincinnati Times: Mr. Conwell is one of the most eloquent and gifted speakers in the country.

C. M. Dickinson has given the interior of his meat market a fresh coat of paint and he has a very neat market now.

The Misses Etta Coddington and Rhoda Benedict attended the Baker-Goodsell wedding at Adrian last week Wednesday.

Mrs. Jacob Tallman, of Mt. Morris and Mrs. John Wishart, of Oregon, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Blood over Sabbath.

The Prohibition vote of this county was just six less than four years ago. In 1888 had 916 votes in 1888, and Bidwell had 910 votes in 1892.

The Boston Journal: Mr. Conwell has achieved a decided success in the lecture field, not only in this city but throughout the country.

Mrs. Andrew Whiting went to Toledo Tuesday, to help take care of her sister, Mrs. John O'Neil, who is very sick. Their mother, Mrs. Wescott is also there.

Jacob Walker is giving us a lift in the HERALD office this week. There is an immense amount of extra work in getting out our supplement sheet, and his services come very opportunely.

In response to numerous requests, Rev. H. A. Smith will continue the presentation of the suggested topics in his discross on Thanksgiving Day. The theme of discourse next Sunday evening will be National Peril from increasing Desecration of the Lord's Day.

All members of Beers Post, No. 140 G. A. R. are very earnestly requested to be present at its next regular meeting Dec 5th, at the election of officers for the ensuing year.
G. S. VANTYNE, Com.
M. DEMOTT, Adjt.

The evening Telegram, a new afternoon daily paper, will be issued at Adrian on and after Saturday, December 1st, the firm being composed of Messrs. W. Redfield and E. E. Putnam. It will be independent in politics. The business office will be located in the Wheeler block, ground floor, occupying the store room facing Winter street. It will be issued every afternoon at three o'clock.

A well-known landscape gardener says: Don't disfigure your lawn with the at of course barn manure. Instead, use an application of dry hard wood ashes, that will at the first rainfall, however slight, fall down in and among the roots of grass, forever out of sight. The application will be easier, the cost less, while the effect will be equally destructive of a thick green turf, and without the unsightly covering of the stable manure.

Eastern Star meeting this evening.

Charlie Bidwell returned to Buffalo Monday morning.

R. A. Watts, of Adrian, was in town Monday on legal business.

Miss Lou Hatch, of Bay City, is visiting friends in and about Tecumseh.

Mrs. Geo. Tiffany gave a progressive whist party at her home Saturday evening.

The reserved seat chart for Conwell's lecture will open on Saturday morning, Dec. 3d.

Miss Julia Snell left for Washington, D. C., Saturday, stopping in Cleveland over Sunday.

J. D. Kinney & Co., of Adrian, have a new card in to-day's issue announcing their quarter-off sale.

We understand the ladies insist upon giving a leap year party. It is needless to say the young men most calmly acquiesce.

Mrs. Hanchett and Mrs. Bass, who have been visiting several weeks at C. C. Tefft's returned home to New York State Friday.

The Masons of Tecumseh will exemplify the third degree at Manchester next Monday night. A large number expect to be present.

Mrs. E. C. Rogers and son Robbie, went to Detroit last Wednesday to spend Thanksgiving with friends and returned home Saturday.

Revival meetings are in progress every evening this week at the Friend's church. The attendance is good and much interest is manifested.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Ware, of Grand Rapids, returned home last Saturday. Mrs. Ware has been spending some time at her father's, Wm. Hayden's.

The farewell leap year party given by our young ladies Thanksgiving evening, in which about 32 couple participated, was enjoyed by the young men.

Last Monday evening about seventy-five members of the M. E. church gave their pastor, Rev. J. P. Varner, a genuine surprise which was heartily enjoyed by all.

Miss Jane Corlette, of Toledo, was the guest of Miss Bertine Brewer the fore part of the week. Miss Brewer entertained a number of friends in her honor Monday evening.

Rev. J. P. Varner began, last Sunday evening, a series of five sermons to young men. The second one will be next Sabbath evening, Dec. 4. Subject: Young men and self reliance.

This is Masonic week, the regular meetings occuring of the Chapter, Eastern Star and Blue Lodge. The annual election of officers will take place in the Blue Lodge and Chapter.

Albany Journal: It is said that Mr. Conwell began lecturing twenty-four years ago. If so, what a great amount of good he must have done as a public teacher! Every address of his is a good deed from a generous heart.

Mrs. Ellen Sickles, a sister of Robt. Cairns, died at her home in Three Rivers on the 29th. The remains will be brought here to-day and the funeral services will be held to-morrow afternoon, at two o'clock, at Mr. Cairns' residence.

Washington Republican: The wheel of time has carried under the great lecturers of twenty years ago until Talmage and Conwell are almost the only popular lecturers living who may be said to have a National reputation.

Rev. Gorton will preach at the Universalist church next Sunday on the following subjects: Morning—"The revelation of Man." Evening—"What do Universalists believe, and why do they believe it?" The public cordially invited.

Philadelphia Inquirer: Mr. Conwell has become a favorite in Philadelphia, on the platform, and is sure of an audience whenever he appears. He has repeated one lecture at the Academy three times with equal success in the same year.

A Home Mission Conference under the direction of Rev. Dr. E. H. E. Jameson, of Detroit, District Secretary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society will be held in the Baptist church of this city, on the afternoon and evening of Wednesday of next week, Dec. 7th. All are cordially invited to be present.

Springfield Union: It is of no use to try to report Conwell's lectures. They are unique. Unlike anything or anyone else. Filled with good sense, brilliant with new suggestions and inspiring always to noble life and deed, they always please with their wit. The reader of his addresses does not know the full power of the man.

Atlanta (Ga.) Constitution: Rev. R. H. Conwell was introduced to an Atlanta audience for the first time last night by Rev. J. W. Lee, at Trinity Church. He is a tall, well-formed gentleman of about forty, dark hair, dark mustache, pleasant expression, and was perfectly at home the moment he faced the large, cultivated and expectant audience. In his lecture he gave the people what they wanted—plenty of good common-sense, plenty of every-day language, plenty of apt illustration, plenty of apposite anecdote, plenty of wit and humor, which rose naturally from his subject as water bubbles from a spring, and plenty of fine sentiment and pathos which never failed to strike home at the right time. There are orators and orators, but few like Conwell, and after he spoke two hours and a half all were sorry when he concluded. All want to hear him again.

Mrs. Geo. Everett left for Ann Arbor this morning.

There will be a teachers institute at Britton next Saturday, Dec. 3d.

L. M. Lovett, of Oak Park, Ill., is visiting at DeWitt Talman's this week.

Frank Chilson, who is attending the Normal at Ypsilanti was at home last week.

Miss Eva Judge, of this place, spent Thanksgiving in Adrian, her former home.

Lt. Will McNair has been transferred from Washington to Fort McHenry at Baltimore.

The pumps for the water works have arrived and the power house can now be completed.

Cleo Hall has recovered from his tussle with the measles and resumed his place in the post office.

Well, we hope so. The mercy of Providence often extends far beyond what we in our wickedness have any just right to expect.—Adrian Press.

Mrs. F. D. Lancaster and Mrs. C. S. Burroughs of Clinton, were calling on Tecumseh friends yesterday afternoon and attending the St. Peter's church fair.

John B. Garlinghouse died this morning. The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, at his residence in this village. Further notice hereafter.

Tecumseh people are still rolling measles as a sweet morsel, under their tongues. Ridgely, of the News, pretends he has it and is laying off.—Adrian Press.

The ladies of St. Peter's Guild yesterday gave their annual fair in Armory Hall. As usual the sale was a success as anything undertaken by the Guild is not done by halves.

The W. C. T. U. will meet every Friday at 3 o'clock P. M. during Dec. at the home of Mrs. Wm. Heck. Mrs. Jackson will conduct the mother's meeting on Friday Dec. 2d.

B. C. Knapp having purchased a quantity of Franklin hard maple would be pleased to furnish those wishing to purchase their wood green. Also, dry wood on hand at reasonable prices,

Eighteen years ago last Tuesday, Nov. 16th, 1874, S. C. Stacy bought the Herald printing office and took possession the same day. Providence permitting, he is likely to run the business eighteen years longer.—Tecumseh Herald.

Will Walker, a brother of Scove Walker's, was in town Monday. He is now foreman of the electric light power house at Elgin, Ill., and has been taking a week's respite from work.

Geo. S. Wilson, Mr. Wm. Hayden's head miller, started last Monday morning on a trip to Ireland and Scotland to work up some new customers for the Globe Mill brands of flour. He is likely to be absent a month or more.

The annual election of officers for Tecumseh Lodge F. & A. M., will take place to-morrow, (Friday) evening. A full attendance of the members is requested. After the business of the meeting a banquet will be served.

Beaver Falls Spray: Mr. Conwell has spoken to the people of Beaver Falls each year since our popular Lecture Course was established. He is a great favorite with the people of this city. Everybody delights to hear him.

C. E. Williamson's shipments of poultry for the Thanksgiving market exceeded all his previous achievements in that line. His total shipments for six days amounted to 91,104 pounds and sold for $8697.82. These figures broke the record for that length of time.

A letter from T. B. Gould, of East Jordan, Charlevoix Co., says: We are all well and doing finely, crops were all good, corn, hay and wheat. Thousands of bushels of potatoes have been shipped from here at forty cents per bushel. I was after a bear the other day, but am sorry to say I did not get him.

The Tecumseh Table Co., are now at work on a new line of sample tables, twenty pieces in all for their Grand Rapids salesmen. They expect to have them ready for the annual furniture sale to be held in Grand Rapids during the month of January. The new line will consist of library tables, fancy parlor tables, and extension tables of the latest styles.

Emanuel H. Custer, father of the late Gen. Geo. A. Custer, died the 27th at the residence of his son, N. J. Custer, two miles west of Monroe. Mr. Custer was known to many of our citizens, having frequently visited Elliott Gray's family during the past five years. He has been in feeble health for several months but his final illness only lasted two weeks. He was 85 years of age.

A Holloway man "would like to see the postmaster, who is a good republican and the deputy state oil inspector, who is a red hot democrat, meet and extend to each other their feelings of sympathy and condolence." The difference between the two men is this. The democrat is prepared; a republican never feels that he is quite ready to let go.—Adrian Press.

Landlord Patterson of the Lilley House surpassed himself in the Thanksgiving dinner which he served to his guests last Thursday. It was the most elaborate menu we think, without any exception, that has ever been served in Tecumseh on a similar occasion. In addition to his regular boarders, a large number of home guests partook of his hospitality on that day.

TRADE IS GOOD.

Money Is Easy and the Volume of Business Greater Than Ever Before.

NEW YORK, Nov. 26.—Dun's weekly review of trade says:

"The condition of business throughout the country appears excellent, with the volume of trade greater than in any previous year. At Boston trade is good, prospects are considered excellent, and money is easy at lower rates. At Philadelphia trade in general is fairly active, money is easier from lack of demand, and is expected to be easier than usual for the coming month. At Baltimore a slight increase is seen in the local demand for goods, the supply of money is ample, and the caution shown in southern dealings has been justified by excellent collections this season. At Cincinnati cigar manufacturing does well. Trade is good at Cleveland, though not changed in iron. Money is close, with active demand. At Detroit money is in strong demand, but rates lower. The volume of trade at Chicago is satisfactory, and collections are good, with money in strong demand, currency being wanted for the southwest. Trade at Milwaukee is stimulated in all lines and money in good demand. At Minneapolis and St. Paul there is good trade, with collections improving. At St. Louis retail trade is improved by the weather. Business at Memphis has slightly improved, as also at Little Rock. Trade is improving at New Orleans, with money much easier and cotton and sugar active.

"In speculative markets cotton has absorbed interest because of the enormous transactions, amounting to 6,000,000 bales, or nearly the entire crop, in two broken and one full week. Wheat is comparatively inactive, with ⅛ of a cent decline, and corn and oats are unchanged, with small transactions. Pork products are higher—pork $11.25 per barrel and lard ¼ of a cent. Coffee is also stronger by ⅛ a cent.

"The condition of the great industries is decidedly favorable. In general, the manufacturer promises to have no 'between seasons.' Woolen mills are still busy and sales of wool greater than a year ago, with smaller stocks. The cotton industry is thriving everywhere. In iron the market remains firm, with large orders for structural products. Money has been steady at 4 per cent., the treasury having added slightly to circulation by issuing $300,000 more notes. Stocks have been weaker, declining 50 cents a share, but there is no sign of especial disturbance.

"The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number 203 as compared with totals of 240 last week. For the corresponding week last year the figures were 205."

LAST OF A GREAT SINGER.

Mrs. Patton, of the Famous Family of Hutchinsons, Passes Away.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Mrs. Abby Hutchinson Patton, wife of Ludlow Patton, died after a brief illness, the immediate cause of which was a rupture of one of the blood vessels of the brain. Mrs. Patton and her brother John were the last survivors of the famous Hutchinson family of singers of New Hampshire, who first came before the public fifty years ago and sang before audiences throughout this country and Great Britain. There were three brothers and one sister who composed the quartette. Abby, the youngest, was born August 29, 1829. She was a natural musician, singing as soon as she could talk. At the age of 12 she started out with her brothers on a concert tour. Their songs and manner were characterized by the utmost simplicity. In 1845 the family visited Great Britain. They were entertained by Charles Dickens, William Howitt and Alexander Ireland. They found many warm friends in that country. In 1849 Abby was married to Ludlow Patton, a banker and broker and member of the New York exchange. After her marriage Mrs. Patton sang only occasionally with her brothers on special occasions, but was always ready to respond for charity. Mrs. Patton recently issued a little volume called "A Handful of Pebbles," which contains many lofty sentiments. She has also set to music a number of songs; among those best known are, "Kind Words Can Never Die" and "Ring Out, Wild Bells."

VANDERBILT BURNED OUT.

Destruction of One of the Most Costly Residences at Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., Nov. 26.—"The Breakers," the elegant and costly summer residence of Cornelius Vanderbilt, is a smoldering mass of ruins. Blackened and crumbling walls of brick and heaps of ashes are all that now remains of the palatial villa which for years has been numbered among Newport's largest and finest residences. The fire also destroyed all the valuable contents of the villa, including furniture, bric-a-brac, wearing apparel and rare and costly articles of every description. The fire broke out about 4:30 p. m. Friday, and within two hours the building and contents were totally destroyed.

It is estimated that the loss by the fire is upward of $300,000. The building and furniture were heavily insured. The total of the policies is unknown to Mr. Vanderbilt.

Jealousy Causes a Tragedy.

CAIRO, Ill., Nov. 26.—Ransom Sampson, employed as captain of a harbor boat here, and his wife were shot by a woman named May Sims, at the Planter's house at 11 a. m. Friday. The woman shot herself through the head after firing at Sampson and his wife. Sampson is dead and his wife cannot live. The Sims woman will also die. The tragedy is due to jealousy. May Sims is said to have been a former mistress of Sampson.

Knights of Labor.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 25.—At the close of their annual meeting the Knights of Labor adopted resolutions favoring the restriction of immigration to those with funds sufficient for a year's support; restricting the ballot to those who can read and write; and that money should be issued by the national government only.

The Comet Fails to Appear.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—As far as could be seen from this city, Biela's comet did not even brush us with his tail. Thick clouds obscured the view, and the promised panorama of meteoric showers, while it may have taken place in the upper atmosphere, was not apparent to the naked eye.

Death Caused by Apoplexy.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 26.—Robert Barbour, president of the Barbour Flax Spinning Company, died at 4 a. m. of apoplexy. He left a fortune variously estimated at from $5,000,000 to 10,000,000.

BANK STATISTICS.

Interesting Facts from Comptroller Hepburn's Report.

A Net Increase of Ninety-Three Banking Houses During the Year—A Large Increase in Circulation Is Also Shown.

FINANCIAL STATISTICS.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—The forthcoming report of Mr. A. B. Hepburn, the comptroller of the currency, shows that 168 banks, with an aggregate capital of $15,285,000, were organized during the year, 53 went into voluntary liquidation and 17 became insolvent, leaving a net increase for the year of 98 banks. Nearly 50 per cent. of the new banks are located west of the Mississippi river and 35 per cent. in the southern states.

The number of banks in operation October 31, 1892, was 3,788, having an aggregate capital of $693,868,645; surplus and undivided profits, $340,524,179; individual deposits, $1,765,422,983; bank deposits, $530,453,202, and total resources, $3,510,094,897.

The circulation outstanding shows a net increase for the year of $10,487,266. The gold held by banks, as compared with September 25, 1891, shows an increase of $21,994,115; surplus and profits, increase, $9,663,020; individual deposits increase, $177,104,902, and bank deposits increase, $100,058,428. Over two-thirds of the liabilities of the seventeen banks reported as having failed belong to the Maverick bank.

The comptroller gives detailed information as to all clearing-house transactions for the year, the domestic exchange drawn by the banks, and shows how, by means of bookkeeping substitutes, the use of actual money is minimized, less than 10 per cent. of the business transactions being represented by money.

BOLD BUT GALLANT.

Male Passengers Robbed on a Northern Pacific Train—Ladies Unmolested.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 26.—The overland west-bound train on the Northern Pacific railroad was held up Thursday evening near Hot Springs by three masked men, who robbed all the male passengers in the Pullman sleeper Wadena, six in all. The first man the robbers met was E. H. Miller, of Portland, Ore., who was in the smoking compartment. He was relieved of $10 and a gold watch and then told to march in ahead of the robbers, which he did. One of the highwaymen went to the extreme end of the car while the other stood guard at the end they entered. All were dressed in dark clothes, overcoats, slouch hats and wore handkerchiefs over their faces. They placed revolvers at the heads of the passengers and commanded them to hold up their hands.

The robbers did not molest the ladies, telling them to keep quiet and no harm would come to them. After robbing everybody in the car and without going to any of the other cars the robbers pulled the bell cord, giving the proper signals, and when the car stopped they pulled the bell to start again and then jumped off, fled to the woods, firing a parting fusillade as they disappeared. The total amount taken was $1,200 besides the gold watches and jewelry and other valuables.

HUNGER'S PANGS.

Miners in the State of Washington Said to Be in a Starving Condition.

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 25.—A startling story of starvation among the miners in the mountains east of Snohomish reached here by E. T. Keit and Fritz Ellingstone, who had been for fifty hours without food. The freshets hemmed the miners in and on account of their exhausted condition they were unable to get to the transport and obtain a new supply of food. Keit and Ellingstone are the only men out of fifty miners who started for Snohomish, four days ago to get in. The others dropped along the route from sheer exhaustion and want of food, and it is feared they are lost in the woods. The survivors had scarcely any clothing when they arrived, which, with their pinched and gaunt features, testified to the truth of their alarming tale.

Official Vote of Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 28.—The official returns from all the counties in the state have been received by the treasurer of state. JOE'S WIFE.

How a Patient Taught His Doctor a Lesson.

Dr. Ford was driving home in the twilight after working hard all day, tired and anxious as to the result of an important surgical operation performed that morning. The mud spattered up from the streets as he rolled along, and the chilling November drizzle gave to the familiar trees a forlorn, almost ghastly aspect. His heart warmed as he pictured to himself a wife watching for him, with a welcome smile, from their cozy parlor, dinner ready and a long restful evening before them.

But, as he drew near home, no cheerful light streamed from door or window. All seemed as dark and deserted as the dripping street. He threw the reins to the boy whose duty was to hold the horse on his professional rounds and flung open the front door with an irritated, injured feeling.

No tender smile; no sympathetic voice; no firelight; no dinner, apparently.

"Elinor!" he called.

No answer.

"Elinor!"

This time a voice spoke out of the darkness—a tired voice:

"Do be more quiet, John; the baby is just going to sleep."

"Confound it! Why isn't there a light here? And why isn't the baby asleep before this time of night?"

"He has been fretful all day with his teeth, and I have not had a chance to change my dress."

A wailing cry from the nursery sent the voice hurrying thither, and the doctor, with some inaudible words, proceeded to light the gas and take off his wet overcoat. The house was cold, the parlor had evidently been arranged by Hibernian hands, an odor of something burning stole in from the kitchen. A pleasant reception for a man after a long day's work.

He ran upstairs with no gentle footstep. His wife sat by the nursery fire; her face wore a weary expression, and she had on the same blue gown which she had donned for breakfast. The baby at length slept in her arms. She held up a warning finger as her husband came blundering in, but already baby's light slumber had been disturbed, and the process of soothing and singing had to be repeated for the fifteenth time.

It seemed to the young mother as if her patience could hold out no longer. It was provoking to have the little one startled from his uneasy dreams again. She knew Bridget would spoil the dinner. She had been trying all day to get downstairs to make the house pleasant with a magic touch here and there. She longed to get into a fresh gown and brush her hair, but there had been no time for her to do one of these things. Nurse was away with a sick sister, and babies always demanded more from their mothers than from anyone else. They are tyrannical and know and seize every opportunity to prove their power over the anxious, half-ignorant young mothers, who are happy, after all, to be their slaves.

When at last the dinner bell rang, Mrs. Ford laid the baby in his crib, sound asleep this time, warm and lovely in his utter repose. She gave a hurried dab at her wavy hair, caught up a fresh handkerchief and ran down to join her husband, who sat at the table with a decidedly cross look on his face. He barely tasted the soup, then pushed it away in disgust.

"Burned?" asked his wife.

"Of course. Can't you smell it all over the house? Why don't you look after Bridget a little?"

"Why, John, I have hardly been downstairs to-day."

"Where's Hannah?"

"She went to her sister's last night."

"Oh, yes; I forgot. What's this? Cold corned beef! Really, Elinor, have you nothing else to offer?"

"Would you like an omelet?"

"No."

"What then?"

"A beefsteak, if there is one."

Mrs. Ford rose and went to the kitchen. The girl, of course, had just filled up the range with fresh coal, so there was nothing to be done but make the best of cold meat, potatoes and macaroni, followed by a dessert of apple pudding and cheese.

Dr. Ford found fault with the potatoes and said he was tired of macaroni, the bread was dry, and the butter not perfect. As to the pudding:

"My mother always had mince pies at this season," said he.

This was the last straw, and his wife, unusually sensitive to straws to-night, could bear no more.

"It is a pity you ever left your mother."

"I think so, too," he responded, pushing his chair back.

His wife hesitated a moment whether to run around the table and burst into tears upon her husband's shoulder or to rush upstairs and have a good cry by baby's side. She decided upon the latter course, and, with quivering lip, left the room and shut herself up in the nursery, where the fire was dying on the hearth and the baby breathing softly, in strange contrast to her overwrought condition.

"Well, it is provoking. Women always must cry and fly into a passion about trifles."

But her husband, even as he thought these words, began to feel repentant. He remembered the teething baby and the long day at home alone. In another moment he would have followed his wife upstairs and apologized for the pain he had given her. But the doorbell rang and a summons to visit a sick man at a distance sent him at once out into the wet night. And all domestic grievances were forgotten before he had driven two hundred yards.

The patient lived in a squalid part of the town by the river. The darkness seemed deeper in this poor neighborhood, the rain more soaking and the wind keener. The river swept sullenly by, a black, swollen tide, reflecting the flaring lights on the bridge. But the doctor minded this discomfort very little. He was in love with his profession, ardent and young. Besides, the despised dinner had given him new courage to fight pain and death.

He entered the one room of the low house to which he had been directed with a face quite free from impatience. A woman opened the door for him—a lean, miserable creature, with pale eyes void of expression. Her thin hair hung over her neck, her calico dress fell limply from her sharp shoulders. She stared at the doctor as he entered, and he could see there were tears in her childlike eyes.

"Joe's sick," she said, slowly, gazing into his face.

"What's the matter?"

"He—he's goin'ter die, maybe," she faltered, piteously.

"No, I hope not."

"Joe's sick," she repeated in a whisper, shaking her head.

"Who's come?" asked a voice from the bed in the corner of the room.

"Nellie, girl, who are ye talkin' with?"

"It is Dr. Ford, whom you sent for," said the physician, approaching the bed.

One candle lighted dimly the untidy, comfortless place, showing a stove and a man with tumbled hair and rough beard lying among the pillows of his bed.

"Oh, the doctor," said he, with feverish eyes staring from under the shaggy brows.

"How long have you been ill?" asked Dr. Ford, sitting down on a rickety chair.

"It's a week since I gave up, but I've been feeling bad for a long time."

The doctor placed his little thermometer under the patient's tongue and waited silently.

"Joe's sick," moaned the girl, peering out of the shadows.

The sufferer seemed to be irritated by the repetition of these words and made an impatient gesture, but as he did so glanced pitifully at the slouching figure.

"What you most need is good nursing," said the doctor, after examining the patient.

The man's face darkened. The woman hovered aimlessly over the stove.

"She's my wife," said the sick man, hoarsely. "I know she ain't quite like other folks. But she's peaceable and good, not bold and noisy like other women. I pitied her first off; then I got kind o' fond of her. And she" —

The girl had crept to the bedside and stood there with her vacant, troubled face, fumbling with the pillows.

"Joe," she said, much as a mother might speak her baby's name.

"She can't do nothing more for me nor for herself," whispered the man, as he clasped one of the fluttering hands in his.

"Poor thing!" murmured the doctor.

"I can earn good wages when I'm well," went on the invalid, "and I did the cooking and kept the house tidy then. Now everything's going wrong. She spoils all the victuals, but she don't mean to."

At this moment something on the stove boiled over with a loud hiss and filled the room with the odor of scorching milk. The girl started, then moved toward the ruined mess.

"Oh, dear me!" said the sick man, under his breath. "Don't burn yourself, Nellie," he called, as if to a child.

"It's scorched, Joe," she said, the tears overflowing at last.

"Never mind, my girl, throw it away. We can get plenty more. You see, doctor," he said, in his hoarse voice, "I can't speak rough to her. She's my wife."

The doctor sat with bent head, speechless.

"I'll send you a nurse, my man," he said, after a pause. "What you need is good care. I will come again to-morrow." And with a low bow to man and wife, now clinging together, hand in hand, the doctor said good-night, and went on his way.

"Thank you, sir," called out the sick man, much moved.

The girl only stared and wiped the last tear from her lashes.

Two hours later a capable, kind-hearted woman was installed as nurse in the little home by the river. She brought with her food in abundance, and comforts of all kinds.

Dr. Ford drove slowly homeward. Though it was late a bright light shone from the parlor window as he stopped. The glow of a wood fire illuminated the room as he entered. But no one came to meet him. His wife sat in her rocker fast asleep. The lamp threw a radiance over her bronze-brown hair and one delicate cheek as she slept with her head against the crimson back of the chair. Her face wore a sweet, childlike expression, with a touch of pathos about the lips, and her hands lay closely clasped in the lap of her gown of soft dove color.

Near the fire stood a white draped table holding a tempting little repast, carefully arranged. From a slender glass in the midst hung one red rose. The doctor knew she had cut it for him from her favorite plant. On a pretty plate reposed the flakiest and most delectable of mince pies.

Dr. Ford stooped and kissed his wife's fair cheek reverently. She stirred, then opened her large eyes slowly.

"Oh, you have come. I am sorry I was not awake to meet you. But here's a mince pie. I sent over to your mother for one."

"Hang the pie!" cried John Ford. "Elinor, I am a brute!"

"Oh, no, dear—only a man, instead of an archangel, as I once believed you to be. But never mind. How do you like my dress?"

"It is divine and you are an angel, Elinor. But, dearest, come and sit by me. I have just been to see a gentleman. I want to tell you all about it."—Chicago Journal.

Why She Thought So.

A very pretty young woman entered the editor's room with a delicate flush on her face.

"I suppose you don't care for poetry here, do you?" she inquired.

"No," said the editor, diplomatically, "I can't say we do."

"I guessed as much from the verse you published," she rejoined. And she went out.—Youth's Companion.

The World's Columbian Exposition Illustrated.

For December will be especially interesting to all the citizens of this State. In addition to its usual amount of authentic general World's Fair information, it has a large and beautifully executed engraving of our State Building as it will appear when completed. This engraving alone is worth much more than the cost of the whole copy. It has many large photographs of the members of our State Board, with their complete biographies. This truly great and unexcelled magazine is published simultaneously in English, German, Spanish and French. Price 25 cents a copy. Subscription price, $3.00 for 12 copies. Published semi-monthly in October, 1892. Send $1.50 and receive all the magazines from July, 1892, to January, 1893, 10 in all, which cover one of the most interesting periods in the history of the Exposition. Address J. R Campbell, Pres., 159 and 161 Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

The Grand Rapids Press says: "Ole Olson" drew an audience to the Grand opera house last night that occupied every available space, crowded the boxes and lined the walls. The audience was well pleased, there could be no mistake about that, as the applause was earnest and prolonged. James T. McAlpine, who assumed the title role, scored a success and established himself as a favorite with the patrons of the Grand.

Keep it in the house and it will save you many an anxious moment during the changes of season and weather; we refer to Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, the best remedy for cough and cold.

I have been using Salvation Oil for a lame back, and think it is the best remedy I have ever used. C. E. Durling, 15 Central ave., Lynn, Mass.

"It was taken from me by fours," explained the man who had lost his money at poker.

I've used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in my family for a long while, and wouldn't be without it. I know its a good medicine. John Harrison, Postmaster, Guyton, Effingham Co., Ga.

RUIN ON THE LAKES.

Numerous Vessels Stranded in the Recent Storms.

A Loss of About $200,000 Sustained from the Wrecking of Ships and Cargoes — Three Lives Reported Lost.

MANY WRECKS.

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—The northwest gale of Friday night and Saturday caused great havoc in lake shipping. Three lives were lost and boats worth over $1,000,000 were wrecked. As most of the larger boats can be saved the actual money lost will probably not exceed $200,000. The list of wrecks is:

Schooner Nellie Hammond, wrecked at Muskegon; steamer Tuscarora, stranded at the Lime Kilns; steamer City of Naples, stranded at False Presque Isle; schooner Zach Chandler, missing on Lake Superior; steam barge [illegible], stranded below Cheboygan; two barges of steamer Curtis, missing on Lake Huron; tug Onward, sunk at Traverse City; schooner H. P. Baldwin, ashore near Colchester; schooner Glad Tidings, ashore at Cleveland; steamers Maruba, Pontiac and Ketchum, sunk at Cleveland; schooner Col. Cook, total loss at Cleveland; schooner Jennie Mullen, canvas blown away on Lake Michigan; schooner Commerce, lost canvas on Lake Michigan; schooner Samana, ashore at Cleveland; barges Ketchum, Senator Blood, Republic, Gould, Saginaw, Walbridge, missing on Saginaw bay.

This does not include the score of boats around all the way from Port Huron to the Lime Kilns in St. Clair and Detroit rivers. In the way of money losses the gale has been the most severe in several years.

LOSS OF LIFE.

DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 31.—The great southwestern gale of Friday night left many wrecks along the shores of the lakes and caused the loss of three lives at least. Many people are reported missing and their fate is not yet known. At Manistee, Mich., the schooner Nellie Hammond was sunk by striking a pier while entering the harbor. The captain, Louis Michalisoh, was washed overboard and drowned, the remainder of the crew escaping.

At Sand Beach the waves are coming over the top of the breakwater to the height of 30 feet. An unknown sailor was washed off the main pier in the harbor Saturday morning and drowned. The body has not been recovered yet.

Grave fears are entertained as to the fate of the steam dredge Dominion and its crew. It has been working near Leamington, Ont., for some weeks and Saturday morning disappeared entirely. A search over this part of Lake Erie failed to reveal its whereabouts. It is thought it either sank entirely or was blown across the lake. It had a crew of six men.

The schooner Zach Chandler went ashore Friday 4 miles east of life-saving station No. 12 and is a total wreck. All hands were saved but one man, a Norwegian hailing from Cleveland.

THREE INSTANTLY KILLED.

Fatal Result of an Explosion at a Nitroglycerine Factory—Others Injured.

LIMA, O., Oct. 29.—A nitroglycerine factory, 2 miles south of Lima, exploded with a terrific report at 11 o'clock a. m. The report was heard for 20 miles and the force of the concussion shook buildings and caused the windows to rattle in all parts of the city. Three persons are known to have been killed and two were badly injured. In addition, two teamsters are missing and it is probable that their bodies are in the wreck. The killed are: Andy Schute, who recently came from Bradford, Pa.; Benjamin Dowling, a teamster; Henry Schafnel, watchman. The injured are: William Potter, badly cut and bruised; Tom Matcue, probably fatally injured; Benjamin Dowe, leg blown off.

KILLED HIS FATHER.

A Tennessee Youth Commits a Murder While Resisting a Whip.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 31.—C. M. Baker, district passenger agent of the Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis railroad, was shot and killed by his son Francis, aged 18, at his home in the surburban town of Lonsdale Friday night. The boy gave himself up to the police and said his father was beating him over the head with a heavy stick. He got hold of a shotgun for the purpose of fighting his father, who was drinking, and shot him unintentionally. He also stated that his father was in the habit of abusing the family when drunk.

Valuable Horses Burned.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Oct. 31.—Milo Thomlinson, a well-known horseman, went into his stable near this city Friday night with a shovelful of live coals with which to fumigate the place. A horse kicked him over and fired the barn. Thomlinson barely managed to crawl out and is fatally injured. Six fast running horses were burned, including the well-known racers Memory and Bytom. The horses were valued at $5,000.

A Terrible Tragedy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 31.—James R. Bartlett, one of the survivors of the Jeannette expedition, shot and killed his wife's niece, Lottie Carpenter, in this city, shot his wife in the shoulder and then killed himself. Since his return from the arctic regions Bartlett's mind has been weak.

Portrait of Mrs. Harrison.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 28.—Mrs. Harrison's portrait, to be painted by an artist not yet selected, has been provided for by the Daughters of the American Revolution in Washington and will be sent to adorn the gallery in the white house.

Another Counterfeit.

CHICAGO, Oct. 28.—Capt. Porter, of the United States secret service, says there is abroad one of the nicest two-dollar counterfeits ever executed. The bill is a Hancock certificate of the issue of 1882, check letter D.

Wreck of the Touvre.

LONDON, Oct. 29. — The steamer Touvre, bound for Bayonne, was wrecked at Penmarch, Finisterre, Thursday night. Seventeen persons were drowned. No other details have been received.

The December North American.

The North American Review for December embraces a variety of articles that go far towards a solution of the questions handled and to which the public mind is at this moment directed.

The established policy of the Review is to secure papers from those men upon whose opinion and action the decision of the matters under discussion largely depend. Mr. Gladstone, the Prime Minister of England, has spoken in its columns on the condition of affairs in Ireland, his paper being a reply to the Duke of Argyll, and in the December number the Hon. Arthur James Balfour, Secretary for Ireland, in the Salisbury administration, gives what he claims to be the view of the real majority in Great Britain. His article is entitled The New House of Commons and the Irish Question. The meaning of Papal infallibility is made very clear by the Rev. S. M. Brandi, of the Society of Jesus at Rome, in "When is the Pope [illegible]." He reviews various utterances and decrees of the Pope and points out their distinctions in character. The Governor of Jamaica in Opportunities for Young Men in Jamaica sets forth with some enthusiasm and yet practical detail the business advantages that are afforded by the semewhat neglected island. In view of recent achievements by American-bred horses and the revived interest in fine stock an article in special value is that of Col. Theodore Ayrault Dodge on "The Horse of America."

NEW ROUTE TO THE NORTHWEST

On and after Monday, November 28th 1892, the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan Railway's new car ferry, "Ann Arbor No. 1," will make daily trips between Frankfort, Mich., and Kewaunee, Wis.

This boat will carry freight cars across Lake Michigan, making the trip in 6 hours, so that all freight shipped by this route will be carried through without breaking bulk, as has been necessary heretofore with freight handled across the Lake.

As this is the shortest route to the northwest, it should be well patronized by Michigan shippers.

HOLIDAY RATES.

For Christmas and New Years Holidays, the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan R'y., will sell excursion tickets between all stations on its line at which tickets are sold, also to points on several connecting lines at one and one third fare for the round trip, tickets will be good going Dec. 24th, 25th, 26th, and 31st, and Jan. 1st and 2nd, and good returning until Jan. 3d, inclusive.

IN OLDEN TIMES

People overlooked the importance of permanently beneficial effects and were satisfied with transient action, but now that it is generally known that Syrup of Figs will permanently cure habitual constipation, well-informed people will not buy other laxatives, which act for a time, but finally injure the system.

Wm. McCarthy, 122 E. 8th St., Cincinnati, Ohio, writes: "I used Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup in my family with good results." We recommend it to all heads of families as the best."

Mr. Staylate: Is your sister expecting me to-night? Tommy: I guess so. She's been sleeping all day.

Salvation Oil, the greatest cure on earth for pain, is universally accepted by horsemen and veterinarians as the no plus ultra of liniments.

She: I saw somebody this morning for whom you have great admiration. He: You did, eh? I guess you must have looked in the mirror.

The enormous sale of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup has brought to the surface numerous imitations. Keep a sharp look-out when you buy.

Stiffness in the neck or joints may be instantly relieved by a few applications of Salvation Oil. It is cheap. Safe and reliable. 25 cents.

It is not what its proprietors say but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story of its merit. Hood's Sarsaparilla cures.

"Yes, Harry, I love you, but we can never wed," said the Boston maid with a sigh. "And why?" asked Harry. "You say eether for eyether," and she hid her face on his shoulder and wept.

Diner: Waiter, how long will my omelette be? Waiter: I can't tell exactly, sir, but they average about 9 inches.

Husband (going off on a hunt): I know I'll miss you while I'm away, dearest. Wife: Of course you will. You always miss everything when you are off hunting.

OUR HOLIDAY GREETING.

The old saying is that Christmas comes but once a year, and thanks to the almanac makers and Old Probs it never fails to come at the appointed time. New Years is equally certain to arrive and always puts in an appearance exactly one week after Christmas. The month of December, however, is generally reckoned as the "holiday season" and Thanksgiving Day as the inauguration of it.

With the return of roast turkey, sleigh bells and the fleecy snow, the HERALD is again on deck, to welcome its friends, forgive its enemies, help the needy, encourage the downhearted, wish everybody good luck, advertise liberally and boom business generally. Accordingly we present to our readers this week our usual holiday extra, which will be issued four successive weeks, beginning to-day and ending the Thursday before Christmas. This week's issue of the HERALD, comprising both the regular sheet and the supplement, is a fair representative of the business houses of Tecumseh. Nearly every retail establishment in Tecumseh speaks to the people in some manner through these columns. We doubt whether another town in Michigan, no larger than Tecumseh, can make a better showing, and certainly no town of its size has a better or more enterprising lot of business houses in all lines of retail trade.

Do you read the advertising columns of your home newspaper? If not, you are sadly behind the times. Enterprising merchants are the ones who advertise. They sell the most goods, purchase at better figures, and hence are enabled to sell at lower prices. Everything that man, woman or child needs to wear may be found set forth in these columns. The farmer will know where to purchase his furniture and crockery to the best advantage, the housewife can ascertain where to buy needed articles for herself and the babies, the children can find out where Santa Claus keeps the best assortment of Christmas gifts, and everybody can learn where to buy good goods at rock-bottom prices.

Two things are requisite to produce as good a sheet as the HERALD turns out this week. One essential is advertising patronage. The other is a combination of material and workmanship, which sets forth the advertising messages in the most attractive style. In both of these directions the holiday edition of 1892 will surpass in excellence anything heretofore attempted in Tecumseh. The HERALD is bound to lead the procession in the printing business, no matter what happens. Presidents may come and go, tariffs may be voted up or down, but the "Old Reliable" has come to stay and expects to stay during the present century at least. Within the past year our cases have been replenished with a large amount of new material and the entire office has been thoroughly renovated. It possesses facilities, therefore, much better than ever before, to put up and display all the advertising matter that can be crowded upon it in an attractive shape; and it keeps workmen who are posted in their calling, who know how to use this material to the best advantage.

Not only individually, but collectively, we are gratified to know that Tecumseh is keeping step to the march of progress. The public improvements inaugurated during the past year mark the beginning of a new business era for our beautiful village. Our system of water works, when completed, will place us in the van in manufacturing facilities. All of our manufacturing industries are in a prosperous condition at present, with bright prospects for the future, and we expect to witness the inception of several new enterprises during the coming two years. With good railroad connections, good schools and churches, good water works, a healthy location and solid, enterprising business men, there is no reason why Tecumseh should not take on a new lease of life, become enthused with the typical western fever, and double her population and wealth before the year 1900 arrives on the scene of action. In this good work the HERALD will be found in the thickest of the combat. No business feels the effect of increasing trade sooner than the home newspaper, and no business sooner feels the depression occasioned by hard times. Whatever encourages and fosters the business interests of Tecumseh the HERALD will zealously labor for, knowing that its own material welfare is bound up in the business prosperity of the entire community.

To our numerous and healthy family of patrons, both old and young, large and small, rich and poor, short and tall, including old maids, bachelors and babies, we extend heartiest wishes for a prosperous December, a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Lippincott's Magazine for December

The complete novel in Lippincott's for December, 'Pearce Amerson's Will,' is by Colonel Richard Malcolm Johnston, and will be admitted to be one of his finest productions. It has perhaps less than his usual humor (though Mr. Flint's dealing with his 'jaws,' on page 726, is unsurpassed), but it is a solid and conscientious piece of work, and a most life-like story of middle Georgia in the old days.

In the Journalist Series, Major Moses P. Handy tells how he was present at the surrender of the Virginius, having got ahead of all other special correspondents. Edwin AtLee Barber gives the history of "An Old American China-Manufactory" (that of Tucker and Hemphill, in Philadelphia, from 1825 to 1838), and Floyd B. Wilson describes his researches 'In the French Champagne Country.' These articles are illustrated, as is that of D. P. Heap, U. S. A., on the mode of lighting 'The Statue of Liberty.' 'Paul H. Hayne's Methods of Composition' are recounted by his son, William H. Hayne, with two portraits. Mrs. Bloomfield Moore explains 'Keeley's Present Position,' and tells us that he is searching, not for perpetual motion, but for elements of hydrogen. Francis Preston Fremont, U. S. A., writes briefly of 'Fremont in California.' M. Crofton, in 'Men of the Day,' handles Herbert Spencer, Victorien Sardou, Robert T. Lincoln, and Phillips Brooks. 'As It Seems' talks of Renan, Tennyson, and other matters. There is a short story of California, illustrated, 'An Honest Heathen,' by Ella Sterling Cummins, and a brief prose poem, 'A Life,' by Henry Russell Wray. The verse of the number is by Florence Earle Coates, Gertrude Morton, S. R. Elliott, and Frederick Peterson.

A Woman's Christmas Feast.

Woman has never had her Christmas needs so well anticipated and so completely met as in the Christmas issue of the Ladies' Home Journal, which comes robed in one of the most beautiful and artistic of magazine covers. Of course, the opening chapters of W. D. Howell's new novel, "The Coast of Bohemia," will attract quickest attention, and the five chapters given promise well that this may be the brightest and liveliest story ever written by the novelist. It is for girls and is perfect so far, in its portrayal of American girl-life. The other stories and sketches of the number are of unusual excellence. Eugene Field contributes an exquisite poem and Dr. Talmage gives one of the best articles he has ever penned in telling "Why I Have Never Been Ill." Then comes the wealth of practical Christmas information, which cannot but prove of inestimable value to women in their Christmas buying. Not a point is forgotten—everything is touched upon, the home, the nursery, the parlor, the dining room, the festooned rooms, the gowns, the table, the servants—every phase of Christmas life is fully and admirably covered in a number which must stand as the best and most complete Christmas guide for women ever issued by a magazine, and that, too, at the small price of ten cents, while a yearly subscription is but one dollar per year. The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia, Pa.

The December Forum.

The investigation of the school-room work in the public schools of our principal cities made for the Forum by Dr. J. M. Rice has provoked a volume of comment and correspondence perhaps unequalled in periodical literature. In the December number appears the results of Dr. Rice's investigation of the schools of St. Louis and Indianapolis—St. Louis representing the evil effects of a mechanical supervision, and Indianapolis the beautiful results of some of the best school-room work done in the world, which is described in detail. Confirming the conclusion reached by Dr. Rice, President Eliot, of Harvard University, writes perhaps the best contribution to periodical literature on 'Wherein Popular Education has Failed'—a comprehensive review of our educational work, that is among the most thoughtful productions of this generation. The World's Fair is discussed from two points of view—from one point of view by Mrs. VanRensselaer, the well known writer on art, to show that the Fair is the noblest of all object-lessons in art, by far the most notable spectacle that one may see anywhere on earth or that men have seen since the fall of the Roman empire. Mrs. Van Rensselaer argues that it is the duty of every American man, woman, and child to make any sacrifice to see the Exposition for the sight of it will be an event in any lifetime.

Jaggers (to Dr. Paresis)—You know Dr. Kapsool, I suppose?

Dr. Paresis (coldly)—He's no doctor. Why, sir, he advertises!

Jaggers (half an hour later, to Dr. Kapsool)—By the way, doctor, I was talking to Dr. Molar yesterday, and—

Dr. Kapsool (interrupting)—My dear Jaggers, will you tell me, please, why you dignify Molar with the title "doctor?" Don't you know that he is nothing but a dentist?

Jaggers (next day, to Dr. Molar)—Now, this man on the next street, Dr. Powders—

Dr. Molar (hastily)—"Dr. Powders!" You surely don't mean to apply that dignified prefix "doctor" to an ordinary veterinary surgeon? You were surely joking, Jaggers.

Jaggers (second day after to Dr. Powders)—I was telling you the other day that this sort of weather——

Dr. Powders (with deprecatory gesture)—Don't talk to me about Paresis!—he's no doctor. Why, sir, if I had a yellow dog that was sick I wouldn't trust the case to him. He ought to be a butcher.

United States Senator—Yes; we had to wait an hour for Senator Cameron to come in and move an adjournment.

The Beginning of an Unpleasantness.

"The Scriptural injunction, my dear," said Mr. Carraway as he tried to eat some of his wife's bread, "is, 'Cast your bread on the waters.' I fear this bread was cast in an iron foundry."

Religious "Notes and Queries."

"Do you know what church Senator Buncombe belongs?"

"Presbyterian, I suppose. He believes in the doctoring of election."

A Cool Spot.

There's one cool spot on earth—yes, one,
Oh, could I clutch it to my heart
And all day long just hang upon
The back st p of the iceman's cart!

She Doubted Victoria's Honesty.

Queen Victoria when out walking alone during a stay at Balmoral was caught in the rain, and knocking at the cottage of an old Scotch woman asked for the loan of an umbrella. The old woman stared at her questioner for some little time, but at last, seemingly convinced as to the respectability of her visitor, in a grudging tone replied:

"I hae twa umbrellas. Ane o' them's a gude ane and t'ither's naur as auld a d worthless as mesel'. Ye may tak' the auld ane, but I doobt I'll maybe ne'er see't again."

She then proffered a ragged article, whose whalebone ribs might be seen sticking through the torn cover. Her Majesty took the umbrella, which was better than nothing, and went forth in the rain, not by a word betraying her rank. The next day a servant of the royal household brought the wretched gamp to the old woman, who then became aware as to who she had lent it, and was very much mortified.

"Had I but kent wha it was that asked it the len," she said, "I wad hae made her welcome to the best o' a' I hae i' this warl', and I houp her highness will forgi'e me and no tak' it illaff forme bein' sae scrimpit and onneeborly wi' 'er."

Newspaper advertisements were unknown until 1652.

She'd Been There Before.

Daughter—Where are my rubbers and my waterproof, ma?

Mother—In the up-stairs closet.

Daughter—Did you take my umbrella up there, too?

Mother—Yes.

Daughter—I wish you would send Bridget up garret for my furs.

Mother—Where on earth are you going?

Daughter—I'm going to a garden party.

Might Easily Mistake.

Jack—My goodness! Ring for a messenger boy!

George—What's up?

Jack—That stupid tailor has sent me the baby-blue necktie I ordered for Ethel, and I presume he has sent her my new suit of clothes. I must explain to her at once, or she'll think its the latest fashion, and be out on the street with them.

A Reasonable Request.

First Boy (on bicycle)—Where you goin'?

Second Boy (on a tricycle)—Down to the store for some soap.

"That so? Say, lend me your tricycle an' you take my bicycle, will ye?"

"What for?"

"I'm goin' after eggs."

Not Rightly Named.

First Boy—What sort o' birds is those?

Second Boy—Those are chimney swallows.

First Boy—Get out! Their mouths ain't half big 'nough. I don't believe they can swallow anything bigger than flies.

Prepared for Relatives.

Husband (at dinner)—My! My! This is a regular banquet—worthy of a Delmonico. Finest spread I've seen in an age. What's up? Do you expect company?

Wife—No, but I presume the cook does.

An Unfailing Test.

Foreign Visitor—Is that college a really fine educational institution?

American (proudly)—Is it? I should say it was. They've got the most idiotic college yell to be heard in the whole country, sir—yes, sir.

Aspiration.

Little Girl—I wish I was an angel.

Little Boy—Why?

Little Girl—Then I wouldn't be 'fraid o' ghosts."

A Little Slow.

Good Minister—Do you like to go to church, my boy?

Good Boy—Yessir, but I'd like it better if they didn't sing such tired tunes.

Rather Wiry.

Mrs. Slimdiet—What has made your throat so sore, Mr. Newboarder?

Newboarder—I think it must have been the steak.

Superiority.

Mamma—Why do you put on such airs over that little girl?

Wee Woman—Her mother hasn't got bought teeth like you has.—Street & Smith's Good News.

Hard Usage.

Lady—This coin is worn smooth. The stamp is almost obliterated.

Cashier—Yes, madam; been held pretty tight I imagin' I got it from a New Jersey tax collector.

Doing Their Best.

Boy—Why is you girls always giglin'? Why don't you laugh?

Little Girl—You isn't funny 'nough for that.

The Voice of Experience.

Black N. White—Do you know what that picture represents?

Johnny White—Yes. An artist.

Black N. White—An artist! What makes you think that?

Johnny White—Don't you see what trouble he has to keep the wolf from the door?

Not Unlikely.

Mother—Why aren't you and Georgie as good boys as your little brother?

Young Hopeful—I guess it's 'cause you'd had more experience bringin' up w'en you commenced on him.

Easy to Please.

Tramp—Please, mum I haven't had anything to eat since——

Housekeeper—It's too hot to cook.

Tramp—Well, ice-cream will do.

The New Cunard Steamers.

The Cunard company has decided, it is said, to call the new steamships, building at Fairfield, the Campania and Lucania. Campania and Lucania were the two great southern provinces of ancient Italy, as Umbria and Etruria were the two northern provinces. Campania was the fine province of which Naples was the capital, and included the scenery and rich country down to Pæstum, including Vesuvius, Pompeii, etc., and other favorite ancient and modern watering places; south of that came Lucania, stretching from sea to sea, running up to the highest points of the Apennines.

OUR HUMOR COLUMN.

FUNNY PARAGRAPHS, ORIGINAL AND BORROWED.

Fish Stories Reduced to Scientific Principles—Burlesque on the Weaknesses of Our Modern Society—As Others See Us.

Had Thought of It.

Young Man (who thinks of marrying)—Father, I—er—presume you know—er—the bible says it is not good for a man to be alone?

Rich Old Gentleman (a widower)—Yes. I've been thinking of that. Besides, a boy like you ought to have a mother over him, an' how as I told the widow Dash only yesterday.—Street & Smith's Good News.

Light Work.

Mrs. Riverside Rives—How do you manage without a servant?

Mrs. Upton Flatte—O, I manage to do her work myself.

Mrs. Riverside Rives—But are you not wearing yourself out?

Mrs. Upton Flatte—No; you see I'm not working any harder than she did.

How They Ride.

Tourist—What are all these trains flying past?

Suburban Boy—They is race trains—takin' city folks home from the races, you know.

Tourist—Ah, yes, I see. Quite a number of them have palace cars attached.

Boy—I guess them's for the ones that wins.—Street & Smith's Good News.

Smelt Like It.

Fresh Air Child (near the seashore)—What's that buildin' over there?

Country Boy—That's a fish factory. They catches fishes by the ton an' squashes 'em up into oil.

"What kind of oil?"

"I don't know 'xactly, but ye can smell it a mile off. Guess it mus' be cod-liver oil."

Little Dick's Theory.

Little Dick—Mamma, Mrs. Churchie told me to tell you that Rev. Mr. Soarer, who was charged with heresy, has recanted.

Mamma—Oh, I'm so glad. How did it happen?

Little Dick—Mrs. Churchie didn't say; but I guess maybe the conductors was goin' to charge him full fare.

A Sympathetic Parson.

"What sort of a preacher is Parson Surplus Eel?" asked a newly arrived stranger in a Texas town.

"Oh, he is a very fair preacher."

"Is he a sympathetic preacher?"

"You bet he is. He never attempts to preach without exciting general sympathy—it's such hard work for him to do it."—Texas Siftings.

Couldn't Wait.

Dashaway—After I took Miss Summit home from the theater the other night I wanted to kiss her so much and I think she rather wanted me to but she had her vail on.

Cleverton—Why didn't you ask her to take it off?

Dashaway—Because I wanted to get home in time for breakfast—Cloak Review.

Ye Boston Broker.

Mr. Gotham—And so your father is a stock broker in Boston? Is he a bull, or a bear?

Boston Child—Sir?

Mr. Gotham—Does he deal for a rise or a fall in prices?

Boston Child—Oh! Well, sometimes he's an optimist and sometimes a pessimist.

Plenty of Room.

Howell Gibbon—Now, I tell you, old fellah, I had a pretty close call when I was out West. A bullet from a dwunken cowboy's wevolvah just gwazed the tip of my eah.

Tom Bigbee—You don't call that a close call, do you?

Mamma in a Hole.

Little Dick—This is Saturday, and mamma and papa are goin' to the theater to-night. I'm awfully glad.

Little Dol—Why is you?

Little Dick—'Cause she can't wash me to-night, an' she'll get up so late to-morrow morning she'll have to let me go dirty, or miss church.

A Misfit.

Little Girl—Mamma, I guess these shoes are a mile too big.

Mamma—Why so?

Little Girl—They stopped hurting me the first week.

Hair-Breadth Escape.

Old Gentleman—My, my! What's the matter? Mad dog?

Theatrical Child (breathlessly)—A agent of the S. P. C. C. was after me

A Reformation.

Snodgrass—Jaysmith is lying low these days.

Snively—That is a great change for him.

Snodgrass—What do you mean?

Snively—Generally he is doing some tall lying.—Truth.

Quickly Told.

Friend—What was your graduation essay about?

Mabel—What the astronomers know about Mars.

Friend—Dear me! Why did you choose that subject?

Mabel—Because I did'nt have time to write much.—New York Weekly.

Made a Guess.

Customer (who wants extra high and warm house slippers)—I want something for house wear, warm and comfortable—something neither a slipper nor a shoe.

New Boy—Guess you must mean boots.

A Good Plan.

Housekeeper—No, no, no, I don't want anything. This is the tenth time I've had to say that this morning.

Tramp Peddler—Don't yer want to hire me to stay here an' say it for yer, ma'am?—Harper's Bazar.

Very Few Can.

Algy—There goes the—aw—most intellectual fellah in ouah set.

Cholly—Ah!

Algy—He can distinguish the difference between this year's Derby hat and last year's Derby hat.

Invitations Always Accepted.

Mr. Hopeful (feeling his way)—I am the only one your sister goes to operas and theaters with, am I not?

Her Little Brother—Yep. Mr Nicefello is away, and you're the only one he isn't jealous of.

School Ventilation.

Mamma—Is your new school well ventilated?

Little Girl—Our room isn't, but the room next to ours is.

"How do you know?

"The children in that room all has colds in their heads."

A Great Moral Show.

Boy—Pop, kin I go to the circus?

Pop—Circuses is wicked.

Boy—The man gave me two tickets fer carryin' water fer the horses.

Pop—Um! A man wot's as charitable as that can't be very bad. We'll both go.

A Virtue of Necessity.

Mother—I see you have been playing with that little girl next door again. Have you and she made up?

Small Daughter—N'm, but we haven't anybody else to play with.—Street & Smith's Good News.

A Fish Story.

Miss Birch—Why din n't you come to school this morning?

Billy Fisher—I had to go on an errand.

Miss Birch—But you didn't come this afternoon, either!

Billy Fisher—Oh, well, you see I hain't got back yet.

Seemingly Wise.

It is interesting to see how all the men in a room will laugh and look knowing whenever somebody tells a poker story, even though half of them may not know a jack-pot from a hole in the ground.—Somerville Journal.

Protection Assured.

Stranger—I don't see how you folks get across Broadway without getting hurt?

New York Boy—That,s easy 'nough. Just wait until a pretty girl comes along and then follow her.—Street & Smith's Good Eews.

Dodging the Issue.

Turnpike Walker—Be careful; I think I saw a dog issue from the side gate.

Footso Renweary—In that event, Brother Walker, I think I shall dodge the issue.—Detroit Free Press.

A Man's Olfactories.

Little Girl—Papa is makin' a awful fuss a s sniffin' around the house, and examinin' the drain pipes, an' everything.

Mamma—Mercy me! I must have left my ottar of roses uncorked. Run, get it.

Safely Held.

School Friend—Seems to me you and George have been engaged a good while. Why don't you marry?

Sweet Girl—Oh, there's no hurry, dear. He doesn't care a bit for any one else.

The Worst of It All.

Gorger—There is one thing that always spoils a good dinner.

Brown—What is that?

Gorger—Having to pay for it.—Pick-Me-Up.

It Is Wonderful.

"Here's a lot of interesting and fresh news by cable. Wonderful thing this electricity; can bring news through 3,000 miles of salt water and yet have it fresh."—Pittsburgh Bulletin.

Logic and Love.

Dejected Suitor—If you intended to say "no," why did you let me propose?

Sweet Girl—Why, how could I say "no" if you didn't?—New York Weekly.

WORLD'S FUNNY SIDE.

TIMELY AND OTHER HINTS FROM THE HUMORISTS.

Some Pen and Ink Sketches Calculated to Make You Smile—The Battle of Life Reflected from a Humorous View.

Getting Even.

Westfield—I got even with that mean cad Lawnmo to-day.

Plainfield—That so? How?

Westfield—I pretended to make up with him, and told him to save a seat alongside of him in the train for me. Then I missed the train. As long as he lives everybody in that car will consider him a liar and a hog.

Summer Stoves.

Wife (just in from the kitchen)—Phew! I'm 'most roasted.

Husband—That's queer. I just paid out a lot of money for a patent improved oil stove for you.

Wife—Y-e-s, I know, but if I don't keep all the doors and windows closed, it smokes like a steamship.

Didn't Show Up.

Strawber—Terrible thing about Spindle, wasn't it? The poor fellow didn't turn up at his own wedding.

Mrs. Strawber—Heavens! What was the matter?

Strawber—He was fool enough to put off the ushers' dinner until the night before the wedding day.

No Language.

Mrs. De Shrew—Do you believe, professor, that animals can talk to one another?

Professor—Pigeons can't.

"Are you sure?"

"Yes. Pigeons mate but once. They never get divorced."

A Musical Instrument.

Tin Peddler (who has met with an accident)—What vill I do now? Effery wheel off my wagon is broke.

Summer Boarder (consolingly)—Leave the tins in the wagon just as it is and perhaps you can sell it to one of the boarding-house keepers for a piano.

Prepared for Relatives.

Husband (at dinner)—My! my! This is a regular banquet—worthy of a Delmonico. Finest spread I've seen in an age. What's up? Do you expect company?

Wife—No, but I presume the cook does.

Modern Realism.

Mrs. Podds—Is that a realistic novel you are reading?

Mrs. Bobbs—Indeed it is. It contains a perfect description of the bacillus of yellow fever, and tells how to make apple dumplings.

Perils of Poverty.

Friend—What is that big black spot on the ceiling?

Host—I am a poor man, and can't afford to employ an engineer to run a new patent parlor-lamp I bought.

An Unfailing Test.

Foreign Visitor—Is that college a really fine educational institution?

American (proudly)—Is it? I should say it was. They've got the most idiotic college yell to be heard in the whole country, sir—yes, sir

An Unfortunate Edict.

Mrs. Clooney—It's th' shmall bit yure man sames t' be injiyin' th' avenin', Mrs. O'Teague.

Mrs. O'Teague—It's revinge Oi'm havin', Mrs. Clooney. He wor afther objictin' till me dichollytee cor-rdage, an' Oi med him lind me th' loan av his galluses fer t' shatishfy his dacency.

A Base Slander.

Winks—Folks say you always leave immediately after the sermon, so as to escape the contribution box.

Jinks (hotly)—It's a base slander! The only reason I start so early is simply to get first pick of the umbrellas.

A Considerate Corporation.

Irate Passenger (who has managed to board a car that didn't stop)—Say, suppose I'd slipped and lost a leg, then what?

Conductor (kindly)—You wouldn't have to do any more jumpin' then. We allers stops for a man with a cork.

Might Easily Mistake.

Jack—My goodness! Ring for a messenger boy!

George—What's up?

Jack—That stupid tailor has sent me the baby-blue necktie I ordered for Ethel, and I presume he has sent her my new suit of clothes. I must explain to her at once, or she'll think it's the latest fashion, and be out on the street with them.

Rare Luck.

Mrs. Bloomer—It's shameful! Mr. Silentt, who is deaf and dumb, is going to marry Miss Quiett, and she's deaf and dumb.

Mr. B.—What of it?

"Why, just think. Their children may deaf and dumb too."

"That's all right. We'll watch where they settle, and move in next door to 'em."

Life in the Suburbs.

Mr. Suburb—Haven't you a dog to protect your house from tramps?

Mr. Lawnmo—Yes.

"Then why do you walk around every night with a gun?"

"O, I'm not protecting the house. I'm only protecting the dog."

Plenty of Similarity.

Old Lady—I'm almost afraid to ride in these new-fangled cable cars.

Conductor—All you need do is to shut your eyes, mum, and every time the cable gets stuck you kin imagine you're ridin' behind an old-fashioned balky mule team.

High Pressure Civilization.

Stranger—I don't see how an old man can get around New York without being run over.

New Yorker—By the time a man gets old in New York, he's rich enough to have a carriage, or else he's in the lunatic asylum.

Causes of Gout.

Rich Patient—What is the cause of gout, doctor?

Doctor—Excessive eating and drinking will produce gout. Mental worry will also cause it.

Patient—My, my! Well, I must stop worrying over my excessive eating and drinking.

Making Sure.

First Lady (off for a journey)—I hope we've got the right train.

Second Lady—I asked seventeen trainmen and ninety-three passengers if this train went to Blankville and they all said yes, so I guess we're all right.

A Successful Engagement.

Mr. Stormer Barnes—What means this well-fed appearance, Holmes? I thought the "Lucullus" company went to pieces.

Mr. Walker Holmes—It did, at last, my boy—but we had real food in the banquet scene, all the season!

Next Thing to It.

Daughter—It's just too mean for anything. We've never been to Europe yet.

Father—Never mind, my dear. I'll get some steamer labels to paste on your trunks, and then we'll go to Saratoga.

Takes Time.

Jobson—I have a claim against the government. What lawyer would you advise me to retain?

Friend—It doesn't matter whom you select, only so he's young.

Liked Politics.

Boutton—What a rank partisan Mr. Voteoft is!

Upton—I should say so. He goes to the Rev. Dr. Livetopic's church every Sunday.

Hard Usage.

Lady—This coin is worn smooth. The stamp is almost obliterated.

Cashier—Yes, madam; been held pretty tight I imagine. I got it from a New Jersey tax collector.

Not Unlikely.

Mr. Jimson—What? Is Bilson going to get married? He told me positively he would never marry again.

Mrs. Jimson (calmly)—I presume you asked him on the way to the funeral.

Hard on the Dogs.

First Dog—We'll be tied up every Thursday and Saturday nights now.

Second Dog—What up?

First Dog—That new dude that comes to see Miss Susie has money.

Thoroughly Modern.

Visitor—Is this an old homestead or a modern imitation of antiquity?

Tenant—Oh, it's new, brand-new. The roof leaks in forty places.

Boston's Climate.

Traveler—Boston is so far north that I presume you do not have very hot weather there.

Honest Bostonian—Um—er—only in summer.

CARD OF THANKS.

To the many kind friends who assisted us during the illness and death of our darling Gracie we tender our sincere thanks.

MR. AND MRS. S. P. SMITH.

Words fail to express our heartfelt gratitude to the kind neighbors and friends for their assistance during the sickness and death of our husband and father; also to the friends who sang at the funeral services.

MRS. BENJ. BEEVERS AND FAMILY.

NEW ROUTE TO THE NORTHWEST

On and after Monday, November 28th 1892, the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan Railway's new car ferry, "Ann Arbor No. 1," will make daily trips between Frankfort, Mich., and Kewaunee, Wis.

This boat will carry freight cars across Lake Michigan, making the trip in 6 hours, so that all freight shipped by this route will be carried through without breaking bulk, as has been necessary heretofore with freight handled across the Lake.

As this is the shortest route to the northwest, it should be well patronized by Michigan shippers.

HOLIDAY RATES.

For Christmas and New Years Holidays, the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan R'y., will sell excursion tickets between all stations on its line at which tickets are sold, also to points on several connecting lines at one and one third fare for the round trip, tickets will be good going Dec. 24th, 25th, 26th, and 31st, and Jan. 1st and 2nd, and good returning until Jan. 3d, inclusive.

Cleveland's Cabinet.

Politicians are already figuring on the personnel of President-elect Cleveland's Cabinet. Although Michigan did not give him her entire electoral vote, it is loudly whispered that a place will be given one of her most distinguished sons and that he will travel on one of the new 1,000-mile family tickets issued by the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan Ry. They are good for the purchaser and members of his family and are now on sale at all ticket offices of the Company. Price $20.00.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

The December Cosmopolitan.

In view of the fact that Sir Edwin Arnold will very likely be the next poet-laureate, one turns with interest to his most entertaining article in the December Cosmopolitan on a "Japanese Watering Place." The same number contains seven portraits of Tennyson and interesting views of his late home and surroundings. A feature of the number is twenty-four portraits of Parisian journalists, with sketches of their work. The Cosmopolitan will mark its first edition of 150,000 copies—that for January—by the offer of 1,000 free scholarships. In return for introducing the Cosmopolitan into certain neighborhoods the Cosmopolitan offers to any young man or woman free tuition at Yale, Vassar, Harvard, or any of the leading colleges, schools of art, music, medicine or science. They send out a pamphlet on application telling how to obtain one of these free scholarships.

SPRINGVILLE SIFTINGS.

Postoffice aspirants are already in the field.

The ladies of the Methodist church held a pleasant social at Mrs. Carrie Rogers' Nov. 30.

The Lake mills have been undergoing extensive repairs and are doing a prosperous business, notwithstanding the fact that the products of the Clinton mills are almost daily drawn into the township for sale and exchange.

The northerers have been greatly exercised the past week over the advent in their midst of a gentlemanly tramp, giving his residence as Bean City. The offence committed by the stranger was the begging of a dinner at three consecutive residences, for which offence he was finally captured by a motley assemblage of dogs, men, clubs, boys and guns, arrested and sent to jail. That vicinage is now resting easier.

The Cambridge S. S. Institute held at Springville last Saturday was not well attended but made up in enthusiasm for lack of numbers. The Junction school submitted no report. The Onsted, Springville and Prospect Hill schools reported no new memberships. The opinion of most of the members of the Institute was that new methods of entertaining the children must be devised in order to continue to hold their attendance. The reproach cast upon the Catholic portion of our community seemed to be ill-timed and useless. We doubt if any denomination in the township can show so marked an increase in membership and intellectual development for the last ten years as the Roman Catholic. The recitation by Veda Groger merited special mention.

The Farmers' Club meeting was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Stafford, Saturday, Dec. 3, at 10 a. m. The following program was presented:

The December North American.

The North American Review for December embraces a variety of articles that go far towards a solution of the questions handled and to which the public mind is at this moment directed.

The established policy of the Review is to secure papers from those men upon whose opinion and action the decision of the matters under discussion largely depend. Mr. Gladstone, the Prime Minister of England, has spoken in its columns on the condition of affairs in Ireland, his paper being a reply to the Duke of Argyll, and in the December number the Hon. Arthur James Balfour Secretary for Ireland in the Salisbury administration, gives what he claims to be the view of the real majority in Great Britain. His article is entitled The New House of Commons and the Irish Question. The meaning of Papal infallibility is made very clear by the Rev. S. M. Brandi, of the Society of Jesus at Rome, in "When is the Pope Infallible?" He reviews various utterances and decrees of the Pope and points out their distinctions in character. The Governor of Jamaica in Opportunities for Young Men in Jamaica sets forth with some enthusiasm and yet practical detail the business advantages that are afforded by the somewhat neglected island. In view of recent achievements by American-bred horses and the revived interest in fine stock an article in special value is that of Col. Theodore Ayrault Dodge on "The Horse of America."

Lenawee County Teachers' Association.

There will be a meeting of the Lenawee County Teachers' Association at Blissfield on Saturday, Dec. 17th, 1892.

A suitable program is being arranged and there is every reason to believe the meeting will be a pleasant one. Prof. H. R. Pattengill, of Lansing, has been invited to attend and deliver an address.

All teachers in Lenawee county are cordially invited to attend this meeting.

The World's Columbian Exposition Illustrated.

For December will be especially interesting to all the citizens of this State. In addition to its usual amount of authentic general World's Fair information, it has a large and beautifully executed engraving of our State Building as it will appear when completed. This engraving alone is worth much more than the cost of the whole copy. It has many large photographs of the members of our State Board, with their complete biographies. This truly great and unexcelled magazine is published simultaneously in English, German, Spanish and French. Price 25 cents a copy. Subscription price, $3.00 for 12 copies. Published semi-monthly in October, 1892. Send $1.50 and receive all the magazines from July, 1892, to January, 1893, 10 in all, which cover one of the most interesting periods in the history of the Exposition. Address J. B. Campbell, Pres., 159 and 161 Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

LATEST ABOUT THE FAILURE.

A turn of affairs has taken place at Toledo, which throws a flood of light upon the true inwardness of the Bills & Koch failure. This suit however may provoke litigation, and hence may delay the opening of the Tecumseh bank.

Two suits affecting the defunct lumber firm of Bills & Koch have been filed in the Court of Common Pleas at Toledo. One was brought by the First National bank of Toledo against Bills & Koch, Edward F. Loud and others.

The petition says the bank loaned the firm $12, 800. The bank contends that on Nov. 24, Edward Koch, without knowledge or consent of Oscar P. Bills, executed a paper pretending to be a bill of sale of all the property of the firm of Bills & Koch to the defendant, Edward F. Loud, that Loud, is believed to be a brother-in-law of Koch; that Koch and Loud complained that the pretended transfer was made to Loud for the purpose of securing to him an alleged indebtedness of $68,000 due from the firm; that the firm owes Loud $68,000; that the pretended bill of sale was executed and consummated for the purpose of enabling Bills & Koch to hinder, cheat and defraud their creditors; that the pretended bill of sale and transfer was fraudulent and void and that Loud holds the property in secret trust for the use and benefit of Koch.

The plaintiff asks for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of and manage the property under the direction of the court and that the pretended bill of sale be held fraudulent and void and set aside.

The Nelson-Barber company, for 20 years dealers in grain and general produce at Ithaca, have been forced to the wall by the failure of Church, Bills & Co. The corporation has given a first mortgage on all its stock, fixtures, tools and property except book accounts, to William E. Winton of Ithaca, as trustee to secure payments aggregating $6,000 for money, grain, etc. A chattel mortgage has been executed on all goods and property to secure general creditors. The trustee has taken possession of all stores, warehouses, etc., belonging to the corporation under his mortages.

AUCTION SALE.

John Squiers, will sell at public auction on the old Wickwire Farm, 1-2 mile west and 1-2 mile north of Holloway village, on Thursday, Dec., 15th, 1892, at 1 o'clock sharp, the following property: 4 cows, 14 ewes, 12 lambs, 1 suckling colt, 14 tons of hay, 1500 bundles of cornstalks, 600 bushels of corn in the ear, 14 acres of wheat in the ground, 1 spring wagon, 1 horse buggy, 1 Buckeye mower, 2 plows, 2 stoves and other utensils too numerous to mention. McKINLEY WAGE ADVANCES.

They Are in Fact Wage Reductions—The Latest McKinley Industry Consists of Manufacturing Campaign Material Out of Whole Cloth.

The New York Tariff Reform club has compiled a list of about five hundred wage reductions which have occurred in protected industries since the McKinley tariff act began to boom business and raise wages. The protectionists last spring thought it time to begin to demonstrate the good effect upon wages of their panacea for all ills, and they published what purported to be a list of twenty-seven protected firms which have raised wages since October, 1890. The American Economist has published this same list several times and refers to it nearly every week with pride. It has been copied and recopied in thousands of republican papers.

Economist had criticised the list of five hundred wage reductions because there apeared to be a few repetitions of items, and because some of the reductions had occurred in industries and states where statistics indicated that on the whole average wages had not declined since 1890, the reform club concluded to see if the protectionist list was all genuine.

It sent a man over into Brooklyn to inquire into the general advance of five per cent. credited to the Kings County Knitting Co. After a long hunt the firm was located on the top floor of a building in a remote part of the city. The employes consisted of three men and from ten to fifteen girls. The first person met was the employer, who failed to remember anything about the said "general advance" until reminded of the American Economist article. But even this stimulus to the memory could not make the three factory girls who were interviewed recall a time when their wages had been advanced; they could, however, easily remember times when they were earning more than now.

The club has since continued its investigation. It sent another man to Oriskany Falls, N. Y., where Langley & Davis had advanced wages 25 and 50 cents a day—so it was alleged. It was learned that this firm makes skirts for ladies dresses, and that they employ 15 hands—7 weavers, 4 carders, 2 spinners, 1 dyer and 1 finisher. The boss weaver's wages were advanced last spring from $2 to $2.25 per day, to keep him from going to other mills. The others in his department (five women and one man) were reduced last June from 4½ to 4 cents per cut for weaving. They were then earning about $1 per day, though their average for last winter did not exceed 60 cents. The boss carder was also advanced from $2 to $2.25 for the same reason. One of the young men in his department had his wages raised last May from $4.50 to $5 per week because he was likely to get the "spring fever" and leave. The company thought it better to retain a man who had been with them through the winter at $5 rather than to break in a new man. The finishers' wages were reduced last spring from $1.50 to $1.25 per day. The wages of the other employes have not suffered from "McKinley" advances, but remained stationery—from 50 cents to one dollar or more per day.

Two other firms visited were those of Wilkins & Close, and Close, & Christie, glove manufacturers at Mayfield, N. Y. Mr. Wilkins said that he had read the report that wages had been advanced from 15 to 25 per cent. in his factory, but that he did not know how such a statement had gotten into print, as there was really no basis for it. He said that they employed 100 men and twenty-five girls in their glove and leather dressing factories, and that wages were no higher than for several years pretious. They take on thirty or forty new hands a year from the farms round about. These hands are paid seventy-five cents a day for the first month; then one dollar for some time, and if they become proficient their wages are advanced to $1.25. Mr. Wilkins said: "There has been no more advance this year with us, or anywhere in the county (Fulton county, N. Y., which produces two-thirds of our glove product) than has been customary for seven or eight years. The McKinley bill has had no material effect on business. Five-sixths of our gloves go west, and the demand for them depends on the crops and the weather. A warm winter and short crops will lower wages, and a cold winter and good crops will raise them slightly."

The situation at the factory of Close & Cristie, just across the street, was about the same.

The factory of Alfred Dolge, of Dolgeville, N. Y., was also visited. The report said that wages had been advanced 20 per cent. here. Dolge manufactures piano felts, sounding boards, cases and other piano supplies. He also makes felt shoes and slippers. He employs altogether nearly 300 persons. It is the custom at Dolgeville to hold an annual reunion. At such time Mr. Dolge, the paternal proprietor of the place, makes an address and announces the promotions and advances in wages to be made for the ensuing year. The employes, who have been earning what may be regarded as apprenticeship wages, and some of the older employes, who have served their employer most faithfully, expect to have their wages advanced at this time. It is Dolge's boast that in this way he stimulates his employes to do their best. Twenty or twenty-five, who have worked hard and over-earned their old wages of perhaps $1.25 or $1.37½ per day, usually get an advance of about one shilling. Many others are disappointed, but Dolge gives them hope by telling them that if they do their full duty their turn will come next. At the reunion in February, 1891, between 40 and 50 had their wages advanced a shilling each, and the hours of labor were reduced from 10 to 9½ with the promise (the supply of promises is never short) that if the employes accomplished as much in 9½ hours as they formerly had in 10, the hours would be further reduced to 9 at the next annual reunion. This advance in wages was slightly more than usual. It may be accounted for by knowing that Dolge by a gross misrepresentation of facts, had been successful in 1890 in having the duty on piano felts increased from between 60 and 70 to an average of about 100 per cent. Dolge already had a monopoly of American made felt and this would cut off much of the foreign competition. Besides, he had from a free trader in 1882-3, become a most ardent protectionist and had told his employes in his speeches that higher duties meant higher wages. The men intended to take him at his word. In the next place Dolge had been figuring to get the republican nomination for congress in his district, and he knew the value of such a move in politics. Then, also, he appreciated the advertising that his business would get through republican editors who were scanning the political and industrial horizon to find a case of higher duties followed by higher wages. It is also said by the very best judges, both in and out of his factory, that he is making at least 100 per cent. clear profit on his felts, which he sells for about $4 per pound. If he had not made advances in wages, his own employes might have exposed his greed and the falsity of his promises. He has gotten thousands of dollars' worth of advertising and has had his vanity tickled by having his personality and his business described in nearly every republican paper in the land; but up to date he has not captured the nomination for congress. He is, however, on the New York Tribune's list of millionaires and, as he has made his money during the last twenty years, his prospects are good. His standing with the republican party is now so good that from ten to twenty girls are kept busy addressing wrappers for the New York state republican committee, in which to mail copies of the Dolgeville Herald. This paper keeps the public posted about Dolgeville and tells of the American terne plate roofs being put on by Dolge. Competent judges say that he could get as good imported roofing terne for $10.50 per box as he now gets for $16.50. But there is another side to this case. No wage advances occurred at Dolgeville this year. Some of those who expected advances have been greatly disappointed and have asked for them. Moreover the hours of labor have not been reduced to nine, though Dolge admitted in his speech that as much or even more work had been done per hand than in former years. Nor have the changes in wages during the last few years always been advances. Four years ago common laborers in Dolge's employ received $1.50 per day; they now get but $1.25. The price for hauling lumber to Little Falls has been reduced from $1.50 per thousand to $1.00; and for coal from 10 to 8 cents per 100 pounds. These reductions affect at least 50 or 60 employes in and out of the factory. During the last year the price for covering and trimming piano hammers has been reduced from 23 and 9 cents respectively to 18 and 8 cents per set. Three years ago the felt shoe makers got 35 cents per pair; they get 30 cents now. The girls in the shoe department and many others throughout the mill have also had their wages reduced.

Reports said that wages had been advanced 15 per cent. at the Hawthorn mills, at Glenville, Conn. These mills employ 210 or 245 hands—about 175 in in the woolen department where suitings, cheviots, etc., are made, and 30 or 40 in the felt department, where polishing felts are produced. Some of the employes interviewed had not heard of the campaign wage advance report. When shown it they were quick to denounce it as a lie, and began to tell of the numerous reductions of the last year. One employe said: "If I had known you were going to be here I could have prepared a list of reductions a yard long." In the woolen department 80 men—all Hungarians, Poles, Russian Jews, Swedes and Danes, except 6 or 8 Germans—had their wages reduced in June, 1892, from $1 to $1.15 per day to 90 cents and $1. In the dye room 10 men, all Poles, were reduced from $1 to 90 cents, and Manager Hunt has since told the boss dyer not to pay over 80 cents per day. The men at first refused to accept these wages, but are now back at work. In the felt department all are foreigners (same class as above). During Cleveland's administration they got $1.15 a day. They have for over three years been receiving but $1 per day. In the weave room 65 weavers (mostly women) make about $1.50 a day when they do not have to wait for filling, warp, etc., but their average for the year is only about $1. Last fall when nearly half of the looms (67 in all) were running on a certain class of goods, the manager announced that he would have to reduce the price of weaving from 5.2 cents per yard to 3½ cents or he could not compete with another mill making this same class of goods. The reduction was made. In the finishing room about 15 women and girls "burl" and "speck" cloth for 90 cents a day of ten hours.

These reports embrace six of the twenty-seven cases of "wage advances" attributed to McKinleyism. It is now the intention of the reform club to investigate and report on all. If there has been a case in a protected industry where wages have been advanced, and the advance is not due to the demands of a strong labor union, or where the members of the firm are not in politics and are not writing articles for republican magazines or papers, the club will not hesitate to give full credit to the firm that does business upon such philanthropic principles, and the protectionists will then have some genuine campaign material, which apparently is very scarce at present, or they would not be compelled to establish the "McKinley industry" of manufacturing "wage advances" out of reductions. This industry is likely to flourish exceedingly until next November, and we may expect to see this list of "wage advances" paraded about until the end of election and to continue to read republican editorials on "campaign lies" about prices and wages.

THE MAIL SERVICE.

Annual Reports of the Postmaster General's Assistants.

Over 4,000 New Post Offices Have Been Established During the Year—Improvement in the Service—The Dead Letter Bureau.

NEW POST OFFICES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The annual report of Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Rathbone shows that the number of establishments of new post offices during the past year was 4,105, a greater number than during any previous year with the exception of 1890, when it was 4,427. The net increase of post offices over the year ended June 30, 1891, was 2,799, and the year closed with 67,210 as the whole number of post offices in the United States. Of the number referred to above, over one-fourth were made in the six states of Arkansas, Texas, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia and North Carolina, the number in these states aggregating 1,118. The greatest increase in any state was in Georgia, where it was 220. Texas was next with 211, Pennsylvania followed with 201 establishments. At the close of the fiscal year there were thirteen states in each of which there were more than 2,000 post offices in operation. Of these five are northern and eight are southern states. The northern states are New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana, with an aggregate of 16,288 offices. The eight southern states are Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Missouri, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia, with an aggregate of 19,906. The greatest number in any one state was 4,842 in Pennsylvania, 3,565 in New York and 3,229 in Ohio. These are the only states where the number of offices was more than 3,000.

THE SERVICE IMPROVED.

The annual report of Chief Post Office Inspector Wheeler shows that the total number of arrests made for all kinds of offenses during the year was 1,384. Of this number only 231 were postal employes. Of the cases tried 373 resulted in conviction, while only sixty-one resulted in acquittal. The number of burglars of post offices arrested was 203, as against 178 last year; 1,108 post offices were reported to have been entered during the year. There were only 6,029 complaints of all kinds received during the year, which is 877 less than last year.

DEAD LETTER BUREAU.

The annual report of D. P. Leibhardt, superintendent of the dead letter bureau, post office department, shows that there were 5,520,788 domestic mailable letters received, a decrease of 71,765 as compared with the previous year. There were 557,643 domestic unmailable letters received, of which 964 contained unmailable articles, 95,449 were held for postage, 449,914 were misdirected, 32,612 were wholly without address and 2,677 were of a miscellaneous character.

COLUMBIAN STAMPS.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Postmaster General Wanamaker in his forthcoming report will devote considerable space to a description of the Columbian postage stamps to be issued at the beginning of the new year. All the popular denominations, such as ones, twos, fives and tens, will be illustrated from noted paintings descriptive of familiar scenes in the life of the great explorer, and the art galleries of the United States and Europe have been ransacked with this end in view.

Dr. Scott's Remains Interred.

WASHINGTON, Pa Dec. 3.—The remains of the late Rev. Dr. Scott were interred at the Washington cemetery at 11:15 o'clock a. m. Friday. The funeral party consisted of President Harrison, Mrs. McKee, Postmaster General Wanamaker, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Haarrison, Lieut. and Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Demmick, and Rev. Dr. Hamlin. The entire funeral was an unusually quiet one and without the slightest ostentation. Immediately after the services the president and party left for Washington.

The Life-Saving Service.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The annual report of Superintendent Kimball, of the life-saving service, shows that there were 242 lives saved last year, 181 on the Atlantic and forty-eight on the lakes, and twenty were drowned. The total wrecks numbered sixty, the loss being $5,673,510.

A Famous Church Burned.

VIENNA, Dec. 2.—The famous church of St. Michael, erected in 1221, and visited by tourists from all parts of the world, was destroyed by fire yesterday. The church contained many tombstones from the sixteenth to the eighteenth centuries which were badly damaged by the flames.

The Tide Turning.

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.—For many months a comparison of outgoing and incoming steerage passengers has shown the arrivals greatly in excess of the departures, but now the tide is turned the other way and the departures are in excess by the thousands daily.

Bank Clearings.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—In the United States the leading clearing houses reported exchanges of $1,382,257,350 during the last seven days against $1,108,600,045 the previous seven days. As compared with the corresponding week of 1891 the increase was 3.3.

Bagley Pleads Not Guilty.

DAVENPORT, Ia., Dec. 4.—George I. Bagley, the United States express messenger who appropriated a package of money containing $100,000, November 18, and afterward restored it, was arraigned in the district court and entered a plea of not guilty.

Chinese Boys May Come Here.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The treasury department has decided that a Chinese boy may enter the United States for the purpose of receiving an education, provided he has the permission of his own government to visit the United States.

CATARRH CANNOT BE CURED.

with local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. It is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Props., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c.

Catarrh, Heart Failure, Paralysis of the Throat

"I Thank God and Hood's Sarsaparilla for Perfect Health."

"Gentlemen: For the benefit of suffering humanity I wish to state a few facts: For several years I have suffered from catarrh and heart failure, getting so bad I could not work and

Could Scarcely Walk

I had a very bad spell of paralysis of the throat some time ago. My throat seemed closed and I could not swallow. The doctors said it was caused by heart failure, and gave medicine, which I took according to directions, but it did not seem to do me any good. My wife urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, telling me of Mr. Joseph C. Smith, who had been

At Death's Door

but was entirely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. After talking with Mr. Smith, I concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. When I had taken two bottles, I felt very much better. I have continued taking it, and am now feeling excellent. I thank God, and

Hood's Sarsaparilla

and my wife for my restoration to perfect health." HARVEY HEED, Laceyville, O.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

Titles to Land.

What are land titles? Not what the civil government declares them to be, but what can they be by the laws of nature? What do they imply where construed to conform to the order of things which nature, or the God of nature, has established? All titles are from the civil government and have no higher sanction. What can the state grant in the nature of things? Can it grant what is not susceptible of being granted and the grantee is not capable of being invested with—what is not in the power of community to bestow? Government is only the representative of the people and can confer no interest in lands but what rests in the people—in mankind at large. But what is that the earth, what power has he? What can he do with land but to occupy it, use it, and leave it to others to use? What is land capable of, so far as man is concerned, but to be used in the supply of human wants. Man did not create the lands; he can not remove them; he can not consume them nor destroy one particle of them. It is the doctrine of the special creationists that God created the lands and gave or granted them in his bounty to all men in common. But this is inaccurate and illogical so far as it implies any vestiture in the lands by the Creator.

If God created the earth there is no warrant for the assumption that he has made any grant or conveyance of it to any man or men. The earth, it is believed, was either created by God or was developed in the order of nature, or has existed eternally. But it is nonsense to speculate as to the origin of things. What we know is that the earth is, and that man is placed upon it with no power to exist apart from it, with wants and needs which can only be supplied from it by his labor. He is but a part of the earth; arose from it and in a short time passes into it. It is preposterous that he who is but a product of the soil should own it or should be able to make a title to anything but its use. The products of industry, what we call personal property, by a law of nature belonging to the producer, because he created them and thereby originated the title in himself, and he has title against all the world by the same right he has to his own person. But instead of man creating the earth, or any foot of the land of which it is composed, the visible facts are that the earth, which is a part of the infinite, created him. Our reason, which is our highest guide, must conform to facts. "What can we reason but from what we know." It is a travesty upon every known standard of ethical reason that any man or number of men can own as private property any part of the earth to the exclusion of all others, for if they can, then they can own the whole and exclude all the balance which is the ad absurdum; and moreover all men are equal in the right to the usufruct. Nature has created no special privileges; but the power of community to regulate the use among the members is plain. Men are created as individuals, and as individuals they must have the use of land; they can not exist a moment without it, and so society, acting upon its power to regulate, does through its governments, parcel out the land to individuals and execute titles thereto. Now the foregoing ideas have been abundantly asserted, and elucidated by writers abler than myself; but what I wish to assert is that such titles, no matter what they purport in themselves, are nothing but the assurance of the community, through the pledge of the government, securing the use and only the use of separate parcels of the earth to the grantees and their assigns. This is the utmost effect any titles can have. But if community can regulate the distribution of lands to private use, of course it can do so upon any conditions or terms necessary to the cause of equal justice to all, and so under the present system of conveyancing, the community does in all cases reserve the right of what is called eminent domain, and the right of taxation which in case of necessity is unlimited. What is this but the right of the community, the body politic, to assert its sovereign power of control whenever the exigencies of the public demand it? And this is utterly inconsistent with private property in lands. But the grant of the public to private use can in no proper sense convey or vest in the holder the right to the "unearned increment"—i. e., the value which the growth of the community and surrounding population gives to land. For this value is a thing apart from its use, and accrues as much to vacant as to improved land. It is separate from any use or improvement which can be made of the land; and, moreover, it has no existence at the genesis of any title, but is altogether prospective—to be realized in the future, and accrues from an outside source—from the community at large, and of right continuous in the community.

It is true, this accruing increase in value depends upon the demand for the lands for use, but the demand itself is from the community, and from no part of the usufruct of the land. It is, therefore, a violation of the laws of nature, and of natural reason to hold that any title which the community or the government can make or does make, includes the right to this "unearned increment." Under any kind of title it remains the property of the community, and the community or government can appropriate it by taxation. That the right of eminent domain and of taxation is impliedly reserved under all titles is a proof of this position.

Now to apply the single tax principles, there is nothing in which the popular mind is more confused than as to how the single tax is to operate. It is believed that because we hold that by the laws of nature there can be no absolute ownership of lands, that titles are to be set aside, and community is to assume control and hold all lands in common or divide them out again, or something of the kind. I need not say that we design nothing of the kind. We propose that all holders of lands shall remain secure in their lands precisely as they hold them now, and merely to take, by way of the admitted right of taxation, that which belongs to the community, which never has and never can pass by any proper construction of any conveyance, viz., the "unearned increment," or, which is the same thing, the annual rental value of the lands independent of improvements. The present system of titles will remain the same as now: men will buy and sell lands the same as now; all men who want lands for their use to make a living upon will buy the same as now and be secure as now in the usufruct, and all men with capital will be at liberty to buy wild lands and hold them vacant the same as now if they choose to do so; but, as the "unearned increment," the rental value in each year will go to the government instead of the paper title holder, no one will buy or hold lands at all unless he wants them for the usufruct. Capital will never be invested where it is a foregone conclusion that it can make no gain, and all mere paper title holders will make haste to dispose of their vacant lands or put them to use, for which purpose alone community is authorized to distribute lands to private parties. Of all human institutions there is none so completely the work of human folly—so far-reaching in the work of enslaving mankind, so completely the cause of the division of society into the idle rich and industrious poor as that which resigns to private capitalists the enormous sums which accrue to the value of lands from the growth of community. I say resigns, for there is and can be no consideration for such a bonus. It is simply to voluntarily place the lives and liberties of the people in the keeping of land holders or landlords, for the lives and liberties of all are directly or indirectly dependent upon the fruits of the land. I shall not dilate upon the evil consequences of the system to be remedied by the single tax; for, after the powerful works of Mr. George and other writers in that branch of the subject, it would be superfluous. What I wish to accentuate is, that no proper construction of human titles can convey to any holder more than the usufruct of lands, which is all that man or society has or ever can have to grant. And to take the value which accrues to all lands from the growth of community for the support of government in lieu of all other taxation, involves no sacrifice of private rights or violation of social obligations.

Harriet Martineau's Prediction.

Harriet Martineau, probably the greatest woman England has produced in this century in intellectual power, in moral conviction and as a writer of history, political economy, fiction, travels and philosophy, at the close of her autobiography, written when her writing days were well nigh over, says:

I now expect, as I have anticipated for many years, a war in Europe which may outlast even the century, with occasional lulls; and I suppose the result must be, after a dreary chaotic interval, a discarding of the existing worn-out methods of government, and probably the establishment of society under a wholly new idea. Of course none but a prophet could be expected to declare what that new idea will be. It would be rational, but it is not necessary here to foretell what it would not be or include. But all that I feel called on to say now, when I am not writing a political essay, is that the leading feature of any such radical change must be a deep modification of the institution of property—certainly in regard to land, and probably in regard to much else. Before any effectual social renovation can take place, men must efface the abuse which has grown up out of the transition from the feudal to the more modern state; the abuse of land being held as absolute property; whereas in feudal times land was in a manner held in trust, inasmuch as every land-holder was charged with the substance of all who lived within its bounds. The old practice of man holding man as property is nearly exploded among civilized nations; and the analogous barbarism of man holding the surface of the globe as property can not survive. The idea of this being a barbarism is now fairly formed, admitted and established among some of the best minds of the time; and the result is, as in all cases, ultimately secure.

The Process of Inheritance.

A little over ten years ago a New York capitalistic paper declared that a change in the ownership of the land of America must come; that there must arise a race of tenant farmers on the one hand and landlords on the other. This was not said as a warning of impending evil, but was a prediction of what the paper in question considered not more certain than desirable. It declared that the time was even then ripe for the change; that the farmers were reduced to the condition where they would gladly sell, if only buyers would appear. At that time, even in the comparatively new state of Kansas, 13½ per cent. of the farms were cultivated by tenants. To-day over 33 per cent. of the Kansas farmers are tenants. The prediction of the New York capitalistic sheet is coming true. Like the people of older lands, the people of America are becoming disinherited. While they boast as loudly as ever of liberty, they are being surely reduced to vassalage, for it is the veriest mockery to talk of a man as being politically free who is dependent on another for the right to live.—K. of L. Journal.

The Morbid Monopolies.

Land monopoly and land monopoly alone, drives the poor of Europe across the sea in the hope to find in "free America easy access to land." And the aristocrat of Europe has come to our shores as well as the honest poor, and has laid his fatal hand upon American soil to the extent of millions of acres, and is prepared whenever the emergency comes, to introduce the scenes of Ireland. Landlordism, whether of foreign or domestic origin, "must go."—Springfield (Mo.) People's Voice.

ANNUAL REPORTS.

Work Done in the War and Interior Departments.

Suggestions Made by Secretary of War Elkins — Secretary of the Interior Noble Reviews the Work Done by His Department.

THE WAR OFFICE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The annual report of the secretary of war has been made public. The efficiency of the different corps is the subject of comment and the revival of the grade of lieutenant general is urged, the following reasons being advanced:

"The interests of the nation demand that the administration of military affairs shall be attended with dignity and authority. To this end it is necessary that the commanding general should be conspicuously superior in rank to all subordinates. Experience has shown that rank, as well as command, is essential to give proper effect to authority in any military organization of importance. Accordingly, it is recommended that the lieutenant generalcy be revived as a permanent grade of army rank."

Secretary Elkins wishes to elevate the enlisted personnel of the army and makes recommendations as follows:

If good men are wanted for the army they must be paid something near what wage-earners receive in the ordinary pursuits of civil life. Under the pressure of national prosperity representative men command good pay. The army, under favorable conditions, should be one of the most desirable trades of youth, and there can scarcely be a doubt that bright and adventurous young men would seek our colors in considerable numbers if it were generally understood that courage and merit would be suitably rewarded. Under present conditions there is scarcely any pecuniary benefit to attract a man to the ranks. Promotions to commissioned grades are necessarily few, and the difference between the pay of a private and a non-commissioned officer is hardly appreciable, when considered in the light of an inducement to enlistment. It is therefore recommended that at least the pay of all non-commissioned grades be increased to the extent of making promotion thereto the object of legitimate ambition, thereby inducing the enlistment of the very best material to compete for the advantages of promotion to the grade of both commissioned and non-commissioned officers."

Indian soldiers, according to the inspector general's report, show remarkable aptitude for military service. In speaking of the army generally, he says that reports of inspections made since the new drill regulations were issued show commendable alacrity on the part of the men in learning them, and that those for the infantry and cavalry are considered an improvement.

The report of the surgeon general shows the health of the army to be good. Taking into consideration the number of admissions to hospital, the number constantly sick, the number of deaths and the number discharged for disability, the rates are lower than for the previous year, and considerably lower than the rates of the previous decade.

The expenditures for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1892, were $51,218,970.59.

The appropriations for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, were $56,532,922.54.

The estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, are $42,354,679.72.

INTERIOR DEPARTMENT.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The annual report of Secretary Noble to the president covers in detail the doings of his department. The work accomplished during the present administration is shown to greatly exceed that of any like preceding period in the history of the department.

In the general land office on June 30, 1888, there were pending 350,953 final entries, and the accumulation steadily increasing. These have all been disposed of. During the present administration 398,128 agricultural patents have been issued, against 162,754 in the preceding four years, representing an excess in acreage of 37,659,840 acres.

Educational work among the Indians has been greatly increased and improved in efficiency. There has been an increase of over 13 per cent. in attendance of children in the schools, the total for 1892 being 19,703 scholars. New Indian reservation boarding schools have been established, and more are in progress which it is anticipated will be opened soon.

The sale of liquor to Indians in the Indian territory has been a source of considerable demoralization and trouble among the Indians, and the officials have been zealously engaged in the suppression of this traffic.

The taking of the census in 1890 was recognized at the beginning as a most important and difficult task, but it has been accomplished. The census publications, Senator Noble says, have been received with favorable indorsement throughout the civilized nations, and the work stands an acknowledged success and great scientific achievement. A mass of statistics is now in process of completion, and much of it is now in the hands of the printer. With the exception of a small amount of work on vital statistics and population and the statistics of manufactories and agriculture all the regular work of the eleventh census is about completed. The farm mortgages report will be completed in about twelve months.

There has been no marked change in the business methods of the patent office. The number of applications for patents during the year was 45,945, the total number awaiting action July 1, 1892, 9,147. The number of patents granted was 23,626, the total receipts were $1,268,724 and the expenditures $1,114,134. The amount in the treasury to the credit of the patent office is now $4,102,441.

The population of Arizona has considerably increased and the class of immigration is more desirable. The total debt of the territory is $3,334,725.81. A floating debt has been successfully funded at 5 per cent. under authority of the act of congress of July, 1892. Agricultural products have increased about 10 per cent. The gold product for the year was $2,000,000; silver, $2,000,000; copper, $4,500,000. Wool-growing is one of the foremost enterprises, and the product reaches as high as 2,500,000 pounds a season.

The governor of Utah expresses his belief in the good faith and honesty of the purpose of Mormon leaders and people in their abandonment of polygamy and their obedience to the laws of congress on this subject. The population of Oklahoma is shown to be 153,100, not including the Indians, who still maintain their tribal relations. Eighty-five per cent. of the population are whites, and only about 5 per cent. foreign born. It is thought that a conservative estimate of the value of the property, real and personal, in Cheyenne and Arapahoe counties is $40,000,000, excluding these counties the assessor's returns show a valuation of $11,485,102.

Alaska is virtually without an organized government. It is difficult to punish perpetrators of outrages and smugglers that infest the coast and debauch the natives. The secretary recommends an appropriation for a steam police vessel to run along the coast and among the islands to which many fugitives escape. Only a nucleus of a military organization exists, consisting of one company, and the congressional appropriation for Alaska is now being withheld, so that even the operations of this small body of militia are restricted. Additional commissioners and deputy marshals are earnestly requested, and represented to be necessary in order to furnish court facilities to the territory. The cod and salmon fisheries of Alaska constitute a great enterprise, employing vast capital and a large number of men and vessels. Additional mail and transportation facilities have been secured during the last three years which have done something to ameliorate the hard conditions of life in that generally dreary country. The secretary presents a bill framed to give Alaska a better government and is earnest in his recommendation that the condition of the territory receive the attention of congress.

Regarding the Nicaraguan canal the secretary expresses the opinion that this enterprise is of the utmost importance to the welfare of our country in either peace or war and should have most favorable recognition by congress.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.

Cures all Humors, from a Pimple to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.

Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.

Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.

It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.

It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.

It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.

It cures DROPSY, general or partial.

It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.

It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.

It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.

Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.

Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.

If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

DR. BRADLEY'S MAGNETIC OINTMENT.

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.

The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.

It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years,

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience when inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.

Prices 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

OUR ANN ARBOR LETTER.

A Budget of Interesting News from the University City.

While sitting reading in that delightfully quiet student's retreat, the west seminary room of the Library, I find that my thoughts have wandered from the subject in hand, my book of reference rests idly on the table, and I am wondering whether or not a few facts which come to my mind concerning this great center of learning may not serve to interest the readers of the HERALD and keep them in touch with our own University of Michigan.

What changes we find have been made in a few months in the appearance of the Campus itself. A fine brick structure first arrests the eyes of the stranger, who is convinced as he approaches from State street that those unearthly sounds and repeated yells emanate from the domain of no other class than the unruly Laws. The new addition completed during the summer and forming the main part of the building improves its looks a hundred-fold. If the stranger will continue his stroll around the main building to the south side of the Campus he will find the old Dental Department replaced by a new engineering building three stories high, neatly finished on the inside, in the large upper north room of which free-hand drawing and water-colors are taught.

But what delights the heart of the student is to see that a building of large proportions in the north-east part of the Campus is daily assuming more and more the appearance of a completed structure. Surely the Waterman Gymnasium is going to be "a go."

The University School of Music, which first opened its doors at the beginning of the college year, in the words of its able director, Prof. Stanley, "is not going to be a success for it is already a success." Some two hundred students have enrolled, who, for want of a better place at present, receive instruction in Newberry Hall, the students' Christian Association building, where recitals are frequently given by the musical faculty. The Choral Union, numbering 280 members, is spending its energies at the present time on Handel's "Messiah." The concert, which will be the first given by the Choral Union, takes place the evening of the 21st of December. The series was opened with a fine program rendered by the Chicago orchestra, led by Theodore Thomas. In February a song recital is to be given by Max Heinrich, who is what the Germans call "an artist by the grace of God." He is assisted by J. Erich Schmall, pianist, of the University school of music, who will play a group of piano solos. The three remaining attractions are the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Franz Rummel, pianist, and Mr. Silas R. Mills (University school of music), basso, and lastly the Choral Union itself.

The question as to whether the Choral Union will go to Chicago or not the third week in June to join the Festival Chorus has not yet been definitely decided. Coming, as it does, during examination week, is unfortunate, but we are told arrangements will be made by the University Senate so the students may not be deprived of that final effort, examination, to which they look forward with so much pleasurable anticipation during the Semester.

This week we are to have an entertainment by E. G. Hirsch, of Chicago University, the third on the student's lecture course, the two previous being Robert G. Ingersoll on Shakespeare and Remenyi; the remaining most prominent lecturers are Rev. Lyman Abbott, Hon. Henry Watterson and Hon. Thomas B. Reed.

The recent attempt on the part of the board to obviate the necessity of arising at four o'clock in the morning and standing in line for three or four hours in order to get reserved seats, met with decided opposition, exaggerated reports of which have been made in various papers, as is always the case. The scheme was to sell every other row, to be held the remainder of the year, leaving an equal proportion of good seats for those who did not wish to buy; to which it was objected that a division would thereby be created in the ranks of the University, and an element of aristocracy enter in. When, early Saturday morning, the Board proceeded to University Hall to carry out the plan, though already some of its members had been convinced of the inadvisability of the scheme, they were welcomed by a mass of students bent on preventing the same. It is said that one of the ladies on the Board, who hoped by her presence to quiet the crowd, came out of the girls' reading room, in which a meeting was being held, with the imploring words, "Can't you be gentlemen?" to which came the answer, "No, we can't; we're Laws." However, the folly of the attempt to adopt the plan was realized and abandoned without further disturbance.

Fearing lest my readers may be wearied with further details I will return from my wanderings to the lesson, which deserves attention at my hands.

Every women who marries becomes a sort of amateur detective.

WHAT DO UNIVERSALISTS BELIEVE?

Last Sunday evening, at the Universalist church, Rev. Gorton spoke on the above theme to quite a large congregation. The following is a brief statement of the line of his thought:

People commonly called orthodox, however intelligent they may be on other matters, are generally grossly ignorant of what Universalists believe and teach, and therefore we are grossly misunderstood and misrepresented. He spoke of what Universalists believe about immortality, God, Man, Jesus Christ, Atonement, Punishment, Judgment, Justice, Love, Mercy, Probation, Conversion, Education, Heaven and Hell, Salvation, the Church repentance and Pardon. After stating his views on these subjects, he said: We believe these things and consider them both reasonable and scriptural and because we consider them more than other views helpful to all that is highest and finest, all that is noblest and best in the religious life. To the objection, if Universalism is true why do so few believe it and so many disbelieve it, he answered that the number who believe a thing is no evidence whatever of its truth. Every one once believed the earth was flat, and the sun and stars revolved about it, but there was no truth in it just the same; and when a very few came to believe and teach that the earth is round like an orange, and turns on its axis, and revolves about the sun, they were regarded as heretics, and hated and persecuted by the church; but now everybody believes these things. The doctrine of evolution, and many other scientific truths, indeed nearly all great truths, have met with a similar fate. We might then with as much consistency ask why has God made so much dirt and so little gold, so much rock and so few diamonds. Does that prove that dirt is more valuable than gold, or rock than diamond. Naturally the highest truth, the greatest, finest and noblest truth is revealed to those who are freest and bravest to do their own thinking, to those who dare to delve in all mines to find the gold and the diamonds of truth, to those of the freest minds and of the keenest and sharpest intellectual powers, who are not afraid to exercise to the fullest extent their reasoning powers on all questions of religion, while the intellectual coward and slave and dullard is left in darkness.

Mr. Gorton then claimed that nearly all the early Christian fathers, for more than three hundred years after Christ, and including the excellent and eminent Origin were Universalists, and universalism was not condemned in the Christian church till the dark ages of heathen ignorance, corruption and cruelty set in, some five hundred years after Christ.

He showed that all the historians and poets of this country were of the liberal faith, also many of the most noted philanthropists of this country and Europe, and two-thirds of the eminent names in the list of American authors and artists.

No other church, for its age and members, can begin to present such an array of distinguished names in every walk in life. Look at some of these names: Poets—Alice and Phoebe Carey, Whittier, Longfellow, Bryant, Lowell, Holmes, Tennyson, Robert Browning, Mrs. Browning. Historians—Bancroft, Prescott, Hildreth, Parkman, Sparks, Frothingham. Philanthropists—Florence Nightingale, John Pounds, Peter Cooper, Henry Burgh, Ezra Cornell. Scientists and Educators—Horace Mann, Priestly Carpenter, Sir Charles Lyell, Prof. DeMorgan, Agassiz. Statesmen—Chas. Sumner, Edward Everett, Abraham Lincoln, Chief Justice Marshall, Justice Miller, Daniel Webster, all the Adamses, Dorman B. Eaton, John C. Calhoun, and multitudes more, eminent men and women, the world's noblest educators in all these departments of life. We might add to the list such distinguished and immortal names as John Locke, Wm. Penn, Benjamin Franklin, Thos. Jefferson, Sir Isaac Newton and John Milton.

"In the Cross of Christ I Glory," "While thee I seek, protecting power," "Nearer my God to Thee," are all hymns written by Unitarians; and the latter at least, perhaps the most beautiful and frequently and widely sung hymn in the English language. May we not be proud of the fruits of our noble and reasonable, our beautiful and glorious faith?

A CHILD ENJOYS

The pleasant flavor, gentle action and soothing effect of Syrup of Figs, when in need of a laxative, and if the father or mother be costive or bilious, the most gratifying results follow its use; so that it is the best family remedy known and every family should have a bottle.

"The honest public sentiment of the people of the United States is unanimously in favor of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup. The dealers pronounce it to be the only standard cough remedy.

Prof. Barrett, of St. Lawrence county, N. Y., speaking of pulmonary diseases, says: Not one death occurs now where twenty died before Downs' Elixir was known. Over fifty years of constant success places Downs' Elixir at the head of the long list of cough remedies.

Wife: Why do you buy such a lot of stamps at once? Husband: So there'll be a few that won't get stuck together.

The reason why Arnica & Oil Liniment is so popular with the ladies is because it is not only very healing and soothing, but its odor is not at all offensive.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Campaign Expenses.

As required by the new election law Senator James McMillan, chairman of the republican state central committee, has filed with the secretary of state a sworn statement to the effect that the expenditures of the committee during the recent campaign were $40,641.32. The expenditures of the democratic state central committee, as appear by Chairman Campau's affidavits, were $46,286.92. The populist state central committee places its expenses at $2,100.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy-two observers in different parts of the state for the week ended November 26 indicated that inflammation of the bowels, cholera morbus, puerperal fever and remittent fever increased, and dysentery and measles decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at forty-six places, scarlet fever at forty-three, typhoid fever at thirty-eight and measles at eight places.

Don't Like Discrimination.

At the session in Bay City of the state board of corrections and charities Superintendent Wood, of the state reform school, gave a long statement of the work in the printing office connected with the school, and declared the boys understood their trade as well as any printers in the country, but, as a rule, were unable to obtain good positions, as union shops would not employ them.

The Lady Maccabees.

OBITUARY.

Died at his home in Tecumseh, Dec. 1st., 1892, John B. Garlinghouse.

For more than forty-three years Mr. Garlinghouse has been a resident in this vicinity, having located in the township of Raisin in 1849. The following year he returned to the State of New York and on Dec. 10th, 1850 was united in marriage with Miss Mary J. Benedict. In the spring of 1851, he with his bride returned to make a home in what was then the west. The farm where they first settled was their home for thirty-one years. Here they together bravely fought the battle of life, and though their labors were often heavy and the trials not a few, yet with faith in Providence and confidence in honest, persistent effort, their labors have been crowned with success. About ten years ago he removed to a farm two miles north-east of Tecumseh, on which he determined to spend the remainder of his days. Three sons were given to him all of whom now grown to manhood, are numbered among our prominent business men. About two months since on account of failing health, and at the urgent solicitation of his sons, he purchased a home in Tecumseh, but his days were numbered, his life work done and on the morning of Dec 1st., surrounded by his loved ones he passed peacefully to his rest, aged sixty-seven years, nine months and fourteen days, a tender and loving husband and father, a faithful friend and neighbor and a true man.

John B. Garlinghouse, the subject of the accompanying sketch, was the youngest of a large family, five of whom survive him. The combined ages of the five was, on Dec. 1., the day of their brother's decease 402 years, 4 months and 10 days, their respective ages and residence being as follows: David Garlinghouse, of Napoleon, Mich. aged eighty-seven years, eight months, 21 da.; Mrs. E. G. Read, of Hammondsport, N. Y., eighty-four years, four months and twelve days; Mrs. Ann Finch, of Tecumseh, Mich., eighty-one years, two months and twenty-one days; Mrs. Jane Webster, of Bath, N. Y. seventy-eight years, three months and twenty-three days; Thomas Garlinghouse, of Peru, Ind., seventy years, eight months and twenty-three days.

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 8, 1892.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

Genuine.

Lucius Lilley was in Detroit Monday.

Decidedly too much mud for December.

Fred Hall is visiting at Milan this week.

Postmaster Lawrence is East on business this week.

Mrs. Lester Tribou was a visitor in Detroit Tuesday.

Good December weather but we would be thankful for a run of sleighing.

T. T. Kneeland, of St. Louis, Mich., has been making Tecumseh friends a visit.

Mrs. J. H. Osborn and daughter, Mamie, returned from their Thanksgiving trip Tuesday.

A new Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine for sale at a bargain. Call at this office and examine it.

We are pleased to note that Mrs, Wm. Hayden has almost entirely recovered from her recent illness.

Lenardson Bros. of Britton, have a new card on the first page, which all our patrons should read.

We are glad to know that Miss Mary Haight is able to attend to her duties in the post office once more.

Fred Darling, now of Lansing, who will be remembered as a schoolmate by many, was in town Friday.

The pipeing in the water mains has been completed ready for a test when we have water to test them.

If you wish to know what genuine means, read Mac G. Fritz's new card elsewhere. That will tell the story.

Macon Grange will meet in regular session on Tuesday, Dec. 13th, at 7 o'clock, p. m. A full attendance is requested.

Bert and Lester Westcott left for Rhinelander, Wis., Monday, where they have secured jobs in the screen factory with James Potter.

The subject of discourse at the Universalist church next Sunday evening will be "John G. Whittier, the Quaker poet—his life, religion and influence."

The annual election in the Blue Lodge occured Friday night. The same officers were retained almost unanimously. A very enjoyable banquet followed the election.

"Brother," says a Georgia editor, "don't stop your paper because you don't agree with the editor. The last cabbage you sent us didn't agree with us either, but we don't drop you from our subscription list on that account."

Frank Allen, of Toledo, was in town Saturday. He came up to sell his house and lot and was fortunate in making a cool sale. He is still in the dispatcher's office of the Mackinaw road and has lately received a lift in his wages.

About twenty-five Tecumseh Masons visited the Manchester Lodge last Monday evening and exemplified the third degree. They enjoyed their visit very much and speak in warm terms of praise of the hospitality of their Manchester brethern.

Even if shooting stars were plentiful Sunday night, the clouds prevented a sight of them. The earth's path has been in the meteor region the past few days, and comet or no comet shooting stars would have been seen in plenty had the weather permitted.

We have made arrangements by which we can furnish The Ohio Farmer, the leading weekly Agricultural, Live Stock and Family Journal of this country, and the HERALD both one year, postage paid, for only $2.00. This is a bargain that every farmer should accept.

Genuine.

Satterthwaite Bros. have a change of ad this week.

Alf James spent Monday and Tuesday in Detroit.

Alva Spayde has a message this week about cold weather foot wear. Read it.

Adamson Bros' have a new card this week, which every one should peruse.

Subject of address at the Baptist Church on Sunday evening, Dec. 11th, "What did Jay Gould leave us?"

We invite attention to the card of G. Roscoe Swift of Adrian. He has something of interest to purchasers of holiday goods.

Dr. J. G. Webster, of Painted Post, N. Y., also Ira Garlinghouse of Woodstock and John C. of Napoleon, were visitors at Tecumseh over Sunday, having come to attend the funeral of their uncle, John B. Garlinghouse.

The ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. church will hold the regular monthly meeting in the church parlors, on Wednesday, Dec. 14th. Business meeting at 4 p. m.; supper served from 5:30 till 6:30 by Mrs. Smeltzer's committee.

The frame residence of Jacob Laemmie, living six miles west of Manchester, was burned Sunday night, together with all its contents. In saving their children the man and his wife were severely burned. The woman may die.

Genuine.

The New York Philharmonic Club is one of the finest musical organizations that has ever visited Tecumseh. They will give a first class concert and will doubtless draw a big crowd. Remember the date, next Wednesday evening.

Chas. P. Reed, of Grand Ledge, a grand-father of Charley Reed, foreman of the HERALD, is spending a couple of weeks with his grandson here. It is his first visit to Tecumseh and he is very much pleased with the appearance of the town.

Congress convened on Monday and the President's message was sent in on Tuesday. It is a lengthy document, the major portion being a synopsis of reports of departments. He adheres to the high tariff policy and defends the McKinley law.

There will appear in the North American Review for Dec., a paper by T. D. Crothers, M. D., on the question, "Is Alcoholism Increasing among American Women?" He takes the view that it is not, but he graphically depicts the evils of drink indulgence.

James Kelly, special agent of the National Loan and Investment Co. of Detroit, Mich., is in town a couple of days this week, looking after the interests of his company. A large number of shares have been disposed of here during the past six months.

Lives of poor men oft remind us that honest toil don't have a chance. More we work we leave behind us bigger patches on our pants. On those pants once new and costly now are patches of many hues, all because subscribers linger and refuse to pay their dues.

Delos Whitenack's house was rifled last Sunday evening about 6 o'clock, while Mr. and Mrs. Whitenack were absent. The entire house was ransacked but the only article missing was a gold watch, the fastideous theives even leaving some change lying in a drawer thro' which they rummaged.

Word has been received of the death on Nov. 17th, of Mrs. H. F. Cogswell, at Pasadena, Cal. Mrs. C. was formerly Miss Lettie Garlinghouse, a sister of our townsman Daniel B., and well known to many of the Herald readers who will sympathize with the husband and children and friends in their affliction.

H. L. Jones has sold out his restaurant business to Wm. B. Darling, of Jackson. Mr. Darling comes well recommended as having had a large experience in the restaurant and whole sale confectionery business and we predict for him success at Mr. Jones' old stand. Mr. Jones will still act as agent for the U. S. Express Co. at the same place.

That "jag of wheat" that came to Tecumseh last week Monday and went home without a buyer has created no little comment in the newspapers. If it actually occurred, which is doubtful, it was the first occurrence of the kind that has happened in this town in forty years, and there is no danger of its repetition. Our millers are now buying all the wheat that comes and paying the highest market price as usual.

The Comedy Novelty, Ole Olson, held the boards at the opera house last Thursday evening. It is no flattery to say that a better comedy has not been presented in this town in ten years. Frank McAlpine in the leading role, portrayed the young Swede to perfection, and the minor characters were all well taken. The Swedish Lady Quartette gave some fine vocal music. If the troupe will visit Tecumseh again, standing room only will be at a premium.

Those who favor improved highways, and desire to aid Col. Pope in his crusade in that direction, will best do so by signing the petition circulated by him, a copy of which has been placed with Landlord Patterson at the Lilley House. A good idea would be to secure copies of the petition and place them in the hotels and post office, where people could have an opportunity to sign them. A number of our citizens have manifested an interest in this direction, and now is the chance to make a practical move.

Genuine.

Miss Fila Sebring, who has been the guest of Miss Ada Boyd for the past few days, returned to her home in Blissfield, yesterday afternoon.

The third entertainment of the Star Course will be the concert of the New York Philharmonic Club, on next Wednesday evening, Dec. 14th.

Wm. Hayden yesterday received a new burglar proof safe from H. M. Pixley & Son, Toledo, to take the place of the one cracked Sunday night.

Russell H. Conwell and wife, of Philadelphia, Pa., were registered at the Lilley last Tuesday. Wednesday they left for Pontiac, the place of Mr. Conwell's next appearance.

Genuine.

We call attention to the New York Tribune prospectus on our supplement sheet this week. The Tribune is one of the ablest of American newspapers and as an apostle and advocate of a high tariff, it leads all its competitors. Those Republicans who believe in protection can find no better paper to read. The weekly is clubbed with the HERALD at reduced rates.

At the annual election of Beers' Post held last Monday evening, the following officers were chosen:

Commander—Jas. M. Ingersoll.
S. V. Com.—Dr. L. Barnes.
J. V.—Com.—George Harmon.
Surgeon—Miles Baldwin.
Chaplain—Chas. Wilson.
Quartermaster—Henry J. Sweet.
Officer of the Day—F. B. Thompson.
Officer of the Guard—Wm. Smallidge.

Thursday evening, Dec. 15, the young peoples' society of the Baptist church will give a Circulating Library reception at the home of their Pastor, Rev. H. A. Smith, on Kilbuck street. It is requested that those who attend as far as convenient dress to represent the name of a book and also to bring pencils. Light refreshments will be served. Mr. and Mrs. Smith extend a cordial welcome to all.

One of the pleasantest of the series of chamber music soirees given by the Philharmonic Club this season was that of last night. Chickering Hall was comfortably filled with a sympathetic audience, who became enthusiastic when the performance rose above the level of neatness and accuracy for which the Club is famous—and this occurred more than once during the evening.—The World.

Adrian's new daily, the Evening Telegram, made its bow to the public last Saturday. It is a six column folio sheet, very neatly printed and filled to the brim with local and county news. M. W. Redfield and E. E. Putnam are the proprietors. Mr. Redfield has had considerable experience as local editor of the Times and both are hustlers, who will doubtless get to the front in their new venture. Here's the best wishes of the HERALD, gentlemen, for your success.

The Second entertainment of the Lecture Course was given to a large and appreciative audience, at the opera house last Tuesday evening, by the Rev. Russell H. Conwell, of Philadelphia. Mr. Conwell chose as his subject "The Crown of Silver, or Born a King," since it was directly in line and scope with his "Acres of Diamonds" given here two years ago, and so much enjoyed by our citizens. Although the speaker is an orator of unsurpassed power, his chief aim seems to be practicability, and a desire to drive home to his hearers some facts and thoughts which they can use and build success upon. In doing this he uses a great deal of every day language and common sense, flavored with pathos, oratory and fine dramatic talent. Rev. Conwell is a tall, well formed, typical Yankee, of fine appearance and genial manners, and was listened to with intense and individual interest by a crowded house for two and one-half hours.

Last Sunday night Wm. Hayden's Globe Mill office was burglarized something over $90.00 being taken from the safe and a small amount of change from the cash drawer. An entrance was effected by prying up the lower sash of the east window, the operators having supplied themselves with tools from the shop. The safe was cracked by first twisting off the handle, which breaking on the inside left a very convenient place for introducing powder. The explosive used seemed to be ordinary gunpowder, but it did its work effectively, blowing the heavy door over six feet and knocking the stove off the zinc. The concussion was great enough to shake out several window lights and awaken people living in the immediate vicinity. The theives were evidently in somewhat of a hurry to decamp after the explosion, as they left a money box containing about $300.00, sitting in the bottom of the safe in plain sight. We are unable at present, to give the name of the safe crackers, who seem to know their business quite well, or where they can be found.

BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do you know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough. The surprising Promptness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods wherever introduced, conclusively prove that true merit is always recognized and the quality of merit takes care of itself. Metaphorically our statement is the Button—the Public Press it, and

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC SPECIALTIES

"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements that so much comfort for $1.60 (the price) is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial sensibles. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, in which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Eletric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt) and credit $3 on the price of new order. Remember the Electric Foot warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

DEATH OF JAY GOULD.

The World's Greatest Financier Passes Peacefully Away.

All the Members of His Family Present at the Last Moment of His Life—A Brief Sketch of His Wonderful Career.

JAY GOULD IS DEAD.

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Jay Gould died at 9:15 a. m. Friday. The direct cause of Mr. Gould's death, as stated at the house, was pulmonary consumption. The scene at the house at midnight was not extraordinary, as it was stated at that time that the strong master mind had ceased to battle for life. His children were at his bedside and they recognized that the hopes of the past few days were vanishing and that the end was not far off. They tearfully admitted this to a few close personal friends, and then began the vigil which only ceased when his last breath left the body. Dr. Munn, his physician, had Dr. Janeway in consultation, but they said that nothing could be done but make Mr. Gould's last hours as comfortable as possible. When the end came the members of the family who were in the house were: Mr. and Mrs. George Gould, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Gould, Miss Helen Gould, Howard Gould, Harold Gould and Miss Annie Gould.

JAY GOULD.

Mr. Gould died in a room on the second floor of his home in the extension in the rear of the building, just over the conservatory, the same room in which his wife died. A few moments before he died Mr. Gould desired to bid his family good-by. Then he looked tenderly into the face of each one, smiled at each and all was over.

The Gould family are prostrated with grief. Miss Helen Gould was ill when her father was taken sick, and the blow has come upon her with terrible force. The members of the family are very much devoted to each other. Mr. Gould had always been very much of a domestic man, notwithstanding his weight of cares from his gigantic financial operations, and the death of the father so shortly after the demise of the mother has come with an added force of affliction.

HIS FORTUNE.

No two estimates agree as to the amount of Mr. Gould's fortune. The most conservative figures place it at about $60,000,000, while some people in Wall street place it at over $100,000,000.

There were many guesses made in regard to Jay Gould's wealth and the disposition to be made of his immense holdings of securities. One of his closest associates and oldest personal friends said in regard to this matter:

"Mr. Gould's wealth will be found to vary not $10,000,000 from $100,000,000; about $40,000,000 is in Manhattan Western Union telegraph and Missouri Pacific stock. The holdings of these three stocks are trusted and will not be sold. His other securities will be taken care of by the same interests which have had charge of them for the last three years. It is estimated that Mr. Gould held $15,000,000 of Western Union stock and $20,000,000 'L' stock."

Washington E. Connor and G. P. Morosini give the following as their estimate of Mr. Gould's wealth: Western Union, $20,000,000; Manhattan Elevated railway, $13,000,000; Missouri Pacific, $17,500,000; Wabash, $3,500,000; Union Pacific, $5,000,000; real estate $2,100,000; total, $61,000,000.

HIS CAREER.

When Jay Gould began business in this city he possessed $750,000, but the path he trod to earn it was rough and stormy, and his capital varied at different times from five dollars to ten cents.

He was born in Roxbury, Delaware county, N. Y., May 27, 1836, of parents who worked a small farm and were people of strong sense and sturdy integrity. Jay was kept on the farm until he was 12 years old, but his father found him of small account. He had little schooling save that given by his elder sister, who aided him in the study of mathematics. He developed early and importuned his father to send him to an academy at some distance from Roxbury. His father could not afford this, but the boy determined to go to the academy and pay his own expenses, and he did go, his entire worldly goods upon leaving home being fifty cents in his pocket and the clothes upon his back. Thirty-two years later, being charged with treacherously selling out his associates, he lit upon a tally of stocks and bonds of his own of the value of $35,000,000.

Arrived at Roberts and canvassing the town for work, he got a chance to keep books for the village blacksmith, who had started a little store next the shop. This helped him out. He spent mornings and evenings with the son of Vulcan and paid his way at school. He rested little, played little, talked little, worked hard and made surprising progress. In six months he learned what the academy had to teach and left it.

He then obtained employment in a tin shop and learned to make pails, pans and cups while his evenings were spent in study. He made himself so useful that at the age of 15 he was a full partner in the concern, and when he visited Albany and New York to purchase material he succeeded in opening accounts with Phelps, Dodge & Co. and other firms well known to the public.

The tin shop was profitable but slow, and in 1852 he transformed his interest in it to his father and arranged to take charge of a surveying party at $30 a month, the object being to obtain a new and accurate map of Delaware county. He organized his party and started with five dollars in his pockets, walked 40 miles the first day and worked a fortnight, when his employer suddenly "failed" before he had seen a paid a cent. Gould at once resolved to carry out the survey himself.

A respectable sum was received from the map. Young Gould now became a professional surveyor and civil engineer. He mapped Albany, Ulster, Greene and Delaware counties in New York, Lake and Geauga counties in Ohio, and Oakland county in Michigan, made the surveys for a plank road and a railroad, wrote and published a history of Delaware county, started a tannery, where he employed 250 men, built a town (Gouldsboro) and established a bank and carried it through the panic of 1857 before he was 21.

He sold an interest in the town for $50,000 and invested the money in depreciated railroad securities after the panic. It was during one of Mr. Gould's occasional visits to New York about this time that he noticed in the window of an Everett house room—he was a guest there at the time—an attractive-looking young lady. He saw her frequently and after observing her bowed. She did the same. A mild flirtation ensued. Chance brought the two young people together, and, after a slight acquaintance, without the knowledge of her father, Mr. Miller, they were married.

Reconciliation followed, and this opened the door to railroad speculations, as Mr. Miller influenced the employment of Mr. Gould as manager of the Rensselaer & Saratoga railroad, connecting Troy and Saratoga. This road was under a cloud and its securities were selling for a few cents on the dollar. Here was Gould's opportunity. He managed the road well, made valuable and paying connections and brought it into positive value. Meantime, little by little, Gould obtained possession of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago road, and bought and sold on the dollar for stock to all but Vanderbilt, who made him pay fifteen cents, and the consequence was that after selling out again he returned to New York with a clean credit of $750,000. With this he entered "the street."

The rise and progress and ups and downs of Erie are a romance in themselves, of which the most enlivening chapter pertains to the connection of Jay Gould and Jim Fisk, Jr., with its control. The result was a compromise between Gould and Vanderbilt, the latter being relieved of 50,000 shares, for which he received $2,500,000 in bonds and other concessions not pertinent to this article. Before he left the management the Erie stock was expanded in less than three years from $34,000,000 to $86,000,000—an increase of $52,000,000.

Mr. Gould was for years chief among the great gold operators. In March, 1869, gold was "down" to 131. Gould purchased $7,000,000, and then, by adroit playing on the market's dread of Cuban insurrections, the Alabama trouble and European complications, rushed the price up to 145. The enormous success of this move emboldened him, who was daring enough already, and he perfected in his quiet study a project that shook the financial center of the nation. He determined to send gold up to 200.

Friday, September 24, forever memorable as Black Friday, came. The plan was for the clique to call for the $80,000,000 bought on option, lock up the gold in the stock exchange vaults, and then force the bears, whose short interest was estimated at $250,000,000, to settle as best they might. The Tenth national bank was controlled by the clique, and was ready to certify their checks to any amount to facilitate the shifting of the gold.

Albert Speyers bought for them $26,000,000. As the price jumped Gould's agents were forcing the timid bears into settlement. William Heath bid 160 for a million. The crowd hesitated; no one dared accept the offer, as the price was on the upward bound. Meanwhile Gould's partners were settling up millions and millions with the thoroughly frightened bears, and pandemonium raged the length of the street. While Gould's agent was bidding 160, 161 and 162 for millions Gould's other agents were selling all the gold they could privately at 135 and 140. During all the excitement and uproar Gould was calm and collected. Never did he have such a drain on his nerve as this, but he met the demand with a full supply. When the price touched 162½ some one called out: "Government is selling this ten millions." It was a great shock, a great relief. In ten minutes the rate was 135 and with bewildered brains and pallid faces hundreds of ruined operators rushed into the darkness of their private offices to weep and wail over the wrecks of their fortunes.

The ruin wrought by the speculation cannot be overestimated. Failures and suicides followed hard on each other, and nothing but the vigorous efforts of Vanderbilt and Drew, aided by the wise assistance of the government, stemmed the tide that bade fair to bear the soundest into bankruptcy. Gould's wily sales of gold at the time his agents were forcing up the price netted him immense sums.

At one time Gould cast his eye on Pacific Mail and hammered the price down some 25 per cent. He had made some large contracts for delivery, and when the time came secured the stock at low rates and cleared several millions on the differences. He also made largely by a 40 per cent. rise in Union Pacific.

Mr. Gould's connection with the Western Union Telegraph Company began in the early part of 1881. For a number of years, with the aid of the American Union and the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph companies, which he controlled, he was able to advance and depress the stock of the Western Union at will. He was simply playing a great game with his larger rival and waiting the chance when he would take possession and unite all the lines. In 1881 Mr. Gould and his associates had practically secured control of the Western Union. The stock of the Western Union Telegraph Company was at once "watered" $40,000,000, or 37 per cent, and Mr. Gould became the leading spirit in that company, directing its affairs from its offices, which were in that building. Nothing Mr. Gould ever did in his life so arrayed public sentiment against him as this creation of the telegraphic monopoly. Eventually the Western Union acquired the Baltimore & Ohio telegraph, which Robert Garrett was glad to sell in order to get money to help the Baltimore & Ohio railroad out of the difficulty into which it had fallen.

Gould's fortune was on the verge of ruin during the second week of May, 1884, that period of wild financial dread and distrust following the failure of Grant & Ward. He was nearer being "broke" then than at any period since Black Friday. Then he threw the burden by wily manipulation on his opponents, combined to compass his undoing if it were possible, and all things seemed possible in those days when the panics of 1857 and 1873 bade fair to find their parallel in Wall street. It was generally known that Gould was heavily involved in the smash of Grant & Ward, and he soon found arrayed against him every bear operator in the street. Before Mr. Gould extricated himself from his difficulties he sold out his entire holdings of stock in the Mercantile Trust Company.

From company after company Mr. Gould retired, and it was not until the summer of 1891 was well advanced that he rested easily and could look complacently on the market and call it his own. During the year more than forty railroads had passed into the hands of receivers, among them the New York & New England road, in which Mr. Gould had been particularly interested.

The Gould summer house is at "Lyndhurst," near Irvington, up the Hudson, and comprises about 600 acres of beautiful land and one of the finest conservatories and graperies in America. Rare plants and rare flowers have been sent to him from all parts of the world, so that the place is stocked with choice plants. Mr. Gould made a close study of botany and could call most of the plants by name. His gallery contains hundreds of valuable paintings. His own taste ran to modern art, best works of the French masters. Meissonier, Millet, Delaroche, Bouguereau, Delacroix and others.

Recovers Property from His Heirs.

TUSCOLA, Ill., Dec 3.—Stephen Redden, a wealthy farmer, aged 77, believing some time ago that his end was near, conveyed property to the amount of $40,000 to his heirs. He recovered and for over a week a trial has been in progress, the aged man suing to recover his property. The jury returned a verdict in his favor.

S.S.S. CURES MALARIAL POISON

Nature should be assisted to throw off impurities of the blood. Nothing does it so well, so promptly, or so safely as Swift's Specific.

LIFE HAD NO CHARMS.

For three years I was troubled with malarial poison, which caused my appetite to fail, and I was greatly reduced in flesh, and life lost all its charms. I tried mercurial and potash remedies, but to no effect. I could get no relief. I then decided to try S.S.S. A few bottles of this wonderful medicine made a complete and permanent cure, and I now enjoy better health than ever.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a certain mortgage, bearing date April 28th, 1891, executed by Charles H. Aten to Fred J. Landgraf, whereby the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative. Said mortgage was, on the 28th day of April, 1891, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Lenawee County and State of Michigan, in Liber 121 of Mortgages, on page 562. There is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date hereof the sum of five hundred and fifty-nine and thirty-three hundredths Dollars ($559.33) and no proceedings have been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof, either at law or in equity.

Notice is therefore hereby given that the premises described in said mortgage, by virtue of the said power of sale and of the statute in such case made and provided, will, on the 28th day of January, 1893, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, at the East front door of the Court House in the City of Adrian, in said County (said Court House being the place where the Circuit Court for said County is held) to satisfy the sum due as aforesaid and the interest thereon accrued and then to become due, together with an attorney fee of $30 in said mortgage provided, and all other legal costs of foreclosure. Said premises are described in said mortgage as follows: All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, in the County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point in the East line of Pearl street, continued northward from Hewitt's addition to said Village, said point being four rods south of the Southwest corner of a parcel of land formerly owned by Wm. Spath; thence running easterly parallel with and four rods distant from the South line of said Spath lot eight rods; thence south parallel with Pearl street two and one-half rods; thence West parallel with and two and one-half rods distant from the first course eight rods to Pearl street; thence north on the East line of Pearl street to the place of beginning; excepting therefrom all that part thereof heretofore conveyed by said Landgraf to Samuel Temple by deed dated November 20th, 1882, and recorded in Liber 157 of Deeds, on page 258, in the office of the Register of Deeds for said County; also excepting all that part of said above described premises covered by the Temple Brick Planing Mill.

A VISITATION.

He wrote a hurried letter home
From California's strand:
"Dear sister, I am much alarmed
O'er the earthquakes in the land,

"And so I send you by express,
To save from coming harm,
My treasures rare, my precious boys,
To visit the old farm."

The maiden aunt rejoiced to greet
Dear Brother Henry's boys;
They wakened up the dull old farm
With much tumultuous noise.

They broke the fences up to ride
To "Boston" on the rails,
Used auntie's chopping trays for boats,
And tore up sheets for sails.

"Dear brother," wrote their auntie then,
"Your treasures safely came,
I went to the express, and there
Receipted for the same.

But now in order to preserve
My mental equipoise,
I'll take the earthquakes in exchange,
And send you back your boys."
—Mrs. M. L. Rayne, in Detroit Free Press.

HER SISTER NELL.

Why She Went South to Take Care of Kate.

When Tom Norton and his wife came from the north to the prairies of southwestern Louisiana to try rice farming they brought each their most cherished possessions.

Tom's consisted, for the most part, of a varied and interesting collection of theories.

He brought, also, a very respectable financial backing and a fund of good, practical common sense. These saved him from collapse when he saw his theories knocked out by the hard facts of his new life.

Mrs. Kate brought her etchings, her water colors, her jars, vases, rugs and draperies. She had a rather worse time arranging these in a 'Cadian house than Tom had with his theories, which is saying a good deal. Both succeeded fairly well, however, and at the beginning of the second summer their house had become the rendezvous of "the boys," a lot of young fellows from various northern states, most of them, like Tom, rice planters. Their home was at present a board shanty, set in the midst of far-stretching rice fields, where they kept house for themselves after the manner of men unwatched of women. Small wonder they found at Tom's a pleasant respite.

John McRae, whose rice flat was over on Bayou Nez Pique, came oftenest and stayed longest. He was older than the rest and quieter.

He had dined with them, one breathless noon, and afterward crossed to the parlor, which Kate had a trick of keeping cool and shady in the hottest weather. Kate filled the pipes; Tom took the sofa and Mac, stretched in a most comfortable chair, smoked awhile in silence.

"You're a decent sort of a fellow, Tom," he said at length, "and I don't envy you a thing, but this"—with a comprehensive wave of his hand—"isn't exactly calculated to make one enthusiastic over Black Jim's housekeeping."

"This," included the excellent dinner just eaten, the cool shade of the pleasant room, and Kate herself in a most becoming gown.

"Well, then, why don't you do as I did, marry your best girl and bring her down here to look after you?" queried Tom.

Mac puffed away awhile before he answered: "I haven't any best girl. I had one once—a nice, sensible girl—"

"I hate nice, sensible girls," interrupted Kate; but Mac went calmly on:

"Father died when I was just out of school and left me with mother, four children and a mortgage to look after. I laid the case plainly before my girl, told her there was bound to be hard work: but that I knew I could pull through, and if she wanted to take hold and help all right. If not, say so—and 'good-by, sweetheart.'

"She wrote me the nicest kind of a letter; said she couldn't think of coming between me and my duty to my family; but she 'should always,' etc. But it was 'good-by' all right enough. I told you she was sensible," he explained.

Here Kate sniffed contemptuously. But even that failed to interrupt the even tenor of Mac's tale.

"So I went to work alone, and, by George, how I did work! But I pulled through at last, as I knew I would: paid the mortgage, educated the children and provided for mother." All this was delivered between the puffs of Mac's pipe in his usual quiet tone, without a trace of emotion on his thin face, and from first to last his amused smile did not vary.

He refilled his pipe and concluded, as if done with the subject:

"My folks have got out of the habit of thinking of me as a marrying man, and I reckon, as they say here, they're about right."

"That was all right so long as there was the mortgage, the mother and the children to be considered, but now—" and Kate paused, suggestively.

"But now," said Mac, rising, "I've 'no call' to be dawdling here. Carter told me this morning that the twin levees were seeping badly. I've got to hold up all my water if I make a crop, so I came into the Magnolia saloon for something to sharpen up the shovels."

He paused by one of the tables and took up a picture which lay there. It was a bright-faced girl, with an air of spirited self-reliance.

"Now, that's a nice girl," Mac said, after a moment's examination of the picture.

"She just is!" said Kate, emphatically. "It's my sister, Nell. She's nice, but not 'nice and sensible,' like your stick of a girl."

"Think not?" and Mac continued to give the picture the same careful scrutiny he was wont to bestow upon a seeping levee or a clogged pump.

"No, indeed!" replied Kate. "If there was hard work to be done, Nell would go at it with all the energy she devotes nowadays to having a good time."

"That would knock a harder job than yours silly, Mac," and Tom laughed.

"Well, if you don't believe me, just go and see my sister Nell, Mr. John McRae," said Kate with great dignity.

"That sounds alluring, but I'm too aged to run any risks. Before I do anything I must be assured of several things."

Mac's eyes twinkled, but he spoke quite as if Kate were an agent for a new pump or a grading plow.

"What, for instance?" Kate's tone was crisp enough to have warned Tom, but Mac went on calmly.

"Well," he said, meditatively, "this"—and again his gesture included the arrangement of the room—"and the dinners you're always giving us, and the way you have of meeting Tom in a pretty gown when he comes in hot and tired. But I don't want to be too grasping. I wouldn't insist—at first, [illegible] with her in the dusk in a hammock, as I saw you and Tom doing the other night."

"Wouldn't you?" asked Kate, with calm derision. Mac laid down the picture, rose and shook himself.

"Well, Carter'll be furious if I'm not back by supper time. Good-by."

He came back, however, out of the glaring sunlight to say:

"I fear I must insist upon another thing. I'm not proud, but there's a look about Tom's clothes that drives me to despair when I contemplate my own raiment."

"Better set up a clothes brush; it" cheaper than—any other arrangement," interrupted Kate.

Tom groaned an emphatic assent to this proposition and Mac finally mounted his pony and took his way across the hot prairie toward the distant timber line which marked the course of the Nez Pique.

II.

This was in early June, and the Nortons saw no more of him during the month. Carter, Mac's foreman, whom Tom saw in town, reported: "Mr. John sho' gwine to beat hisself plumb out, de way he's gwine on. He's at dem ar' pumps and levees early an' late. Say, if de hull rice flat ain't flooded by du Fo'th o' July de debbil himself gwine be to pay."

It was in the dusk of one of the first July days that Mac rode to their gate.

"Good-by," he called, without dismounting.

They left the porch and came down the moonlighted walk for explanations—which he did not at once offer.

"What is that?" he asked at length, respectfully indicating with his whip the fleecy affair in which Kate had wrapped herself against the chill of the gulf breeze.

"A shawl. Nell made it for me at Christmas," she said, holding up a corner for his inspection.

"I've always thought of shawls as ugly, checked things," Mac commented, and then abruptly: "I'm going north to see—mother and the boys."

There was a curious pause in this announcement, as if its ending had been reconsidered. Mac's usual quiet seemed reinforced to-night by an added constraint, and after a little he rode away into the soft radiance of the southern moonlight.

The latter part of the week Kate received her usual letter from her sister Nell. The week after there was none, nor the week after that. Her vexation was becoming serious solicitude, when Tom brought her the following letter:

"MY DEAR KATE: We've been so busy since Mr. McRae came there hasn't been a moment to write letters. It was awfully nice of you to suggest his stopping off to see us. He talks to father by the hour about the country and to mother about you. He doesn't talk to me much, but watches me as if I were something unusual.

"Father and mother seem to like him, but I don't—much. I'll write more next time. He's going to-morrow. Love to Tom. NELL."

"P. S.—He's the strangest man I've ever seen. Yesterday I left him discussing tobacco on the front porch, 'high lift pumps' and all the rest of it, and he'll ask myself to the hammock under an old apple tree.

"Presently he followed me with a plan of your house he'd drawn for mother. There wasn't any place to sit except in the hammock or on the grass, and you know how I loathe bugs and worms, so I made room for him in the hammock. But before he sat down he leaned against the apple tree and laughed and laughed till I felt like a fool. He tried to make it up with me afterward by saying he remembered something you said to him once about swinging in a hammock. It must have been very funny. I don't think I like him at all. N.

"P. S.—Mr. M—— couldn't seem to remember any closets in your house. I asked him where you hid things. He said it must be on top of the armoir. What's an armoir? N."

Kate had barely time to catch her breath before Nell's promised letter came. It was as follows:

"MY DEAR KATE: Mr. McRae didn't go today, after all, but he is really going to-morrow. And is coming back in November. And we're to be married then. Tom, would you let Kate write to 'know how it all happened, for I don't know myself yet: only, mother has always said some of us ought to go down there to keep Kate company, and you know how self-sacrificing I have always been. I just told John I was writing to you. 'I'd give half my rice crop,' he said, 'to see Mrs. Kate's face when she reads your letter.' Good-by.

"NELL.

"P. S.—I think I do like him after all—a little. N."

Helping Them Out.

An old negro was halted after dark on one of the boulevards of New York by a man with a large club, who demanded his money or his life.

"What does all dis heah mean?"

"It means if you don't hand out your money I'll knock your head off your shoulders," and the robber spat on his hand and drew back to strike.

"Ef I had knowed yer war kerlectin' money for de perlitikle campaign I would hab hunted yer up and helped you out er the scrape long ago, for hit's a case of real distress," said the old negro, as he cheerfully handed over three poker chips, an aged bowie knife, and several other articles of bric-a-brac.—Jury.

—On the day when the courier brought the news of the signature of the peace of Amiens, Talleyrand thrust the impatiently awaited document in his pocket, went to the emperor, and engaged him in current affairs. When these were all disposed of, he said: "Now I have good news for you. Read!" "And you could not tell me this immediately?" exclaimed the astonished Napoleon. "Certainly not, for then you would listen to nothing else."

SPECIMEN CASES.

S. H. Clifford, New Cassel, Wis., was troubled with neuralgia and rheumatism, his stomach was disordered, his liver was affected to an alarming degree, appetite fell away, and he was terribly reduced in flesh and strength. Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured him.

Edward Shepherd, Harrisburg, Ill., had a running sore on his leg of eight years' standing. Used three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and his leg is sound and well. John Speaker, Catawba, O., had five large fever sores on his leg; doctors said he was incurable. One bottle Electric Bitters and one box Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured him entirely. Sold by J. J. Orr.

WHEN CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS LANDED

He was actually unable to buy a bottle of Parmelee's Sarsaparilla at any price at any drug store in America. Now you can buy it for 50 cents at almost any drug store. This shows how much more fortunate people are now than they were in Columbus' time. Parmelee's Sarsaparilla is a blood purifier of great merit, and a tonic of remarkable virtue. For every disease or condition coming from an impure state of the blood it is an absolute remedy. It acts with great effect upon the liver, keeping that most important organ in healthy activity. It braces up the system "all run down" from sluggish circulation or inactive secretions, and is in all respects a most valuable remedy. 50 cents. Sold by dealers.

HAMILTON'S COUGH BALSAM.

The best made. Guaranteed to give satisfaction or money returned by the dealer who sells it to you. 25 cents for large bottle. Sold by dealers.

A GOOD WAY TO BE MISERABLE

Is to be a sufferer from Piles. Parmelee's Pile Suppositories are an easy and sure cure. Hundreds testify to their efficiency. 50c a box. Sold by druggists.

A SURE CROP.

A writer in Farm and Fireside says "one of the surest crops on the farm is Dyspepsia. The daily life of the typical farmer is suggestive of indigestion and dyspepsia." The writer might also have added that one of the best remedies for poor digestion, and a preventive of biliousness, dyspepsia, and all the long train of ills which follow is Parmelee's Mandrake and Dandelion Bitters. A large bottle costs only 25 cents. Sold by dealers.

IT CURED HIM OF SALT RHEUM.

CARROLLTON, N. Y., Aug. 2, '92.
Last winter I was laid up with Salt Rheum in my ankles. After trying many other remedies without finding any benefit, I was practically cured by the use of Parmelee's Housebold Ointment. I heartily recommend it to all who are similarly afflicted.
A. G. PACE.

For all Sores, Cuts, Burns, Bruises, etc., we guarantee it to be the best ointment made. 25c a box. Sold by dealers.

A RHEUMATIC MONTH.

This is a time of year when Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and other pains of that character show at their worst. Have you ever tried Parmelee's Universal Liniment in such cases? It has wonderful soothing and curative qualities. Sold by dealers.

Spring is fickle—
Pearline is reliable. You can depend upon it to do your washing and cleaning with less work and more satisfaction than you have ever known before. It is the modern improvement on soap. You can depend upon its harmlessness, its efficiency, and its cheapness. You will depend upon it always, after you have tried it.

NATIONAL FINANCES.

Interesting Statistics Furnished by Treasurer Nebeker.

A Decrease of Over $37,000,000 in Revenues—Increase in the Public Debt—Estimates of the Money in the Country.

UNCLE SAM'S CASH.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—The treasurer of the United States, Hon. E. H. Nebeker, has submitted to Secretary Charles Foster the annual report on the operations and condition of the treasury.

The net ordinary revenues of the government for the fiscal year were $354,937,784, a decrease of $37,674,830 as compared with the year before. [illegible] a decrease of $10,349,354. The surplus revenues were thus cut down from $37,230,762 to $6,914,453, including the public debt. The total receipts for the year were $736,401,206 and the expenditures $634,019,289.

Considered with respect to the effects upon the treasury the receipts were divided into two general classes, of which the first, comprising the ordinary revenues, the receipts from loans and the deposits for the retirement of national bank notes, the cash available; while the second, arising from the issue of gold, silver and currency certificates, United States notes and treasury notes, tend to swell the assets of the treasury but do not affect the available balance. For the first of these classes the figures show an excess of $88,000,000 of expenditures over revenues in 1891, and one of upward of $27,000,000 in 1892. In the second class there was an excess of nearly $69,000,000 of receipts in the former year, and one of $80,000,000 in the latter. As compared with 1891 there was a saving of upward of $14,000,000 of interest, out of which a surplus was realized notwithstanding the cutting down of the revenues by legislation.

LIABILITIES.

On June 30, 1891, there stood charged to the treasury on the books of the register a balance of $726,222,332. Adding thereto the revenues of the year from all sources gives a total of $1,402,628,123 to be accounted for. Out of this was disbursed by warrant a total of $684,019,289, leaving a balance of $778,604,330 charged to the treasurer on June 30, 1892. In addition there were other liabilities arising from the postal revenues, from the deposits to the credit of disbursing officers from the 5 per cent. fund for the redemption of national bank notes and from various other sources. These, with sums of money collected but not yet charged to the treasurer on the books of the department, brought the total liabilities up to $777,854,945 at the former date and to $815,631,638 at the latter.

THE TREASURY.

Analyzing the true condition of the treasury and setting aside the trust funds, the treasurer shows that there was a working balance of cash and deposits in bank amounting to $207,110,451 at the beginning of the year and to $165,718,150 at the end. Of the former amount $119,000,000 and of the latter $114,500,000 was gold. The success which has attended the efforts of the department to maintain a strong gold reserve is considered satisfactory in view of the heavy disbursements. The amount of the public debt is given as $1,545,996,591 on June 30, 1891, and $1,588,464,144 on June 30, 1892. The loans resting on the credit of the United States were cut down from $1,005,805,500 to $968,218,840, while those secured by full deposits in the treasury increased from $540,160,031 to $620,245,304. There was a gratifying improvement in the condition of the debt produced by the reduction of the interest-bearing loans, the conversion of matured bonds into others payable at the option of the secretary of the treasury, and the extinction of a considerable part of loans payable on demand. The total net reduction of $37,587,719 in these items was effected by the application of the surplus revenues of the year, amounting to nearly $10,000,000, together with upward of $27,000,000 taken from the cash in the treasury.

MONEY IN THE COUNTRY.

According to the revised estimates the total stock of money of all kinds in the country on June 30 was $2,374,334,049, an increase of $50,000,000 in the year. By eliminating that part of the paper currency which is purely representative, consisting of certificates of deposites and treasury notes, the effective stock is found to have been $1,753,963,745, an increase of $70,000,000. The [illegible] history of the last year, however, has been peculiar, both in movement of gold, which has been increased, and in the other changes that commonly occur with the other changes of the season, but have this year been less marked. The increase of the effective stock of money from September to September was only $50,000,000.

PAPER CURRENCY.

The issues of United States paper currency amounted to $376,726,582, exceeding those of any previous year. Of the whole amount $298,000,000 took the place of like kinds and amounts destroyed, while $78,000,000 consisted of fresh issues. During the first six months there was an increase of upward of $37,000,000 in the denominations of $20 and under outstanding and during the last six months an increase of $36,000,000 in the denominations of $50 and over. The treasurer remarks that it would seem to be the proper policy to make provision for the periodic changes which appear to be natural, both in the amounts and the denominations of the paper currency required by the people.

BANK CIRCULATION.

There was an increase of over $20,000,000 during the year in the amount of United States bonds held for the security of national bank circulation and a decrease of $10,000,000 in the amount held as security for public deposits. A total addition of $1,664,000 was made to the par value of the securities composing the Pacific railroad sinking funds. In proportion to the volume of national bank notes in circulation the redemptions continue heavy, having amounted to upward of $69,000,000 in the fiscal year. A change of the regulations has been made by which fragments of notes, valued by the comptroller of the currency at less than face, are received unconditionally from the holders at the certified valuation.

The treasurer closes by calling attention to the labors of the commission appointed to investigate the methods of the safe and vault construction, with a view to improving the vault facilities of the department. The treasurer urges that prompt steps be taken to carry their suggestions into effect.

Carnegie Gives $9,000 to a Library.

AUGUSTA, Me., Nov. 28.—Andrew Carnegie has offered to give $9,000 of the $18,000 needed to complete the Bithgow library fund, and I. P. Randall, of this city, gives $1,000. Among other donors are James G. Blaine, Mrs. Emmons Blaine and G. W. Bradbury. The whole fund amounts to $44,000.

Seals Are Disappearing.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Capt. Healy, of the revenue service, in his report to the department, confirms the loss of the whaling bark Helen Mar, with forty of her crew. He says the seals are leaving the rookeries, and it is estimated that there are but 5,000 remaining at St. George.

More Immigrants Coming.

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Six Steamships landed 1,211 immigrants at Ellis island Saturday and 500 more are in the harbor waiting to be passed by the health officer. Among the latter are 228 that arrived on the Rhaetia from the interior of Germany.

Iowa's Vote for President.

DES MOINES, Ia., Nov. 28.—The official vote of Iowa for president was: Harrison, 219,373; Cleveland, 196,408; Weaver, 20,616; Bidwell, 6,322.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss

At a session of the Probate court for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate office, in the City of Adrian, on Monday, the 28th day of November, in the year one thousand eight hundred and ninety-two.

Present, Richard B. Robbins, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the estate of Cornelius Hoagland, deceased.

On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Charlotte Hoagland, widow of said deceased, praying for the probate of an instrument now on file in this Court, purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased, and codicil thereto annexed, and that administration of said estate may be granted to Charles Burridge, the executor named in said will, or to some other suitable person,

It is ordered, that Tuesday, the 27th day of December next, at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the city of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the TECUMSEH HERALD, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

THE HERALD FOR 1893.

For eighteen years last past, through good report and evil report, in prosperity and adversity alike, the HERALD has kept in "the middle of the road" in both a political and business sense. The record of the paper, under its present management, is well known, and nothing need be said on that point. Performance is better than promise. We have no special promises to make for the future, as the paper will speak for itself, as it has done in the past.

First and foremost, it will aim to be the best local newspaper in Lenawee County, and to hold its place as a household necessity in every family of Northern Lenawee. Though not a political organ in a partisan sense, the HERALD will always be found on the people's side in the great battle for equal rights and reduced taxation, and will continue to be an uncompromising advocate of tariff reform until that question shall be settled and settled right. All efforts to shake its business position and influence have proved unavailing, and it views the approach of 1893 with a serene confidence that the World's Fair year will be the most prosperous in its history.

Our Subscription rates next year will be only $1.10 within the County of Lenawee, if paid spot cash in advance. Beyond the County, $1.25 in advance. When payment is delayed an additional rate will be charged. We consider this a fair solution of the subscription problem. When subscribers desire accommodation they can afford to pay a reasonable bonus for that privilege. Here are our premium offers and club list for the coming year.

FIRST

The Herald and the American Farmer price $1.00, or,

The Herald and the Breeders' Guide, price $1.00, or

The HERALD and the Home Magazine (Mrs. Gen. Logan's paper), price 50 cents, with its cooking chart, price 50 cents, a total value of $2.50, for $1.50.

SECOND

The HERALD and the N. Y. World Almanac for 1893, which is the best statistical annual now published, both for $1.50.

THIRD.

The HERALD and Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, the regular $6.00 edition, half morocco bound, a total volue of $7.50 for $2.50. The book will be sent direct to the subscriber at his expense.

FOURTH.

The HERALD and the Great Divide, including a gem stone cabinet of 20 gems as a premium. Or the HERALD and the Home Maker, one of the best monthlies, all for $2.00.

FIFTH.

The HERALD and a bird's-eye view of the Columbian Exposition grounds, a beautiful lithograph 16 by 24 inches in size, suitable for framing, or

The HERALD and Henry George's great book, entitled, Protection or Free Trade, both for $1.25.

Old subscribers, as well as new, can avail themselves of these premium offers by paying all arrearages and one year in advance.

The New York Tribune concedes the election of Grover Cleveland, but promises to defend the Republican policy on Finance and protection, with all the ability it can command.

It was the discontent of the farmers which caused the Democratic victories of two years' ago. The Weekly Tribune addressing isself directly to them for the past two years, has carried on a campaign of discussion for their benefit, almost unparallelled in American journalism; and the result coupled with Whitelaw Reid's previous great service to farmers, has been seen in the fact that agricultural communities have stood faithful to the Republican party, in a campaign in which, in other localities the party went completely to pieces. This year, the Democratic leaders changed their tactics and excited discontent among workingmen. They pointed to the higher prices of farm products, and assured the workingmen of Northern cities that the British tariff system (that is to say, lessened protection to American Farming and Industry) would lower the prices of food and manufactured products, and the profits of 'monopolists' in this country, while at the same time maintaining the wages of labor, those wages being now the highest ever known in the United States. By false pretence, deception, and pandering to the lowest passions of uninformd men in large cities, they carried the country and elected a Democratic President and Congress.

The Tribune confidently awaits the result. Not for one moment, however, will the Tribune yield one inch of ground in the battle for American policies.

Roswell G. Horr's great articles will be among the features of The Tribune, the comihg year. Men of every political faith are invited to read them. They will state the Republican view with frankness, point out the probable conseqences of a change in the tariff policy of the country, and evade no issue, and conceal no fact, bearing upon the subjects discussed. Their thorough treatment of fundamental principles will aid every reader to a better understanding of profound and important issues.

A page a week will be devoted during 1893, to war stories and news of interest to Union veterans. Old soldiers, who have some experience to tell, which has not yet been printed, are asked to send the story to The Tribune for publication,

Farming has now become such an enormous interest in the United States, that there is an imperative necessity for making more of a specialty of the business interests of the Farmers of the country at large. Plans have been formed which ought to make The Semi-Weekly and The Weekly Tribune absolutely indispensable to every tiller of the soil during 1893.

A large number of entertaining features of general interest will also appear. 'How to succeed in Life,' 'Village Improvement,' special articles by brilliant men and women of high reputation, Chess and Checkers, and a hundred other things which cannot be recited in a brief prospectus, will appear on the Tribune's pages during 1893. The paper will have less politics and more of the thousand and one things which refresh the mind, entertain the imagination, and guide the reader in the prosecution of his business and social life.

The Tribune asks for reports as to the operations of Village Improvement Societies, from those who are acquainted with their operations.

An illustrated catalogue of excellent premiums will be sent free on application.

The Semiy-Weekly is particularly commended to the attention of general readers. It gives more of the keen incisive editorials, book reviews, foreign letters and other valuable features of The Tribune, than there is room for in the Weekly. The large type and broad columns make it the easiest paper to read.

To all who subscribe during 1892 for one year, the paper will be sent free for the balance of this year. Sample copies free., Weekly, $1.00; Semi-Weekly, $2.00

Friends of Agriculture, Industry and the Republican party, are invited to make up clubs for this paper in their location. There are four years' of trial, of new experiment, of discussion of great national topics, and of observation of the effects of Democratic supremacy before the country. The Tribune will lead in the presentation of the Republican view. The friends of the splended record of the Republican party, can aid in the final triumph of Republican principles by seeing that the people read the Republican side of the story.

THE TRIBUNE,
New York.

A Remarkable History.

We recently published a strongly commendatory notice of "Alden's Cyclopedia of History." In the interest of our readers we wish to repeat and emphasize what we said. A good Universal History ought to be in every home; this is certainly excellent, if not the very best for general use and reference ever published, covering all nations (except the United States, to be published separately) and from B. C. 500 to A. D. 1892. Certainly it is the cheapest historical work we have ever seen; but that is what readers generally will expect from Mr. Alden, who has done so much to place the highest class of literature within popular reach. To get such a vast amount of matter within such small compass the type used is necessarily small, but it is beautifully clear, and the paper, printing and binding are of the best. Send 10 cents to Mr. Alden and he will send you a sample volume of 160 pages, containing the history of several nations complete, by which you judge for yourself whether you want the entire work. His catalogue of choice books, 128 pages, sent post-paid for 2 cents, presents a wonderful feast for book lovers. Address John B. Alden, Publisher, 57 Rose St., New York.

MONTAGUE'S NOVELTY STORE.

A Slight Difference in Ages.

He—And so you were named after your mother?

She—Oh yes; of course mamma doesn't like it referred to, but it was a little while afterward.

Past and Present.

Mrs. Antique—In past times people called idiots "innocents."

Mrs. Uptodate—Yes, but things have changed since then. Now they call innocents "idiots."

She Was a Novel Reader.

Ethel—I hate to wake up in the middle of a dream, as I did last night.

Cordelia—Why?

Ethel—Because then I never find how it was going to end.

Better than Law.

Mr. Suburb—My neighbor has a big dog that we are all afraid of. What do you advise?

Lawyer—Get a bigger one. Five dollars, please.

Preserved in Spirits.

"You fell in love with your husband because you thought you could reform him, did n't you?"

"Yes, my dear; and it was a sour, sour mash for me."

A Gross Breach.

"Are the Wickses people of refinement?"

"No. They came to my house to dine the other night on a verbal invitation."

Back Again.

First Ghost—Hullo, Spookey—what are you doing now?

Second Ghost—O, I am back in my old haunts!

The Objects.

Stranger—What are the principal objects of interest here?

Hotel Clerk—Dollars; the interest is 60 per cent.

It Must Have Kept Her.

Jack—Is your mistress out?

Maid—She can't be, much; she and Mr. Earlybird have only just started playing tiddledywinks.

A Natural Result.

"Billy Barker has lost his digestion and gone crazy."

"That's natural. All of Billy's brains were in his stomach."

The Point of View.

Brassey—Your wife is a charming woman. I like her style.

Fender—You wouldn't if you had to pay for it.

Awfully Adjectival.

He—What do they mean when they say that a girl is desperately in love?

She—Why, they mean that she's in love.

The Reason Thereof.

Mrs. Bay—Your husband has suddenly grown fond of the children.

Mrs. May—Yes; their new French chaperon just arrived.

Woman's Way.

Heeler—If women had the ballot they would vote as they pray.

Wheeler—How is that?

Heeler—With their eyes shut.

A Well-Meant Suggestion.

Charlie—I asked Miss Manley to be my wife, and she declined.

Prunella—Ask her to be your husband, and see what she says.

On the Train.

News Agent—Truthpuckjudgeandlife out to-day!

Boston Spinster—Is that a Russian publication?

Another Pyrometer.

Still another form of pyrometer is described in the technical papers. This arrangement is based upon the well-known principle that two different metals in contact produce a current of electricity when the junction is heated, this current increasing in strength in proportion to the temperature of the junction; it follows that the current sent through a galvanometer becomes a measure of the temperature of the junction. If, therefore, such a junction is put in a hot place, say a furnace, and connected by wires to a galvanometer at a distance, the temperature of the furnace can be read off the scale, or as is done in this new instrument—recorded on a band of photographic paper by a beam of light reflected from the needle of the galvanometer. In view of these facts, resort to the employment of platinum for one metal, and an alloy of platinum with ten per cent of sodium for the other—a combination by means of which, it is found, the temperature can be correctly measured up to the melting point of platinum.

In Eighty-Eight Days.

A man in the Nishnabotna valley Iowa, has made a record of a corn crop grown and ripened in eighty-eight days from the time the seed was put into the ground. The yield of corn will be seventy-five to eighty bushels per acre. The ground on which the corn now stands was covered with water until June 10. From a part of it the water did not recede until June 15.

OUR WIT AND HUMOR.

GLIMPSES OF LIFE FROM THE HAPPY SIDE.

Some Pen Pictures of Our Many Failings as Delineated by the Funny Writers—Inspiring Incendoes for All of Us.

Useful.

Ferdie—They say the Chinese make a very fine lemonade out of ants.

Weeks—I should think it might be very nice—for picnics.

His Composition.

Mr. X—More extravagance! Do you think I'm made of money?

Mrs. X—Yes, dust!

Not that Meaning.

Buckton—She is a beautiful woman.

Nendick—Yes, but fond of her glass.

Buckton—You surprise me! A drunkard?

Nendick—Dear me, no! Fond of her looking-glass, I meant to say.

Handy.

Jess—I used to like poodles, but now I rave over pugs.

Jack—Those beats with the ring tails; why?

Jess—You can't think how much easier they are to carry.

A Matter of Punctuation.

Mrs. Hicks—This paper says the people who go to Chicago will have to use water which is extremely disagreeable.

Micks—Isn't there a comma after the word "water?"

Royal Service.

"The newspaper of to-day treats a man like a king."

"It does?"

"Yes—it places a dozen pages at his service every morning."

A Strong Recommendation.

Cotton Mills—Is Coaten Vest a good salesman?

Woolen House—The best there is. Why, that fellow could sell ready-made clothing to Ward McAllister.

More Like It.

Rumpley—I notice that your dance-hall was exposed in this morning's paper.

Chumpley—Exposed? Rot! It was advertised.

No Pipes Smoked Above.

English Arrival (pipe in mouth)—Good morning, St. Peter. Have apartments been reserved for me?

St. Peter—Sir, the smoking-room is down below.

One Better.

Football Manager—I have just got a very good "half-back."

Henpeck (whose wife has just returned)—Indeed? I have just got a better half back.

The Household Pest.

The cockroach is a thing of hate
To every thrifty dame;
He has no business on your plate—
But he gets there just the same.

A Misnomer.

"What unmeaning things most titles are!"

"Yes. An Alderman, for instance, is often called 'Honorable.'"

A Definition.

Maud—Pa, what's "blood-money?"

Papa—It's the money an heiress pays to a foreign nobleman.

A Confusion of Ideas.

Teacher—Who was Henry Clay, and what did he do?

Little Boy—He was the Englishman who introduced cigars into America.

Poor.

She—I hear that Cholly Swandown proves a very poor husband after all!

He—Why not? His rich wife allows him only a hundred a week!

Had None.

Country Hoss—How do you expect to keep off the flies with that docked tail?

City Hoss—I don't have to.

Popular.

Jinks—I wonder how Dinks got that black eye.

Binks—He told me he had been looking at stars. Popular fad, I fancy.

The Imperious Domestic.

Perks—Who is that lady driving with Mrs. Topbay up the avenue.

Burk—Her cook, I am told.

The Conscientious Druggist.

Small boy—Gimme some plaster.

Conscientious Druggist—Yes, my man; but we have so many kinds of plasters, intended for many different kinds of diseases. Whom is it for?

"Me mother."

"What is the matter with her?"

"Nawthin'."

"Then what does she want a plaster for?"

"She wants it for pop."

"Oh! What is the matter with your father?"

"Nawthin'."

"Then what does he want a plaster for?"

"Fer one o' the men wot works with him."

"Oh, I see. What is the matter with the man?"

"Nawthin'."

"Humph! What does he want a plaster for?"

"He was at our house las' night, an' he broke the top of our kitchen lamp, an' he's goin' to mend it for us."

"Eh? Then you want plaster of Paris."

"We don't keer where it's from, an' if you don't gimme the plaster an' stop kidding me wid fool questions, my dad will come 'round 'an knock de stuffin' out yer. See?"

Vice Versa!

A farmer called on friends in town,
They took him for an ass;
And as he went to bed they cried;
"Say, don't blow out the gas!"

So, when those friends returned his call,
Their poor health to revamp,
He called to them as they retired,
"Say, don't turn out the lamp!"

The Sick Irishman.

An Irishman was painting a bous green when the paint-pot fell to the sidewalk.

A woman chanced by. "Mercy! what's the matter?" she exclaimed.

And the small boy standing near shouted, "That Irishman up there has just had a hemorrhage."

Caused by the Fog.

In London.

"Was it George or Harry who called at the house last night, Emily?"

"I don't know, mother."

"Why, some one called."

"Yes, mother, but to-day it is so foggy that I really can't tell one man from another."

Papers Sometimes Necessary.

Mrs. De Fashion—Where's the morning paper?

Mr. De F.—What on earth do you want with the morning paper?

Mrs. De Fashion—I wish to see if the opera we heard last night was good or bad.

At the Opera.

Mrs. Vogner—Why, that's a curious arrangement! There are two rows of seats with their backs to the stage!

Mr. Vogner—Oh, they are reserved for theater parties!

A Natural Result.

Friend—I see you are still giving vast sums to charity. If you keep on much longer you will have nothing to leave your relatives.

Rich Man (who is weary of reading about will contests)—They can apply to the charities, you know.

Don't Always Rise.

Traveling Journalist (in Dugout City)—I presume an editor of a paper in a booming western town is pretty apt to rise, isn't he?

Editor Daily Boomer—N-o, not always. Sometimes the lynchers don't have any rope, and just shoot.

His Early Aim.

"It's funny to see what a fine shot Drewer is to-day. Why, when he was a boy he couldn't hit a barn-door."

"He couldn't? Well, that is surprising."

"Not at all. There weren't any barns around where he lived."

How to Get On.

Blinkers—How did that fool De Chapple get into the Four Hundred?

Winkers—His valet used to serve some one in the Prince of Wales' set. The Four Hundred admitted the valet, and then he introduced De Chapple.

Ready for Inspection.

New Boarder—Where is your mother, Bubby? She said she was going to show me a room.

Bubby—Mom will be here soon. She's up in that room now a-warmin' the thermometer.

No Use For Barbers.

Customer (in barber's chair)—So you haven't heard Von Thumper, the world famous pianist?

Barber—Naw. Does bianists neffer batronize me, an' zo I neffer batronize dem.

Wanders of Phrenology.

Phrenologist (delightedly)—My friend, you were born to command. Are you a soldier?

Dignified stranger—No, sor. Oi'm a janitor.

Woman and Burglar.

Mrs. Winks (looking up from the paper)—A woman out West shot a burglar and killed him.

Mr. Winks—Well! well! What was she a'ming at.

POVERTY AND PRIDE.

Mr. Minks—Have you called on the new neighbors next door?

Mrs. Minks—Indeed I haven't, nor I won't neither. They're the trashiest kind of people—poor as church mice, I'll warrant. They sends their washin' out.

"What of that?"

"I s'pose they is ashamed to show the rags in their own yard."

Got What She Wanted.

Papa—Where is the little dog I brought home to you yesterday?

Little Dot—I traded it to Tommy Traddles for his kitten.

Papa—Eh? You told me you wanted a dog.

Little Dot—Yes. Tommy told me he liked dogs better than cats. That's what I wanted a dog for.

Willing to Assist.

New Son-in-Law—Ahem! You remember, Mr. Oldchapp, you said that after we were married you would assist me in the matter of furnishing a house.

Mr. Oldchapp—Certainly, my boy, certainly. Come around the corner with me and I'll introduce you to a friend of mine who is in the installment business.

Beauty is a Curse.

Little Nell—Mamma says th' preacher says beauty is a curse. What does that mean?

Little Brother—That means if mens and womens was all ugly there'd never be any more fightin' and quarrelin'.

"Why wouldn't there?"

"'Cause nobody ud ever marry anybody."

An Observing Friend.

Winks—That job you have now is a soft snap, isn't it?

Jinks—Um—rather.

"Nothing at all to do, have you?"

"Well—er—not much."

"Good pay, too?"

"Very fair. How do you happen to know so much about my job?"

"I notice you stick to it."

What Two Girls Got.

Mrs. Muggs—My darter went to all them revival meetin' last week, and—she got a husband: reg'lar case of love at first sight. They're to be married next month. Did your darter get one, too?

Mrs. Puggs (sadly)—Naw, she didn't get nuthun but religion.

Very Like Grown Folks.

Little Dot—I made a doll's swing today, an' I asked Ethel May to lend me her doll to try it with, an' she wouldn't do it. She's just the meanest, stingiest thing I ever saw.

Little Jack—Why don't you use your own doll?

Little Dot—I did, and it might fall.

Burglar (appearing unexpectedly)—Lookin' fer anybody, gent?

Man of the House (on the warpath)—Ah—why—er—excuse me—yes—no—Why, you see, the fact is, the doctor—er—told me to take exercise with Indian clubs; I—er must have gotten his pistol by mistake.

The Astute Office Boy.

Office Boy—There was a man in the front office wanted to see you, but I felt purty sure he had a bill, so I told 'im you wasn't in.

Jinks—What made you think he had a bill?

Office Boy—Oh, he had a sneakin', hang-dog sort of a look.

Unavoidable.

Reporter—Was that accident unavoidable?

Railroad President—Certainly, sir, certainly. No one to blame. You see the watchman had two crossings to look after, half a mile apart. You can't expect a man to be in two places at once, can you?

A Smart Woman.

Mother—Mercy on us! How did you tear that lovely new suit of clothes all to pieces?

Small Son—I was throwin' stones at that new neighbor's cat, and it run under their barn, and then she gave me ten cents to crawl under and chase it out.

Well Worth Reading.

Roaming Journalist—I hear that the present owner of the Daily Blowhard is a rich old sausage, who made a fortune on hams. Does he ever write anything worth reading?

Blowhard Man—You just bet he does. He signs the checks.

Had a Good Time.

Mrs. Wayback—Did you go to the th-ater while you was in the city, Joshua?

Mr. Wayback—No, Mariah, I couldn't find no theaters so I chow. The only place I could find was a dime museum—but I saw that six times.

Girls Not Wanted.

Mother—Why don't you want to take your little sister a-long with you?

Little Boy—Little girls isn't any good at coasting. Every time they strikes the bumps an' gets thrown up in the air an' when they run into they cries

A Warning.

Col. Sword (late of the Steenth Cavalry)—Ah, good morning, Miss Dasher. Very fond of horse-back riding; I believe?

Miss Dasher—Very much so, indeed. Decidedly healthy exercise, don't you think?

Col. Swords—Yes; oh, yes! But don't carry it to excess; just see how my figure has been ruined by being so much in the saddle.

Ye Unreasonable Male Biped.

Husband (compelled to write a hurried business letter at home)—Where in creation is the ink?

Wife—In the front left hand corner of my workbasket. That's on the corner of the dressing-table in the north room up-stairs.

"Where's the paper?"

"I am just out, but I believe the girl has some. I'll see."

"Where are the pens?"

"Somebody stepped on the pen last week and I forgot to get another, but I'll send over to Mrs. Makeshift's and see if she has one. She is always borrowing mine."

"Huh! Any one might think no one in this house ever wrote a letter."

"Nonsense! There isn't a more voluminous correspondent anywhere than I am. You men can never wait a minute for anything. I'll warrant after I've half killed myself getting all the things together you won't write a dozen lines."

An Unfortunate Blunder.

Mrs. D'Avnoo—Oh, the awfullest thing has happened! Clara de Style, who never could deign to look at anyone in trade, has just discovered that the man she has married is a dry-goods clerk.

Mrs. D. D'Fashion—Horrors! I should think she might have found him out by his talk.

Mrs. D'Avnoo—That's just how the poor girl was deceived. He never seemed to know anything about anything, and she supposed of course he was a millionaire's son.

A Forgiving Disposition.

She (with coldly cutting severity)—I learned from one of your old schoolmates to-day that you once wrote a most absurdly love-sick poem about a young girl, and it was published in the Hightone magazine.

He—Y-e-s, my dear. The girl is now Mrs. Beefie.

"What! That big, fat, greasy thing with six children?"

"The same."

"Oh! Well, dearie, I don't mind."

His Love Cooling.

Anxious Mother—Dear me! What is the matter?

Bride—Boo-hoo! My husband doesn't—love me as much as he did. Boo-hoo-hoo!

Anxious Mother—Mercy on us! What has happened?

Bride—When he went do—down town this morning he only (boo-hoo), only kissed me seventeen times, boo-hoo-hooo!

Not Appreciated.

Cultivate [illegible]anger—You advertise for a man who can speak twenty-six languages?

Mr. Gotham—Yes, sir. The position is still open.

"May I ask concerning the matter of its duties?"

"Certainly. I own considerable property in New York, and I want a man to collect the rents."

Equipped for Travel.

Boston Maid (in Hub bookstore)—I am compelled to go to New York for an extended sojourn. Have you a New York guide?

Clerk—I regret to say, madam, that we have not.

Boston Maid—How unfortunate. Well give me [illegible] of American slang—New York [illegible].

At the Cantomime.

Dolly—The idea of the creature exposing herself like that! I should be ashamed of myself.

Priscilla—So should I—if mine weren't a better shape!

A Man of Note.

Mrs. Gadd[illegible]bb tells me her daughter is g[illegible] was [illegible]rry a man of note. Fr[illegible] not [illegible]eer. I heard she was engag[illegible] [illegible]mponist.

A Musical Instrument.

Tin Peddler (who has met with an accident)—What vill I do now? Effery wheel off my wagon is broke.

Summer Boarder (consolingly)—Leave the tins in the wagon just as it is and perhaps you can sell it to one of the boarding-house keepers for a piano.

In Kentucky.

Youth (eloping with the girl of his heart)—Judge, we would like you to join us.

The Judge—Thanks, I don't know who you are; but I never refuse to drink with a gentleman, be he friend or stranger. I'll be with you in one minute.

He'd Had Some Experience.

She (on the hotel veranda)—You had no business to do that.

He.—I am engaged to you. Why should 't I kiss you?

She—But people are looking.

He.—That's why I did it. I am determined that you shall at least return my bow when we get back to the city.

Had Thought of It.

Young Man (who thinks of marrying)—Father, I—er—presume you know—er—the Bible says it is not good for man to be alone?

Rich Old Gentleman (a widower)—Yes, I've been thinking of that. Besides, a boy like you ought to have a mother over him anyhow, as I told the Widow Dash only yesterday.

A Base Slander.

Winks—Folks say you always leave immediately after the sermon, so as to escape the contribution box.

Jinks (hotly)—It's a base slander! The only reason I start so early is simply to get first pick of the umbrellas.

A Green Hand.

Father—I'd rather you would not go sailing with that young man. I'm afraid he does not know how to manage a boat.

Daughter—Dear me, why do you think so?

Father—He wears a yachting suit.

Meandering Jewelry.

Boy—Say, mister! want to buy a collar-button? I found one.

Gentleman—I dropped one yesterday at Broadway and Fulton street. Where did you find that?

"Liberty street ferry."

"Then it must be mine."

A Considerate Corporation.

Irate Passenger (who has managed to board a car that didn't stop)—Say, suppose I'd slipped and lost a leg, then what?

Conductor (kindly)—You wouldn't have to do any more jumpin' then. We allers stop fer a man with a crutch.

High Pressure Civilization.

Stranger—I don't see how an old man can get around New York without being run over.

New Yorker—By the time a man gets old in New York, he's rich enough to have a carriage, or else he's in a lunatic asylum.

Not About Giants.

Little Dick—Tell us about the giants, Mr. De Talk.

Guest—I don't know much about giants, my boy.

Little Dick—That's queer. Papa said he heard you tellin' Sis some tall stories.

Forgot Herself.

Little Girl—Shall I invite Lucy Locket to my party?

Mamma—Why shouldn't you?

Little Girl—I dunno, only I forgot an' invited everybody else, and if I don't say it somebody it won't be exclusive.—Good News.

Very Disagreeable.

Summer Belle—There go two of the most disagreeable men I've met this season.

Friend—Are they? Why?

Summer Belle—One of them stares me out of countenance and the other won't look at me at all.

A Girl.

Neighbor—And so you have a little baby at your house? Is it a boy or a girl?

Little Boy—Mamma thinks it's a boy, but I guess it'll turn out a girl. It's always cryin' 'bout nothin'.

Doesn't Last Long.

Mrs. Gotham—The paper says an Indiana State board is trying to prevent the marriage of idiots.

Mr. Gotham.—What nonsense! They soon get over it.

Regular review and annual election of officers of Hendershot Tent No. 467 next Tuesday evening. Let all be present. This is one of the most prosperous tents of the Maccabees in the State.

Don't forget the school entertainment Saturday evening, Dec. 17. It will consist of recitation by Miss Vreeland, of St. Johns, late of New York City; violin music by Miss Bailey, of Macon; recitations by little Sylvia Pilbeam, of Blue Ribbon fame, besides plenty of good chorus music. Admission 20c. and 10c.

Just the place!
Just what I want I want!!
Everything new this year!!!
Where?
Why, those Christmas presents at the drug store, of course.

NEW ROUTE TO THE NORTHWEST

On and after Monday, November 28th 1892, the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan Railway's new car ferry, "Ann Arbor No. 1," will make daily trips between Frankfort, Mich., and Kewaunee, Wis.

This boat will carry freight cars across Lake Michigan, making the trip in 6 hours, so that all freight shipped by this route will be carried through without breaking bulk, as has been necessary heretofore with freight handled across the Lake.

As this is the shortest route to the northwest, it should be well patronized by Michigan shippers.

HOLIDAY RATES.

For Christmas and New Years Holidays, the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan R'y., will sell excursion tickets between all stations on its line at which tickets are sold, also to points on several connecting lines at one and one third fare for the round trip, tickets will be good going Dec. 24th, 25th, 26th, and 31st, and Jan. 1st and 2nd, and good returning until Jan. 3d, inclusive.

Cleveland's Cabinet.

Politicians are already figuring on the personnel of President-elect Cleveland's Cabinet. Although Michigan did not give him her entire electoral vote, it is loudly whispered that a place will be given one of her most distinguished sons and that he will travel on one of the new 1,000-mile family tickets issued by the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan Ry. They are good for the purchaser and members of his family and are now on sale at all ticket offices of the Company. Price $20.00.

"Our gardener would make a good villain in a melodrama." "Why so?" "Because he is always laying out plots that amount to nothing in the end."

Thanksgiving Reunion.

Thanksgiving and the forty-seventh annual reunion of the Martha Osgood society was celebrated at the home of Mrs. Geo. Osgood, Nov. 24th, 1892.

Early in the morning Grandma Martha, with her children, grandchildren and great grandchildren, began to gather for the festivities of the day. To reunite kindred hearts for the 47th time, and thank God for all the blessings of the past; that the dear old grandma, now in her 86th year, had been spared so long, and that through all the year only one chair had been made vacant. But for sickness which caused the absence of J. S. Osgood and wife, of St. Johns, and Mrs. Lester Osgood, our happiness would have been complete, and our hearts were more than filled with gladness by the unexpected arrival of Messrs. Clarence and Charles Smith, of Lodi, N. Y.; also Josiah Osgood and wife and Omer Osgood, of Morenci; J. S. Osgood, wife and daughter, of Toledo, Ohio; Elmer Osgood and family, of Britton: Geo. Miller, Clarence and Daisy Osgood, of St. Johns, and Mrs. H. N. Hand were in attendance. Another pleasing feature of the day was a beautiful box of flowers sent by express from the Smalley Bros., of Bay City. It contained 47 white carnations to represent the 47th reunion, one large chrysanthemum for Grandma, five beautiful roses for the little girls and boys, and a large white lily for the vacant chair. After doing ample justice to a bountiful dinner of roast turkey, oysters, and all the other good things that accompany a Thanksgiving dinner, the meeting was called to order by the president. The program as given below was on cards very neatly printed by J. D. Estes, of Corunna, an old friend of the family.

Adjourned to meet in one year.

ONE WHO WAS THERE.

The December Cosmopolitan.

In view of the fact that Sir Edwin Arnold will very likely be the next poet-laureate, one turns with interest to his most entertaining article in the December Cosmopolitan on a "Japanese Watering Place." The same number contains seven portraits of Tennyson and interesting views of his late home and surroundings. A feature of the number is twenty-four portraits of Parisian journalists, with sketches of their work. The Cosmopolitan will mark its first edition of 150,000 copies—that for January—by the offer of 1,000 free scholarships. In return for introducing the Cosmopolitan into certain neighborhoods the Cosmopolitan offers to any young man or woman free tuition at Yale, Vassar, Harvard, or any of the leading colleges, schools of art, music, medicine or science. They send out a pamphlet on application telling how to obtain one of these free scholarships.

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

MOTHER'S FRIEND is the greatest blessing ever offered child-bearing women. I have been a midwife many years, and in each case where Mother's Friend has been used, it has accomplished wonders and relieved much suffering. It is the best remedy for rising of the breast known and worth the price for that alone. Mrs. M. Brewster, Montgomery, Ala.

The World's Columbian Exposition Illustrated.

For December will be especially interesting to all the citizens of this State. In addition to its usual amount of authentic general World's Fair information, it has a large and beautifully executed engraving of our State Building as it will appear when completed. This engraving alone is worth much more than the cost of the whole copy. It has many large photographs of the members of our State Board, with their complete biographies. This truly great and unexcelled magazine is published simultaneously in English, German, Spanish and French. Price 25 cents a copy. Subscription price, $3.00 for 12 copies. Published semi-monthly in October, 1892. Send $1.50 and receive all the magazines from July, 1892, to January, 1893, 10 in all, which cover one of the most interesting periods in the history of the Exposition. Address J. B. Campbell, Pres., 159 and 161 Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

Wedding Bells.

Married, Dec. 7th, 1892, at the home of the bride's grandfather, Thos. Butler, in East Macon, by the Rev. J. E. Gulick, Mr. Schuyler C. Easlick and Miss Rose Pilbeam, both of Macon.

The large company present to witness the marriage ceremony attested the feelings of genuine friendship and esteem that are cherished for the contracting parties by their friends. The sumptuous feast prepared and enjoyed by all the guests and the numerous valuable presents received spoke the good will and best wishes of the many friends gathered. The following is a list of the presents:

Just What is Wanted.

Business is alive to a great coming event, and preparations of all sorts for the Columbian Exposition in 1893 are active and earnest. Just what is wanted of a unique kind, has happily already made its appearance, and we have before us "The Official Portfolio of the Columbian Exposition," illustrated from Water color Drawings.

This Portfolia is a rare and beautiful exponent of the main architectural features of the Great Exposition at Chicago in 1893. The fourteen magnificent structures are faithfully exhibited, while the Bird's-eye View gives a realistic glance at the lay of the grounds, with their principal buildings, lagoons, etc. The illustrations are exact reproductions, in water color effects, of the original drawings, made especially for this purpose from the official plans, by America's best known water color artist Charles Graham. A copy of this exceptionally fine production, will be sent to any address upon receipt of 10 cents in postage stamps, by Charles A. Vogeler Co., Baltimore, Md.

A WEEK'S RECORD.

Trusts Formed, Mills Closed, Prices Raised and Wages Reduced in Artificially Stimulated Industries.

It is the claim of protectionists—as ridiculous as it is general—that protection tariffs tend to destroy monopolies and trusts, to increase production, to lower prices and to raise wages. Tariff reformers take a different view on all these points and base their opinions less upon the theory and more upon facts, that is, they have recently called the attention of the country to a list of 100 tariff trusts; to a list of 500 wage reductions in protected industries since October, 1890; to hundreds of articles on which both the duty and the price have been increased; to hundreds of mills and factories closed by these tariff trusts to restrict production, and to numerous other similar facts. Readers of trade papers need a complete table of facts on the tariff reform side of this question. Here are a few taken from the weekly Iron Age of August 4, 1892. It should be remembered that the greatest of all protected industries is that of iron and steel manufactures:

1. It publishes a list of eight big iron and steel combines and of several smaller ones of recent date. These embrace the manufacture of steel rails, structural steel, crucible and open-hearth steel, steel billets, wire rods, wire, wire nails, boiler and tank plates, armor plates, cut nails, slabs, pig iron, bar iron, etc.

2. It discusses "the tactics of the coal combine," which has advanced prices of anthracite coal several times during the last few months and which will continue to make advances "from time to time in a sort of arithmetical progression, with the apparent, if not openly avowed, design of reaching a certain maximum—say, $5 a ton for stove—before the snow flies."

Of course the duty on bituminous coal, which competes with anthracite, makes it easier for the coal combine to reach "a certain definite maximum."

3. It says, "The latest combine in the mercantile world is a fur pool with $10,000,000 capital, in which nearly all the firms in the trade have become interested." This is the George W. Treadwell trust which has a monopoly of the seal fur industry of Alaska and also of the dyeing of furs, and which can adjust prices in this country up to the limits of a duty.

4. It announces firmer and upward prices for wire and cut nails and a reduction of 5 to 10 per cent. in the scale of wages for wire drawing for 1892 and 1893. Also that a large number of wire and cut nail mills are shut down.

5. It says: "The Continental tube works, at Frankstown and Pittsburgh, have closed down for an indefinite period," because "the firm did not feel justified in buying skelp iron in the open market at the recent advance in prices."

6. "On account of the depression in the iron market, the Isabella Furnace Co., operating the Isabella furnace at Etna, Pa., have banked down one stack and will probably bank another during the present week."

7. "Addyston Pipe works, the largest in the country, have posted a notice of a shut-down for an indefinite period."

8. "The Dunbar Furnace Co., at Dunbar, Pa., operating the two Dunbar furnaces, closed them down on Saturday, July 30, for an indefinite period." Closing down due to the "present depression existing in the pig iron trade."

9. The Keystone Horseshoe Co., of Philadelphia, have started upon three-fourths capacity after a shut-down of three weeks, during which time the workmen concluded to make the required "concessions" necessary to resume work.

10. Recent advances, amounting to $3 and $4 per ton have been made in structural steel.

11. There is a "better tone to prices" of barbed wire and "some of the manufacturers have withdrawn their quotations."

12. "It is estimated that about 15,000 men are now idle, causing some eighty buildings in course of construction to be tied up" in New York City.

13. "It is estimated that during the present month a perceptible increase in prices will be noticed" for window glass.

The Iron Age attempts editorially to explain the grave necessity which exists for "the leveling of wages" in the iron industry. It says both prices and wages have been on an artificial basis, and that "with the disappearance of artificial values the artificial standard of wages also falls."

These items—such as occur every week—give a fair idea of industries propped up by a tariff. Unsteady and fluctuating prices and production, combinations of capital to restrict production, raise prices and reduce wages, labor unions to resist the reductions, strikes, boycotts and labor riots—all paid for in the end by the consumer who votes to sustain this unnatural and unhealthy system of providing for our wants.

TARIFFS, TRUSTS AND TRAMPS.

It is Just as Plain That Our Tariff Promotes Trusts as That Drunkenness Breeds Crime.

The June supplement of the New York World, edited by Hon. John De Witt Warner, is made up of "one hundred samples" of tariff trusts, under the heading: "Conspiracies to Crush Competition, Restrict Product, Raise Prices and Lower Wages." These trusts embrace most of the articles on which we have effective tariff duties. Among the officers of these trusts will be found hundreds of names published in the New York Tribune's list of millionaires, thus in part, at least, answering the Tribune's question as to whether or not the tariff makes millionaires. We quote the following from Mr. Warner's preface to these articles:

"Trusts are a consequence of human selfishness working under the new conditions of industrial development. Not all of them are consequences of the tariff any more than all crime is a result of drink. It is just as plain, however, that our tariff promotes trusts as that drunkenness breeds crime.

"For, in any industry, whose product our government 'protects' by a tariff upon similar articles made abroad, it is in the power of home manufacturers to form a combination, and, by shutting off foreign competition, to raise prices to the limit of the tariff. Then, if they can get enough of the product under their control, they can keep prices at that limit. Then, if they can get enough of the product under their control, they can keep prices at that limit. Then, if they can get enough of the product under their control, they can keep prices at that limit

Daily Proceedings in the Fifty-Second Congress.

A Summary of the Work Being Done by the National Lawmakers in Senate and House—Bills Introduced and Passed.

IN THE SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—In the senate yesterday, after the president's message had been read, bills were introduced to repeal all statutes relating to supervisors of election and special deputies; for the suspension of immigration for one year, and to create a bureau in the department of agriculture for the giving of public information as to the prices and supplies of live stock.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—A bill was introduced in the senate yesterday by Senator Hill (N. Y.) to repeal the Sherman silver purchase act of July 14, 1890. Senator Cullom (Ill.) presented a petition to limit the free entry of wearing apparel the output of foreign manufactories.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—The senate spent exactly one hour in session yesterday, and that time was about equally divided between executive and legislative business. The former had reference to the pending claims treaty with Chili, which treaty was ratified and confirmed.

THE HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—In opening the house with prayer yesterday Chaplain Milburn touchingly referred to the double affliction which has within such a brief time visited President Harrison. The president's message was read and a bill was introduced for the better protection of commerce and to establish a national quarantine; also a bill to change our monetary system, reduce interest, fix the unit of value, supply the states with a circulating medium, and for other purposes. Mr. Outhwaite (O.) announced the death of Representative John G. Warwick, and in respect to the memory of the deceased the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—In the house yesterday a bill was introduced to provide for the perpetuation of the national banking system and the restoration of state bank notes on a safe basis, also a bill for the establishment of a uniform revenue customs duty upon sugar and the abolishment of the payment of sugar bounties.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—In the house yesterday the annual report of the secretary of the treasury was received and referred to the committee on ways and means. Mr. Caldwell (O.) introduced a bill to reduce postage on first-class mail matter to one cent per ounce.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—In the house yesterday the public printing bill was passed and a bill was introduced to reduce postage on first class mail matter, except postal cards, to one cent per half ounce. Mr. Andrews (Mass.) presented the petition of Rev. Phillips Brooks and others asking for the repeal of the Geary Chinese act. The secretary of the treasury sent word that the deficiencies of the government for the current fiscal year were estimated at $14,636,520, of which $10,500,000 is on account of pensions. Adjourned to the 12th.

HUNDREDS ARE DESTITUTE.

Homestead Relief Committee Issues an Appeal for Aid.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 12.—The Homestead relief committee has at last organized. A general meeting was held Friday night and the appeal drawn up by the subcommittee was adopted. It states there are 218 families of 870 persons in Homestead on the verge of destitution. Less than 800 of the 3,800 strikers have been taken back into the mill. It was decided to ask for the remainder of the $10,000 raised by Homestead for the Johnstown sufferers. The balance is in the hands of the local committee, having never been used.

FOUR MEN HANGED.

Two White Men and Two Negroes Executed at Louisville, Ky.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Dec. 10.—At sunrise yesterday Dennis McCarthy and Stephen Hite (white) and Grant Thomas and Nelson Lewis (colored) were hanged in the jail yard for murder. This is the first quadruple hanging in this state. McCarthy killed his wife. Hite stabbed Albert Baurman to death. Thomas murdered Birdie Coleman and Lewis shot George Dean.

A Frightful Plunge.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—Charles Chanter, a botanist who was engaged in the horticultural department of the world's fair, met a frightful death in the Masonic temple Sunday. He fell from the fifteenth story to the basement, his body being mangled almost beyond recognition. Mr. Chanter attempted to alight at the fourteenth floor just as the elevator started upward and fell before the cage could be stopped.

Four Years in Prison.

BURLINGTON, Ia., Dec. 12.—Frank Swards, the tramp who mutilated the limb of little Jesse Mahler, of Canton, Ill., for the purpose of compelling him to beg from town to town, pleaded guilty in the district court and was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary. The lad's arm is bent double from the inhuman treatment, and he will never be able to use it again.

The Vote in Massachusetts.

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—The official vote of the state at the recent election was: Harrison, 202,814; Cleveland, 176,813, a republican plurality of 26,001. Russell's plurality for governor over Haile is 2,534. The article of amendment to the constitution abolishing property qualification for the office of governor was adopted by 141,891 yeas to 85,048 nays.

Missing Heir Declared Legally Dead.

GALENA, Ill. Dec. 10.—Theodore Richardson, the missing heir to $60,000, has been declared legally dead in the county court and his estate has been ordered divided between his four brothers and sisters. The whereabouts of the man have been unknown for thirty years.

SINGLE TAX DEPARTMENT.

Effect of the Single Tax.

All wealth being, in the last analysis, the product of land and labor, the whole secret of its just distribution lies in securing to every man the full reward of the free application of his labor to natural opportunities. Any laws, therefore which tend to restrict the use of such opportunities—enabling some to use them more freely than others—will result in an unfair distribution of the wealth produced. Remove such restrictions, equalize the benefit of natural opportunities, and a just distribution of wealth will follow without further legislation to that end.

Under our system of private ownership in land we find mines wholly or in part shut down; great water power unused; thousand of acres of arable land untouched by the plow; more than one-third of Manhattan Island unbuilt upon; while thousands of men are clamoring for work, and while thousands more, painfully toiling for scanty wages, are forced to contribute from their pittance towards taxes on thrift and production, exacted to replace the natural community fund now taken by individuals.

But let it be understood by the owners of all valuable natural opportunities—whether of mines or water power, arable lands or city lots—that they must pay over to the community the full rental value of their monopoly, and they find themselves obliged, in order to make such holdings possible with profit, to develop them to their utmost capacity. With the community-fund in the community's treasury, there is an end of taxes on the products of labor; and facilities for the production of all commodities are consequently so increased that, together with the pressing need of capital for labor, comes the ability of labor to employ itself without the aid of capital. Labor, not work, would then be the scarcity, and an immediate consequence would be a rise in the wages of even the unskilled labor.

This increase in the purchasing power of labor, coincident with the cheapening of commodities, soon enables all to call for the comforts and adornments of life as well as for bare necessaries, again raising wages by fresh demand for labor, while indefinitely extending the field for its exertions. This action and reaction must go on, labor costing more and more, and the things produced by labor less and less, until—through no legislative interference, paternal or otherwise, but simply through the unhampered action of the laws of production and consumption—the laborer, always and everywhere, receives the full reward of his labor.

Under such conditions nothing but indolence and vice can lead to want. Not grinding poverty, but unanxious competence must be the lot of every worker who enjoys the full product of his work; while monstrous fortunes cease to be a menace when no man can appropriate the wages of another, or receive, unless by gift, more than he earns.

To bring about such a consummation who would not devote himself?—Margaret S. Littell.

Some Object Lessons.

The following experiences are plain illustrations of the rewards of land speculation, and of the prevailing ideas of assessment, and I therefore offer them to the readers of the Standard. It will be seen that the evils here typified might have been considerably ameliorated by a just and strict application of present laws, and I am quite sure that workers for the single tax cause can hardly put forth their efforts to better effect than by trying to get the present laws rightly executed. Ninety-nine per cent. of the assessors of town property, some in ignorance and some in lack of conscience, sport with the laws of taxation, virtually changing them from lot to lot, from street to street. There is no law for assessing unimproved lots, and yet this practice is well nigh universal. I should be happy to join a club which should make its object that of trying to beat into the heads of assessors the fact that vacant lots are "used" just as much as lots that are occupied, and that speculation is a use that does not deserve special favoring.

In 1881, in Norfolk, Va., where I was at that time working as principal of a private school, I attended an auction of lots in Brambleton, a suburb not then made a part of the city. I bought for $55 one of the last two lots that were sold. Thirty-six lots had been knocked down to a wealthy gentleman at an average price of about $35. The rest were bought by intending builders, who, like myself, were looking for lots whereon to make homes for themselves.

In the course of a few years, houses sprang up as by magic. The streets were graded, sidewalks laid, and Brambleton became the growing quarter. My lot being but thirty feet front, I concluded that I wanted more land. I therefore bought 125 feet, farther out, at $5 a foot, and sold the former lot. This thirty feet, for which I had paid $55, brought readily $725 cash.

Meantime, the thirty-six lots bought by the rich man for speculation were growing in weeds and value, and daily becoming more and more an eyesore to the community. I knew of his refusing $800 for a lot that had cost him about forty; and yet he was making no contribution to such improvements as grading and sidewalks, which were carried on largely by the voluntary contributions of those who were building houses around his vacant lots. When approached by a would-be purchaser, his reply was that he was saving his property for his son—a boy in knee pants. He could well afford to hold the land, since, as being considered unproductive, it was assessed at an insignificant amount.

That struck me as queer. Here was a man who was a positive drawback to the progress of the place, and yet making out of it some thousands per cent. As to myself, while I had contributed my due share to the grading of the street on which my lot was located, I thought it remarkable that I should somehow get more for nothing than I could make by three months work in the school-room.

On the new lot which I had bought I commenced to make some improvements. Having put around it a fence at a cost of $80, I leveled the land, sowed it with grass, planted two dozen trees of rare variety, and thus at a cost of about $200 I made it look like an attractive building lot, instead of a ridged field. How unwise this was was soon shown by the arrival of the assessor. Because of these improvements the lot was assessed at $2,250. I might not have given a second thought to this valuation but for a contrast. Opposite my lot a speculator had bought five acres. The land was still in cultivation, so that it looked like farm land. Although it lay between my lot and the city, and, therefore, nearer to population, and more desirable, its assessment was at a rate just one-tenth as high as mine. This again struck me as queer. I felt that I had been punished for building a fence and planting trees.

Subsequently I built a house, which was welcomed as a great improvement to that locality. The vacant lots adjoining my property were owned by a gentleman in New York city. His agent told me, in a delightful innocence, that I had doubled their price. This again struck me as queer; that a poor school teacher in Virginia should add hundreds to the wealth of a man in New York, whom he had never so much as seen.

The queerness of these object-lessons was fresh in my mind while I was reading and rereading "Progress and Poverty," and they helped me to appreciate some of its revelations.

As I read on, I could not but see how the homely events that had been going on before my eyes in that corner of old Virginia were interwoven with the greatest social problem of the day. Since that time, whether in Virginia, or Missouri, or Louisiana, or New Hampshire, I have found no lack of similar instances. The consolation is that, wherever I have been, I have found an increasing number of those who appreciate the exposition of the master who has thrown his light upon the injustice of a system which fosters such transactions.—Prof. James H. Dillard.

Interrogation Points.

The owner of a small piece of ground, forty feet, fronting on Randolph street, in Chicago, has executed a lease for the use of it by another party for the unusually long term of 198 years. The annual rental to be paid for the use of this little piece of earth is $8,000. The total in 198 years will be $1,584,000. The "owner" of the ground has been holding it vacant for a long time, waiting for just such an opportunity as has now opened up before his delighted vision. He has not improved the land, but has generously permitted other people to improve the surrounding land in innumerable ways, thereby steadily enhancing the value of his particular holding. And now the city is so big and growing so rapidly that he is able to lease his ground, as above stated, to a man who will improve it and use it. Of course Chicago and every other growing city is honeycombed with such object lessons, but I select this one merely as a basis for a few plain, pertinent questions, which, possibly, the single-tax-hating Tribune would like to answer:

Was the rental value of the ground mentioned created by the present individual owner?

If not by him, was it created by the community; that is, by all the people who unitedly have made Chicago what it is?

If that value was created by the energy and industry of the community as a whole, does it not justly belong to the community?

If not, why not?

If ground rent rightfully belongs to the community, how does the community "rob" anybody, or "confiscate" anybody's property, by taking for public use that which the public made, owns and needs?

Is not the "robber" or "confiscator" the individual who appropriates to his own use that which belongs to the public?—Ralph E. Hoyt.

Cobden and Land Reform.

The reformation of the land system had not become a political question in the days of Cobden, and when he thought the time had arrived to make it so, the hand of death was upon him. In the last speech he ever made he said; "If I were twenty-five or thirty years instead of twice that number, I would take Adam Smith in hand, and I would have a league for free trade in land as we had a league for free trade in corn." Volumes have been written to explain what Cobden meant, for he died a few days after saying that, but the comments are speculations only. What he meant will never be definitely known. That he intended a radical change in the land system is very likely. First, because he was a radical in opinion and practice, and secondly, because in a hundred speeches he had shown his hatred of landlordism and his contempt for landlords. His ridicule of their pretensions turned their wine into vinegar, and he feared them above all other men. One night in the house of commons, when they were masquerading as the "agricultural interest," he said: "A landlord is no more an agriculturist than a shipowner is a sailor.—Gen. Trumbull, in American Journal of Politics.

Another Cry for the Single Tax.

If the single tax system should be adopted, we would not now hear of half as many complaints about the unjust taxation of personal property. Take for instance East St. Louis this year. The assessor there has returned as money loaned out by its people the small sum of $300. There is to-day $30,000 loaned out by the citizens of East St. Louis. Therefore, we say, it would be a blessing to the people if nothing was taxed but land. Let personal property go untaxed, and the question of equalization of taxation will be solved.—Mascoutah, (Ill.) THE MISSIONARY WORK.

The Annual Meeting of the W. F. M. Society of the M. E. Church.

The Nineteenth annual meeting of the Adrian District W. F. M. Society of the M. E. Church was held in Adrian Wednesday and Thursday, Nov. 16th and 17th, 1892. Promptly at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, the meeting was called to order by the President, Mrs. Page. The devotional exercises were conducted by Mrs. Frost, of Ann Arbor. The President then gave a few words of welcome, which made all feel at home. She also urged a more earnest work in Adrian district.

Rev. J. M. Kerridge, of Adrian, and Rev. Palmer, of Fairfield, were introduced and spoke words of encouragement and cheer.

The committees of different departments of the work gave very encouraging reports. The minutes of the last district meeting were read and accepted.

A paper by Mrs. Mary A. Towne, of Rollin, "My Responsibility," was read; also a reading by Mrs. Hurry, of Tecumseh.

Miss Daisy Buck, of Adrian, favored us with a solo, "Papa, what would you take for me?" which was beautifully rendered.

The Mite box committee, Mrs. Conklin, gave a grand report, which was accepted and committee continued for another year.

Mrs. Johnson, of Ann Arbor, reported three hundred dollars memorial fund on hand.

The Bureau of Exchange was reported by Mrs. E. C. Towne, of Rollin.

Mrs. Cushman, Corresponding Secretary, reported that $1,100 had been raised in Adrian district during the year—$4.00 more than last year. This report was accepted and the Doxology sung.

The Epworth choir had charge of the singing for Wednesday evening. Rev. Ramsdell, of Clinton, conducted the devotional exercises.

Mrs. Benson, of Adrian, gave the address of welcome. Response by Mrs. Johnson, of Ann Arbor. She had arranged with the ladies to rise as soon as Mrs. Benson was seated. They all remained standing while she gave the response.

Little Daisy Buck again d us with a solo.

A recitation, "Charley McCabe," was given by Mrs. Geo. Knight, of Adrian.

Rev. Kerridge gave an address, "Divine Hand in Missions." He told of the many problems that must be solved before our missionary work can prove a success. After this stirring address, which lasted just one hour by the watch, a collection was taken and the benediction pronounced by Rev. Kerridge.

The Thursday morning service opened with a love feast conducted by Mrs. E. C. Towne. Though it was stormy without it was all peace and sunshine within; such earnest and encouraging testimonies were enough to inspire all present to a better and more useful life.

Mrs. Wm. Smith, of Tecumseh, brought greetings from the W. C. T. U. Convention, then in session at Ridgeway. Mrs. E. C. Towne was asked to send a response to this greeting.

The Memorial service was conducted by Mrs. Harding. Five deaths were reported, two from Ann Arbor, one from Adrian, one from Clinton, and our own beloved sister Burnett, from Tecumseh.

Rev. L. P. Davis, Presiding Elder of Adrian district, was introduced. Although a stranger to nearly all present, his few pleasant remarks left the impression that he was wil ng to help in any good work.

The reports of auxiliaries were called for and nearly all responded, either by delegates or by sending in their reports to the corresponding secretary. These reports were all good and showed a growing interest in the work. The same officers were elected for another year, with the exception of Mrs. L. P. Davis as organizer, in place of Miss Franc Baker.

"Is it Children's day in Heaven?" was sung by little Daisy Buck and a paper, "Opportunities and Obligations," was read by Mrs. Cushman, of Sharon. Mrs. Conklin reported that she had distributed 557 mite boxes for Adrian auxiliary and collected $127 mite box money.

A paper by Miss Bertha Taylor, of Clinton, was read and benediction pronounced by Rev. Davis.

The afternoon meeting opened with a Bible reading, conducted by Mrs. A. F. Bourns, of Hudson.

A paper on "Systematic Giving," prepared by Miss Viva Howell, of Tecumseh, was read by Miss Jennie McCoy.

The greetings from other churches, W. H. M. S., W. C. T. U. and Epworth League were all good. Mrs. Knight, of Clinton, in her happy way, gave the response.

Mrs. Wm Smith, of Tecumseh, read a paper and the young ladies' quartette favored us with singing.

The committee on resolutions was reported by Mrs. Barnes, of Tecumseh, and report accepted. Adrian district had pledged to give $100 toward the E. Hoag scholarship fund. As this had not all been paid Mrs. Harding was appointed treasurer and Mrs. Cushman to correspond with auxiliaries that had not paid and try to raise the balance.

A paper written by Mrs. Ella Yager, of Ridgeway, was read by Miss Nellie Wesley.

The enrollment committee reported 63 delegates.

Mrs. VanGieson extended an invitation for the next district meeting to be held at Clinton, which was accepted, and the afternoon meeting closed by singing, "Nearer, my God, to Thee."

The Thursday evening meeting was called to order by the President. The devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. L. P. Davis.

Recitation, "What the Deacon said," by Miss Minnie Payne, of Adrian.

Addresses by Miss Gertrude Howe, from China, and Miss Rose Rower, from Africa, were greatly enjoyed by all.

A collection was taken and "God be with you till we meet again" was sung and the meeting closed to meet again at Clinton next October.

MRS. P. C. SNELL,
Reporting delegate.

OBITUARY.

Died, at his residence in Macon, Nov. 5, 1892, Henry Wilkins, aged 44 years, 2 months and 5 days.

The deceased, though a great sufferer for some months, was confined to his bed but three weeks. The funeral, which was held at the Baptist church, was conducted by Mr. Bainbridge, of Clinton, Rev. Williams, of the same place, officiating. The subject of his sermon was a part of the 10th verse of the 10th chapter of St. John, "I come that you may have life and have it more abundantly." Mr. Wilkins was an honorary member of Morden Tent of the Knights of the Maccabees and was accompanied to his last resting place by his brother Sir Knights, who furnished floral offerings and buried him with the services of their order. He leaves a wife and daughter to mourn his loss. One sister from Macon was with him a few days during his sickness but could not be present at the funeral. Eight brothers and sisters were present. Lester and Irving Wilkins and Mrs. Samuel Walker came from Gratiot county and Miss Lena Hoag from Chicago, to be with him in his last days.

UNITED STATES NAVY.

Secretary Tracy's Annual Report Shows Wonderful Progress.

A Fleet Fully Worthy to Bear the Stars and Stripes—American Armor Plate Is the Best—Estimates for the Fiscal Year.

A GOOD RECORD.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Secretary Tracy in his report to the president starts out with a list of vessels in the navy, and points with pride to the work accomplished during the present administration. He says:

"On the 4th of March, 1889, the fleet of the United States navy, apart from a few old ships long since obsolete and fast going to decay, consisted of three modern steel vessels of an aggregate tonnage of 7,863 tons, and mounting [illegible] 6-inch and four 8-inch guns, the forgings for which last, as well as the shafting for the vessels, had been purchased from abroad, as they could not be made in this country.

"There have been a total of nineteen vessels of the new navy put in commission during this administration, of an aggregate tonnage of 64,683 tons, mounting altogether two 13-inch, six 10-inch, sixteen 8-inch and eighty-two 6-inch guns, all of which, with the exception of five of the earliest, have been manufactured in this country. Three new steel tugs have also been constructed and put in service during this period. There are eighteen vessels in process of construction and certain to be completed, should their armor be delivered within the next year, of an aggregate tonnage of 92,607 tons and mounting altogether twelve 13-inch, six 12-inch, sixteen 10-inch, thirty 8-inch, thirty-two 6-inch, thirty-eight 5-inch and thirty-four 4-inch guns, all of which have been or are to be manufactured in this country. During this period twenty-five vessels will have been launched, thirteen of them, including the three tugs, during the current year, and of all the new ships the construction of which has been begun during the present administration only two will remain on the stocks on the 4th of March next.

"Our new navy, including all vessels built or authorized, now consists of the following vessels: One sea-going battleship (first class)—Iowa. Three coast-line battleships (first-class)—Massachusetts, Indiana, Oregon. Two battleships (second class)—Maine, Texas. Six double-turreted harbor-defense vessels—Puritan, Monterey, Miantonomoh, Monadnock, Terror, Amphitrite. Two armored cruisers—New York, Brooklyn. One ram. Two protected cruisers of extreme speed—Columbia, Minneapolis. Fourteen cruisers—Olympia, Baltimore, Chicago, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Charleston, Newark, Boston, Atlanta, Cincinnati, Raleigh, Detroit, Montgomery, Marblehead. One dispatch vessel—Dolphin. Six gunboats—Yorktown, Concord, Bennington, Machias, Castine, Petrel. One dynamite vessel—Vesuvius. One practice vessel—Bancroft. Two torpedo boats—Cushing, No. 2, making a total of forty-two vessels.

"The secretary details at length noteworthy progress in the production of these things, and says the progress noted, by which the United States has emerged from its condition of helplessness at sea and by the employment of its own resources has distanced its most experienced competitors, marks an epoch in naval development not only of this country but of the world.

Coming down to a detailed statement as to armor tests the secretary tells of the work accomplished, of the tremendous test to which the Harvey nickel-steel armor plate was subjected, as the result of which improved methods were introduced in the Harvey process, and continues:

"The result has never been equaled or even approached before by any armor plate, American or foreign. It has demonstrated that the United States, in the reconstruction of its new navy, which ten years ago had no existence even on paper, is enabled to place upon each and all of its armored vessels a material the like of which the world, up to this time, has not seen; and that while vast sums have been spent in plating the sides of foreign men-of-war with an inferior material, this country will employ for the purpose an armor which is not only far more efficient, but which represents unquestionably, having reference to the dimensions of plates thus far tested, the highest development of modern science, and a development reached by its own independent efforts.

"Following the example of the United States, the English government four weeks ago held a trial of the new American armor, and it is clear from the highly successful results of the trial that the United States, instead of being the last in the race in the construction of vessels of war or of borrowing its best ideas from abroad, has set an example in this respect which other maritime powers will speedily follow."

The aggressive policy of foreign nations continues, and this country, whether it will or not, will soon be forced into a position where it cannot disregard measures which form a standing menace to its prosperity and security. On the Isthmus our commerce is engaged in a desperate fight to maintain its foothold. In the south Pacific repeated annexations and protectorates are extending the power and influence of the maritime states of the old world. Subsidized lines of fast steamers are completing the circle of maritime communication on the eastern and western coasts of the Dominion of Canada and fortresses daily increasing in strength are surrounding our coast upon the south and east. Under these circumstances it is imperative to the welfare of this country that the policy of naval reconstruction, so successfully carried on in the past, should suffer no interruption in the future.

Much space is devoted to interesting details as to the operations of ships in commission the last year in Behring sea and elsewhere; on the work of the marine hospital bureau in connection with cholera quarantine, etc. Interesting statistics are given as to the growth of the government toward establishing naval militia, the creation of which is characterized as one of the most important steps in our recent naval progress.

The estimates in the report for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, for navy and marine corps, including those for public works and increased navy, are $24,671,403, being $2,713,141 less than those for the last fiscal year.

A Horrible Fate.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 9.—Herman Miller, 56 years old, was run over and instantly killed Wednesday night by a team of mules attached to a stake wagon and driven by an unknown man. The man's head was completely severed from the body by the wheels and the neck was ground into a pulp. This makes the third case of death in this manner this week, and the police are much exercised to discover the driver of the team.

Belknap Has Two Plurality.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Dec. 10.—The committee appointed by the Kent county canvassers to recount the congressional vote has completed its work. Richardson (pop.), made a net gain of six in the county, leaving Belknap (rep.), a plurality of two in the district.

Favor Restricted Immigration.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The Herald has made a poll of both branches of congress on the subject of restriction of immigration. Sixty-three senators and 156 representatives favor restriction, while sixteen senators are non-committal.

Youthful Murderer Sentenced.

LIMA, O., Dec. 10.—Harry Stevenson, the 16-year-old boy who shot and killed Edward Randabaugh at McBeth's lake last fall, pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to the reform farm until he is of age.

A Bargain for Farmers.

We take pleasure in informing our readers that the Ohio Farmer is offered for the remainder of this year and all of next for only one dollar. Its circulation is now over seventy-five thousand paid [illegible] subscribers. It goes into every state in the Union and into many foreign countries. Its advertising patronage is liberal, and this with the large circulation enables its publishers to give to the farmers of this country one of the very best, most enterprising and attractive family journals in America. It is published at Cleveland, Ohio, and is national in everything but name. It is an 80-column weekly of 52 issues a year. Its proprietors are its editors, while its associate editors are M. E. Williams and W. I. Chamberlain, both men of national reputation as practical agricultural writers. Its contributors are men who are known wherever the best agricultural papers are taken. Its proprietors spare no expense nor labor that promises to add to its interest and value, and maintain its reputation as the best and most widely circulated dollar weekly agricultural journal in America. Specimen copies and premium list will be sent free to all applicants by addressing The Ohio Farmer, Cleveland, Ohio. Agents wanted.

REV. SYLVANUS LANE,

Of the Cincinnati M. E. Conference, makes a good point when he says: We have for years used Hood's Sarsaparilla in our family of five, and find it fully equal to all that is claimed for it. Some people are greatly prejudiced against patent medicines, but how the patent can hurt a medicine and not a machine is a mystery of mysteries to me.

An Incident of a Battle.

Col. C. W. Dean of Dayton, O., had the peculiar and serious experience of being sunstruck while engaged in battle before Port Hudson, La., June 14, 1863. As a result, from that time until last June he had a continual distracting pain in his head and weak spells, which compelled him for many years to give up everything of an active character. He was obliged to stay in doors, and could not even walk across the street. Last June he began using Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and Nerve Liver Pills, and is now completely cured.

LOCAL AND MISCELLANEOUS.

This muddy weather is a damper on holiday trade.

Wm. Bresie has a new card in to-day's HERALD which all should read.

There are several changes of ads in our supplement sheet this week.

Mrs. C. S. Burroughs, of Clinton, was visiting friends in town last Saturday.

Rev. James Gorton exchanged pulpits last Sunday with Rev. J. M. Getchell of Marshall.

Township Treasurer Hyde will receive taxes every Friday during December at Lilley's bank.

E. M. Coller, our poplar music dealer, has a new card in this week's HERALD to which we invite attention.

Mr. C. P. Reed, having completed his visit in town, returned to his home in Grand Ledge last Monday.

D. C. Clark, of Adrian, owns a large interest in a Montana gold mine which he hopes will pan out into a big thing.

Newt. Satterthwaite rejoices over an addition to the family. A bouncing boy arrived at his house last Monday.

We have a new Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine at the HERALD office, which can be bought for half price. It would make an elegant Christmas present.

J. F. Brooks will give a New Year's dance at Onsted on Monday evening, Jan. 2d. Music by Bonney & Gray's full band. An enjoyable party may be expected.

The Epworth League of the M. E. church will observe College Day, Friday evening, Dec. 16. A fine literary and musical program has been prepared. All are invited.

W. E. Gladstone has been asked to deliver the opening oration at the coming World's Exposition at Chicago. The choice lay between Gladstone and a Spanish Grandee.

We have received from H. M. Temple a copy of addresses delivered before the St. Paul Commercial Club, entitled, "Industrial Supremacy and How to attain It." It is another evidence of the business activity of St. Paul.

The man who wishes to make his wife a handsome Christmas present, could select no better article than a Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine. We have a brand new one, just from the factory, which can be bought for half price. Call at the HERALD office and see it.

Don't forget the circulating library reception at Rev. H. A. Smith's given by the young people of the Baptist Church. As far as convenient come dressed to represent the name of some book and bring pencils. Light refreshments served. All invited.

A peculiar sight on Maumee street the other day was the appearance of a prominent business man's wife, wheeling her baby in a carriage. On the front of the carriage was a sign bearing this interrogation: "Is marriage a failure?" The young brother had been getting in his work.—The Messenger.

The wires of the Local telegraph company and the Commercial telegraph company were connected yesterday, and hereafter the two lines will be run as one. This will be of great benefit to subscribers in this city, as it will give them direct communication with all the points on the C. T. line, including Tipton, Tecumseh, Clinton, Lake Ridge, Macon and Britton. Also in the Western Union office at Tecumseh messages can be sent to any part of the world. The Adrian connection adds two more miles of wire to the line, and gives the company ten new offices, nine in the city and one at the state industrial home.—Adrian Times.

Boyd & Root are buying wheat at 68.

Sergt. Dick Farley is home again from Indianapolis.

J. W. Wightman went to Adrian on business last Tuesday.

Mrs. John Wishard, of Portland, Oregon, is visiting in Tecumseh.

Read New York Tribune prospectus on the supplement sheet this week.

Miss Gertie Bray, of Adrian, was the guest of Mrs. Chas. Ham the first of the week.

New subscribers to the HERALD for next year will receive the balance of this year free.

Rev. Gorton will preach on the following subjects next Sunday: Morning subject, "Insight and Sympathy." Evening subject, "What to read, where to read, how to read."

Mrs. Lucy A. Williamson, aged 60 years and 7 months, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. James Potter, on Tuesday evening last. Funeral Saturday at one o'clock p. m. from the Friends church.

Subject of address at the Baptist church on Sunday evening, Dec. 18, '92, will be: "Some of the Reasons for considering the Bible an Inspired Book." A brief review of H. L. Hastings pamphlet, upon the subject. A special service for young men and skeptics. All these are cordially invited to be present.

Misses Wiley, Stewart, Cook, Sutherland, Millis, Garlinghouse, Fisher, Millspaugh, and gentlemen Finch, Morse, Chase, Sheldon, Smith, Howard, and Hushen, members of the B. Y. P. U. of the Baptist church of this place attended a rally of the young peoples' societies held at Dundee last Saturday and Sunday.

The young men of Tecumseh have organized a committee of twenty to look after our annual Christmas party, and this means that we will have as usual, a very successful and brilliant social event with the coming of the Yule-tide. Wolff's full orchestra has been secured which means that the music will be up to the highest standard, and undoubtedly the boys will have the support of a full gallery.

How shall I make the most of my God given faculties, especially those which distinguish me from the merely animal creation below me? A theme suggested by a conversation. A sermon to Young People on the above theme will be delivered by the pastor of the Presbyterian church from his own pulpit next Sunday night at seven o'clock. A very cordial invitation is extended to young people not identified with other congregations to attend the service.

Died at his home in Ionia, Mich., Dec. 9, 1892, after an illness of three days, of Pneumonia, Almeron C. Cadwell, in the 83d. years of his age. Mr. Cadwell was the only brother of Mrs. Josiah Woodard and has been a frequent visitor at his sister's home in Tecumseh for years coming as often as health would permit, the last time was in June and he had intended coming again at the holidays. Mrs. Woodard feels the bereavement deeply, this brother being the last one of the kindred near and dear of her early days and generation.

Last Saturday evening a jolly party of men, women and children surprised Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Owen, at their residence, and informed them that it was the twentieth anniversary of their wedding. A social evening was enjoyed by those who instituted the program. Refreshments were served and friends renewed old time friendship while the children with their merry glee reminded more then one that twenty years had been recorded. It was an enjoyable evening and all returned to their homes at a late hour, hoping Mr. and Mrs. Owen may enjoy their home twenty years longer.

Last Monday afternoon as Clarence Conklin was starting home from town accompanied by his sister Hattie and Miss Ella Jackson, his horse, a colt, became somewhat freightened, which resulted in throwing all three out of the buggy. In some of the colt's antics he broke a thill which loosened the kicking-strap and set him to kicking at a lively rate. Miss Jackson was first thrown out, then Clarence was kicked out and finally Miss Conklin was thrown out when about opposite the M. E. church. All three were badly bruised up but fortunately sustained no very serious injuries. The colt ran into Frank Osborn upsetting his cart and was then caught.

The Lake Ridge correspondent of the Messenger says: Jim Snell, of Tecumseh, eighty-three years old, is the veteran carpenter. He just completed an eighteen foot bent on J. A. Hunter's barn and worked around on the roof as nimble as a boy in his teens. There is a history in connection with Mr. Snell's necessity of laboring in his old age, which dates back to the collapse of the Fitzsimmons bank of Tecumseh some 15 or 20 years ago—one of the old party swindling machines—Mr. Snell owned a farm in those days which he sold in view of retiring somewhat from hard labor, and deposited his money, for the time being, in the bank. A few days thereafter the bank closed, when it was found that Mr. Snell's farm in connection with the wealth of many other people and the banker had flown to foreign lands—if this had been a government savings bank on the Prohib plan, Mr. Snell's money would have been safe.

Thos. Elliott has moved into his new house.

Dolph Heesen's new house on Chicago street will soon be ready for occupancy.

Call at this office and examine that new Wheeler & Wilson sewing machine.

The tenth annual meeting of the Mich. Association of Union ex-prisoners of war will be held at Lansing, Mich., Dec. 27 and 28th.

Mr. A. E. Chase, one of the owners of the Gratiot Journal, of Ithaca, Mich., and his wife, were in town Friday until Tuesday, the guests of Mrs. Beamish.

Two famous preachers have written striking articles soon to be printed in The Ladies' Home Journal; one by Rev. Morgan Dix, D.D., on "Are Society Women Insincere?" and the other by Rev. John R. Paxon, D. D., on "Are Women More Religious than Men?"

On Tuesday evening next Dec. 20th. Frank A. Dean of Charlotte will deliver his lecture, "Across Land and Sea" at Adrian for the benefit of the Benevolent Club. Admission 50 and 25 cents. Reserved seats at Swift's book store Monday and Tuesday.

Ed. Kirchgessner, while taking down a telephone wire, north of town, last Monday, fell from the top of the pole to the ground. The pole was rotten and broke with his weight upon it. He was pretty well shaken up and bruised but fortunately no bones were broken, and he will soon be able to tackle the telephone wires again.

The Prospectus of the Detroit Free Press will be found in another column. The old Free Press still leads the procession among all Democratic papers of the Northwest. No Michigan Democrat can find a better paper to introduce into his family: The HERALD and Free Press for '93 will be taken together at reduced rates.

During a brief stay at Britton the other day, we called in to shake hands with L. C. Hoagland, cashier of the new Exchange Bank. Their room is not yet fully fitted up but will make very nice quarters when completed. The officers are: John Britton, President; Samuel Kniffin, Vice President and L. C. Hoagland, Casheir. Success to the new institution. It will be a valuable addition the business interests of Britton.

At a meeting of Beers' Relief Corps held Monday evening, Dec. 5th. The following officers for ensuing year were elected:

President—Mrs. Anna S. Hanly.
Sen. Vice—Mrs. Mandana VanTyne.
Jun. Vice—Mrs. Frances Haire.
Treasurer—Mrs. Janette Welling.
Chaplain—Mrs. Hattie Wilson.
Conductor—Mrs. Emma Spalding.
Guard—Mrs. Sarah Wescott.

APPOINTIVE OFFICERS:

Secretary—Mrs. Annie B. Smith.
Ass't Conductor—Mrs. Ella Ingersoll.
Ass't Guard—Mrs. Sarah Sweet.

The Christmas number of Scribner's Magazine is made notable by the great richness and variety of its illustration, including a novelty in magazine pictures—a colored frontispiece——reproducing in fac-simile the rich effect of a water-color painting, made for this magazine by L. Marchetti. The literary quality of the number is indicated by the distinguished list of contributors, including such names as Thomas B. Aldrich, Archibald Forbes, George W. Cable, Frank D. Millet, H. H. Boyesen, Octave Thanet, George A. Hibbard, Will H. Low, and Kenyon Cox.

It is no exaggeration to say that a better concert of that character was never given in Tecumseh than that presented to our citizens last evening by the New York Philharmonic Club. We have neither space nor time for an extended review. Every selection was a gem, most of which were heartily encored, and the large audience that filled the opera house was enchanted from the first to the last number on the program. Mr. Eugene Weiner fully sustained his reputation as the best flutest in this country and the other performers were all first class artists. Miss Weed's vocal selections were all of superior merit. She possesses a commanding figure and a beautiful voice, which displays her charms to the best advantage. The entertainment was the best of the course thus far.

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC
BELTS & APPLIANCES.

Do you know why? Because it is plain to be seen that the TRUTH ONCE TOLD is enough The Surprising Promptness with which all classes of people respond to our announcements and the rapidly increasing demand for Dr. Gregg's Goods wherever introduced, conclusively prove that true modesty is always recognized and the quality of merit takes care of itself. Metaphorically our statement is the Button—the Public Press it, and

DR. GREGG'S ELECTRIC SPECIALTIES
"Do the Rest."

The extent of Pressure on the button and the success of Dr. Gregg's Goods in "Doing the Rest" is most satisfactorily shown in the marvelous growth of our business the past 60 days.

Repeated and increasing demands for The Gregg Electric "Foot Warmer" are coming in from all parts of the country with profuse acknowledgements that so much comfort for $1.00 (the price) is like buying Gold Dollars for ten cents.

The Delicate Organism of Woman subjects her to many peculiar ailments and unfortunate misery. The extreme sensitiveness of her Nervous System very frequently requires artificial stimulus. The Gregg Electric Belt and other Appliances supply this as nothing else can.

The Rugged Constitution of Man, when once broken, becomes pitiable in the extreme, from which there is absolutely no escape without assistance. The Gregg Electric Belts and Appliances in cases of this kind, have honestly won their title of King of Remedies.

Rheumatism is conquered, sufferers from Obesity are speedily relieved, Dropsy quickly yields, spinal difficulties and Paralysis disappear, and many other diseases of Men and Women are permanently cured, fully described in complete catalogue for 6c, or elaborate circular free. We guarantee to forfeit twice the price of any of Dr. Gregg's goods found not to be genuine. We make an elegant little $3 Electric Belt, which is selling very rapidly and which we take in exchange for any higher power belt (except $5 belt) and credit $3 on the price of new order. Remember the Electric Foot Warmers are $1 a pair, worth $10. Address

THE LAW DEPARTMENT.

Transactions of the Year Reported by Attorney General Miller.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Attorney General W. H. H. Miller, in his annual report submitted to congress, says that during the fiscal year 1892 the expenses of his department aggregated $3,748,259.08. During the fiscal year 2,669 civil suits were terminated. In 1,918 of these judgments were for the United States; in 136 against the United States, and 802 were either nolle prosequied, dismissed or discontinued. There were also terminated 18,724 criminal prosecutions; of these there were 11,460 convictions and 3,092 acquittals. There were pending July 1, 1892, 9,709 criminal prosecutions.

The aggregate amount of the judgments rendered in favor of the United States in civil suits during the last year was $276,500.92, and the amount actually collected $67,223.50, while $20,753.45 was obtained during the year on judgments rendered in former years for the United States, and $102,635.62 was otherwise realized in civil suit. The aggregate amount of fines, forfeitures and penalties imposed during the year in criminal prosecutions was $682,271.95, and the amount collected during the year was $133,229.44, while [illegible] was collected on penalties imposed in former years.

Up to November 1 8,595 claims had been filed under the Indian depredation claims act, representing in all $33,151,030. The aggregate of such claims disposed of is $1,373,757. The amount of judgments recovered on such claims is a little more than 33 per cent. of the demand.

The increase in the numberof southern war claims is a subject that demands the immediate attention of congress. There have already been referred to the court of claims for investigation and findings between 9,000 and 10,000 claims for the taking of and injury to property of persons assuming to have been loyal during the civil war, the amount demanded aggregating nearly $400,000,000. Under the act of March 3, 1883, known as the Bowman act, 248 cases were disposed of during the year, the aggregate claims covered by said cases being $2,583,939. In 188 of these cases findings were made against the government and for an aggregate sum of $485,546.

The report says that numerous prosecutions have been begun against trusts, combinations, etc., but these corporations have hedged themselves in with great care and skill so as to avoid the law if possible. Cases now pending will determine the validity of the statute, and if declared valid the evidence already accumulated will be valuable.

He recommends that provision be made for the construction of the three prisons authorized by the Fifty-first congress. The total number of United States prisoners in custody during the year was 3,000.

The number of convicts pardoned by the president during the year was seventy-one out of 505 applicants. Sentence was commuted in ninety-two cases.

NO DECREASE OF BUSINESS.

The Weekly Review Shows a Healthy Condition of Trade.

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

"Business shows no decrease, except that slackening in new transactions which is customary as the holiday season draws near. Interior money markets generally show a strong demand, though money is actually close only at Cleveland and apparently rather easier at most points, while at eastern cities the markets are easier, with a slackening demand. At all points reporting the holiday trade opens more briskly than usual, with a prospect of a larger volume. At Boston cotton goods are in active demand, with higher prices, and the output of the mills the largest for a long time. A large part of the product of print cloth has been contracted up to March and some mills up to September next.

"Trade at Chicago holds well, though in winter lines the mild weather retards business. Further shipments of money to the southwest are noted, but rates are easier. Receipts generally fall below those of last year for the most important products, but large increase is seen in real estate sales and in cattle. At Milwaukee money is in strong demand for the grain and live stock trade. At St. Paul and Minneapolis colder weather is wanted for collections, but trade is satisfactory and wheat receipts very large.

"Speculative markets are comparatively quiet, except for cotton, in which sales of over 2,000,000 bales in a week are again reported and after a decline of three-eighths there has been an equal recovery. Wheat receipts continue very large, 3,800,000 bushels in three days at the principal western points, while exports are comparatively small. The iron trade is extremely dull, with visible weakness in finished products and less hopeful feeling.

"Cattle receipts at Chicago in November were the largest ever known in that month, and for the year have been 10 per cent. greater than last year.

"The business failures occurring throughout the country during the last seven days number 297, as compared with totals of 269 last week."

CATTLE DYING BY THOUSANDS.

Terrible Suffering from Drought in New Mexico—Loss, Forty Per Cent.

DENVER, Col., Dec. 10.—A prominent cattleman just arrived from northwestern New Mexico says that for more than two years the heavens there have refused to yield rain and as a result the water courses are dried up and the irrigating ditches are useless. Said he:

"At a low estimate 75,000 to 100,000 head of cattle have died from starvation and lack of water. The railroads are shipping cattle out of the region by train loads, but thousands of these cattle will die as they are too weak to withstand the winters. Some cattle companies estimate their loss as high as 60 per cent. and the average will run 35 to 40 per cent. The sheep are in almost as bad condition as the cattle. The heaviest losses are in Colfax and adjoining counties."

OPERATIVES STARVING.

Terrible Suffering Reported Among the 30,000 Unemployed in Lancashire.

LONDON, Dec. 10.—At the close of the week there are 50,000 non-union cotton operatives out of work in Lancashire. The deepest distress prevails among them. Already everything available has gone to the pawnshops, which are filled with pledges of all kinds. The majority of the sufferers are unable to obtain credit, and are foodless and fireless at a period when the weather is unusually inclement. They are reluctant to apply for public relief, nevertheless the poor law officials are busy doing what is possible for the destitute.

Death of Martin Burke.

JOLIET, Ill., Dec. 10.—Martin Burke, one of the three men convicted of the murder of Dr. Cronin in Chicago in 1889 and sentenced to life imprisonment, died in the prison last evening of consumption. Only one of the three (Dan Coughlin) is now alive, O'Sullivan having died last winter.

Netted $25,000.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—The Columbian bazaar, held during the past three days at the mansion of Potter Palmer in aid of the children's building at the world's fair, is at an end. When all the accounts are settled there will still remain as the net receipts of the bazaar $25,000.

Fear for Their Existence.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9.—Members of the interstate commerce commission look with seriousness upon the decision of Judge Gresham which limits and to some extent nullifies the power of the commission. They feel that its natural sequel is an abolition of the entire commission.

PHYSICIANS PUZZLED.

Many persons are unable to sleep on their left side. The cause has long been a puzzle to physicians. Metropolitan papers speak with great interest of Dr. Franklin Miles, the eminent Indiana specialist in nervous and heart diseases, who has proven that this habit arises from a diseased heart. He has examined and kept on record thousands of cases. His New Heart Cure, a wonderful remedy, sold at Baker & Hall's. Thousands testify to its value as a cure for Heart Diseases. Mrs. Chas. Benoy, Loveland, Colo., says its effects on her were marvelous. Elegant Book on heart disease free.

Dr. O. J. Fay & Co.:
Gentlemen,—It is with pleasure that we reply to your letter asking about our success with Dr. Fay's New Treatment for Consumption. Six months ago we gave our first order and since then we have sold eight times as much as our first order amounted to more than any other lung medicine we sell. Our customers after once using it want no other and they are always sure to recommend it to some other sufferer. It could not give better satisfaction and we have so much faith in what it will do that we are not afraid to recommend it to any person in need of a lung medicine. With many wishes for your success,
Yours truly,
W. UAGEN & SON.

No flowery rhetoric can tell the merits of Hood's Sarsaparilla as well as the cures accomplished by this excellent medicine.

THE ADVERTISING

Of Hood's Sarsaparilla is always within the bounds of reason because it is true. It always appeals to the sober, common sense of thinking people because it is true; and it is always fully substantiated by endorsements which, in the financial world would be accepted without a moment's hesitation.

For a general family cathartic we confidently recommend Hood's Pills.

I can recommend Ely's Cream Balm to all sufferers from dry catarrh from personal experience.—Michael Herr, Pharmacist, Denver.

I had catarrh of the head and throat for five years. I used Ely's Cream Balm, and from the first application was relieved. The sense of smell, which had been lost, was restored after using one bottle. I have found the Balm the only satisfactory remedy for catarrh, and it has effected a cure in my case.—H. L. Meyer, Waverly, N. Y.

Few people realize that the nerves of the body than has stomach, liver and all the organs of the body which are stomach doctored. They forget that the nerves reach and control all parts of the body. Hence many cases are misunderstood and wrongly treated. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is a nerve remedy of recent discovery by an eminent specialist, which acts directly and correctly on the nervous system to cure any nerve disorder. Is backed with an offer of $500 for an incurable case. $1.00 bottles or trial samples free at Jno Orr's.

My wife gets jealous without cause. Does yours? No; not without cause.

Symptoms of kidney troubles should be promptly attended to; they are warnings that something is wrong. Many persons die victims of kidney diseases who could have been saved had they taken proper precautions. The prompt use of Dr. J. H. MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a certain mortgage, bearing date April 15th, 1891, executed by Charles H. Aten to Fred J. Landgraf, whereby the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative. Said mortgage was, on the 28th day of April, 1891, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Lenawee County and State of Michigan, in Liber 121 of Mortgages, on page 562. There is now claimed to be due and unpaid on said mortgage at the date hereof the sum of five hundred and fifty-four and thirty-three hundredths Dollars ($554.33), and no proceedings have been instituted to collect the same or any part thereof, either at law or in equity.

Notice is therefore hereby given that the premises described in said mortgage, by virtue of the said power of sale and of the statute in such case made and provided, will, on the 26th day of January, 1893, at one o'clock in the afternoon, be sold at public auction to the highest bidder, at the East front door of the Court House in the City of Adrian, in said County (said Court House being the place where the Circuit Court for said County is held) to satisfy the sum due as aforesaid and the interest thereon accrued and then to become due, together with an attorney fee of $30 in said mortgage provided, and all other legal costs of foreclosure. Said premises are described in said mortgage as follows: All that certain piece or parcel of land situate in the village of Tecumseh, in the county of Lenawee and State of Michigan, and described as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point in the East line of Pearl street, continued northward from Hewitt's addition to said Village, said point being four rods south of the southwest corner of a parcel of land formerly owned by Wm Spath; thence running easterly parallel with and four rods distant from the South line of said Spath lot eight rods; thence south parallel with Pearl street two and one-half rods; thence West parallel with and two and one-half rods distant from the first course eight rods to Pearl street; thence north on the East line of Pearl street to the place of beginning; excepting therefrom all that part thereof heretofore sold and conveyed by said Landgraf to Samuel W. Temple by deed dated November 20th, 1886 and recorded in Liber 147 of Deeds, on page 48, in the office of the Register of Deeds for said County; also excepting all that part of said above described premises covered by the Temple Brick Planing Mill.

ON THE WIDE PRAIRIE.

A Lonely Life That Finally Brought Domestic Happiness.

Oh, the dreariness of the prairie! How vast it was; never ending it seemed to Clare, as she stood in the doorway of their adobe cottage and gazed sadly off toward the northwest where a herd of sheep could be seen.

"How can they live on the dry grass, and how can Charlie even pretend to like it, the horrible, lonely life in such desolation and isolation! Hush! baby dear, I am coming; how the mosquitoes and flies do tease and torment him, poor little withering blossom—for even he has felt the blight."

The sun rose higher, the wind blew harder and it seemed to have a touch of fire.

"I wonder why baby's cheeks are so red; can he be seriously ill? Papa won't be in until evening, darling; mamma will do the best she can."

Charlie Dean wondered why no wife was visible as he approached home; wondered why no smoke issued from the chimney as was usual at supper-time. Had anything happened, he wondered, hastening his naturally slow steps.

The scene that met his gaze as he entered his home was one never to be forgotten.

His wife, his pretty, little, girlish wife he had brought from her city home, lay back in the wooden rocker white and still, while the baby, the little six-months-old Walter, was motionless within her arms, and the sweet face wore a look the horrified father understood.

"Clare! Clare!" he cried, brokenly. "Baby—oh, my loved ones!"

Then Clare opened her arms and permitted him to place the child in its cradle—a cradle he had made out of a wooden box.

In a voice he scarcely recognized she said:

"You knew the life I was to share out here, why did you not tell me?"

"But he seemed well this morning—well as he has been lately, I mean. Oh, I never expected this! The ranch is no lonelier than hundreds of others. I never thought—"

"No, but you have had to think now. He died an hour ago. I could not leave him to seek you—it did not matter after that. I'll never forgive you for bringing me out to this."

"Clara! You knew I owned the ranch. You knew I was poor."

"I never guessed what it would be, especially in a case like this," pointing to her child. "I little realized what it was to be a woman."

After that Charlie Dean was a changed man. He felt cross and mean, and found the cold creature he called wife anything but a cheerful companion.

"Let her sulk," he said; "she enjoys it. Anyway, I'll find other friends."

And he did. He secured the services of a boy in whose care he left the sheep, and went off almost daily to a little town, a pleasant ride for him of only about fifteen miles. When there, his place of lounging can easily be guessed.

"It's Clare's doings," he mused; "women like to send men to the dogs."

If Clare saw anything more than usual she remained silent. Sometimes, when he came home almost too stupid to talk, he caught a glimpse of contempt in the cold eye of his wife. Her silence was fairly maddening.

"Why don't she howl and storm like other women?" he muttered. "She never even wept over the baby. I'd give a good deal to see her cry just once."

The summer had gone and winter had come; as usual on Saturday morning, Charlie had ridden away in the direction of the town, without a word of farewell.

"Two years ago," said Clare, bitterly, "he sought me in that cozy home of my aunt's, with its soft carpets, its loving friends, and he persuaded me to marry him and come out to this dreary place, where he has even forgotten to be humane."

Then glancing toward the northwest she saw a mass of black clouds lying; a threatening aspect growing over all the sky.

"There's a storm coming and I'm glad; one of the freaks in my make up is that I like storms, particularly now. Had I been a timid lass I would long since have died of fright. I have felt sometimes even a bear coming in at the door would be a change," and Clare smiled sadly, as the masses of black clouds increased and the wind tore around the little mud ranch with frightful violence.

"Don't detain me, boys, I must go home!"

"Impossible in such a storm as this. You'd be dead in less than an hour. Take things coolly, Charlie. Why, it's the first time I ever saw you anxious. Your wife's all right; being snowed in a few days don't surprise folks in these parts."

"But—she's—out—of—flour; she made biscuits this morning, and there were only enough—and she—"

"Oh, ho, she's got other things, trust a woman for that; there's canned fruit, dried corn, there's beans and—no danger of her suffering. Anyway you can't help her; an army could not force its way over those miles."

"God forgive me!" thought Charlie Dean, his face in his hands, "and God help her, for I know how precious little the small house contains. I've seen her hunting among the weeds for something green to help out the salt pork and bread. I know how she's tried to cook something we could eat when I brought her home almost nothing. She may have something for dinner—after that—Oh, heavens, boys! I must go home!" he cried, aloud.

"You'll not go a quarter of a mile before you'll be dead, and then your wife will have no help from you, and by and by the expense of burying you—if the wolves don't find you."

Such a storm had not been known for years, even in that country where frightful storms were common.

Four days from the time Charlie Dean had left home, he slowly and persistently forced his way back, through heavy snow-drifts, until, with trembling fingers, he raised the latch of his door and entered.

Blinded by the snow, he could see nothing at first, but by and by he became conscious of the cold hearth, the awful silence and that the little house was empty. It did not even hold a corpse.

The wearied man sank down upon a chair and gazed about him blankly, despairingly.

The bed was neatly made, the floor swept, everthing was placed in its usual orderly fashion, and her dress hung upon the wall near him—the old brown calico she had worn the last time he had seen her.

"Gone," he said, dazedly, "gone!"

Just then one of the boys, who had felt strange misgivings and had followed him, entered.

"What did you say, Charlie? is she gone? Why, that couldn't be, she'd never be such a fool as to venture out in that storm. If she did—poor fellow, he's fainted!"

It was some time before Charlie Dean revived; he was very weary, and the awfulness of what had been, through his neglect, quite overpowered him.

"There, you're better, now," said his friend. "What do you think could have caused her to leave the house, and where did she go?"

"I don't know, unless to the stable. I had left a little corn there."

"Charlie!" said his friend, sternly, "you never left your wife in such a condition?"

But Charlie only nodded.

"I expected to be home, you know—but don't look at me like that. I'm punished enough. She's dead somewhere under the snow, my poor little Clare!"

They failed to find her; no corn was missing, it is true, but they found nothing to so much as point the way whither she had gone.

Charlie Dean was a changed man once more. To his boon companions he said good-by, and many of them never forgot the silent pain in his eye, the anguish that his whole face expressed.

"It's not going to kill him," said the friend who had been watching him to see that he did nothing rash. "No, it's going to make such a man out of him as we never dreamed of; the one thing that now has possession of him is work, in order that he may forget. It's a good medicine. I think I'll try some myself."

Three years later, well-to-do, with money to spare, for none of it was ever squandered now, Charlie Dean once more sought the far away city where he had first met and won his wife.

A strange longing came over him to once more see that place, and travel-stained and bronzed, he walked by the house, almost expecting to hear her touch upon the piano, and the sound of her sweet voice.

Bewildered, amazed, half believing himself out of his head, he did hear her voice once more.

"There's a man drunk leaning on the fence," he heard a strange voice exclaim.

Then the playing ceased, and a voice that almost caused him to faint a second time replied:

"Drunken men are only too common. Let him alone; some policeman will be along presently."

Then the music struck up again, this time into a wild galop as if the player's thoughts were running away with her.

"But he's still there," continued the strange voice. "He's peculiar looking; do look out, Clare. I declare I feel nervous."

Charlie stood up squarely now, pushed his hat back slightly and looked full and straight into the eyes of his wife.

She fell back with a cry, the place was empty, and scarcely knowing what he did Charlie was turning away when some one came flying down those steps and—and, yes, had her hand in his, and in a tearful voice was saying: "Charlie, oh! Charlie! You've come at last!"

"I want to know," he said, when in the cozy parlor, still clinging to her hand, "I want to know how you got away from the ranch during that awful storm."

Clare flushed but answered unhesitatingly:

"I was a good walker. I felt no fear of the storm. You had left me almost nothing to eat, and I really thought I should lose my mind if I remained there many more days all alone.

"I took the little money I still possessed, and started soon after you did, only I went in an opposite direction. I had scarcely reached the main trail when a two-horse wagon came dashing up, the man—a stranger, but God bless him, for he saved my life—jumped out and snatched me up before I could say 'by your leave,' and away we tore like mad. The horses were very strong and swift, and we seemed to outride the storm. We reached shelter at last, just before its fury broke, and I thanked him as best I could then, when the roads were clear, I started for my old home, but I had to stop and work awhile before I got here. Aunt has never heard all the story; I couldn't talk of some things."

"I thought you dead," said Charlie. "I—if you could know how I have suffered. Oh, Clare, I don't suppose you could forgive."

"I forgave you long ago. I was some to blame. I ought to have tried to have been happier; I wrote to your old home, but they told me you had gone away."

"Shall we begin over, Clara—for when you were gone I found out how I loved you."

"Oh, yes, and wherever you go I'll try to make that home happy."

"And I'll see that it is a home in which to be happy," answered Charlie, with a tremble in his voice.—A. C. McKeever, in Yankee Blade.

—They Won't Harmonize.—"Why, Matilda," said the caller, "your baby is just too sweet for anything, and the very picture of his father." "Yes, I know," sobbed the young mother, "but—but he has got red hair, and I just had the nursery decorated in pink."—Brooklyn Eagle.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

Granted a New Trial.

Thule Kuehn killed Wesley McDonald at Port Huron in 1891, and was sentenced to Jacksonville prison for twenty-two years. He was beating his wife when McDonald appeared to defend her. McDonald was in the yard when shot. The murderer pleaded self-defense. The supreme court has granted a new trial. The lower court held Kuehn had a right to defend his life under the circumstances, but had no right to kill him except after going into the house and locking the door.

She Was Stolen by Gypsies.

Chief McLoy found in the outskirts of Lenox a 7-year-old girl, who, four years ago, was stolen from her parents in Port Huron by gypsies and had not since been seen. The child's story is one of awful hardship. The old female gypsy who gave her up says the child has traveled from Michigan to Maine, from Maine to Florida, and from Florida back to Michigan since her abduction. The mother of the child fainted with joy on receiving back the long-lost girl.

The Comet Left a Card.

In the suburbs of Harrison was found a huge slate-covered meteor that had evidently fallen from the heavens and buried itself in the earth. The stone weighs about half a ton, and when first discovered was still warm. It is of peculiar formation and its substance is very hard. No one saw it fall, but the general impression prevails that it fell from the recent comet. An effort will be made to have an expert geologist make an examination of the curiosity.

Health in Michigan.

Reports to the state board of health by seventy-six observers in different parts of the state for the week ended December 3 indicated that cholera infantum and membranous croup increased, and inflammation of the bowels, typhoid fever, measles and inflammation of the brain decreased in area of prevalence. Diphtheria was reported at forty-two places, scarlet fever at fifty, typhoid fever at twenty-five and measles at three places.

Heaviest Cut of Logs on Record.

The Menominee sawmills made the heaviest cut on record this season, leading the Marinette mills by something over 1,000,000 feet and exceeding last season's cut by over 40,000,000 feet. The total amount cut is 287,492,348 feet, against 240,351,000 for 1891. The following gives the total cut on the Menominee river: Menominee, 287,492,348; Marinette, 286,618,774; total, 574,111,122, or 107,750,914 in excess of 1891.

Bay City's Federal Building.

The original appropriation for the federal building in Bay City was $200,000. Of this amount, $40,000 was expended toward buying the site, the foundation cost $18,677.15, the superstructure $62,460 and the lowest bid for the interior finish being $30,609, makes the total amount up to date $151,830.15, leaving a balance of over $48,000 to be used in the purchase of furniture, heating apparatus, etc.

Short But Newsy Items.

Barry county's new courthouse at Hastings is nearly completed.

Elisha Calkins, one of the best known residents of Romeo, died at the age of 76 years.

A. D. Dunville, a prominent contractor at Marinette, fell from a load of hay and broke his neck.

Jennie Haines, 7 years old, was kicked by a horse while driving at North Branch and died a few hours later.

By the recent death of Edward Crouse, of Syracuse, N. Y., the wife of Gen. J. G. Parkhurst, of Coldwater, falls heir to $500,000.

A. P. Waldo, postmaster at Masonville, Delta county, has resigned, and recommends Mrs. Jennie Reynolds as his successor.

Seventy-five thousand bushels of potatoes have been bought in Otsego county this fall, and there are not enough cars to be had, or there would be a greater movement.

A gasoline stove exploded at Jackson, terribly burning Mrs. Walter Bullinger and her two little daughters.

The post offices at Intermediate, Charlevoix county, and North Unity, Leelanaw county, have been discontinued.

The Ainsworth & Alexander mill at the "Soo" cut 11,030,000 feet of lumber during the season just closed.

The shoe store of W. O. Kodatz at Menominee was burglarized and $800 in cash and a large quantity of stock were secured.

The tug C. W. Wells, in winter quarters at Wheeler & Co.'s shipyard in West Bay City, had its upper works destroyed by fire.

Mrs. Knight, aged 88 years, was killed on the railroad track at Gaines by a Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee passenger engine.

Asbury Morgan, of Hanover, is the tallest man in Jackson county, if not in the state. He is 6 feet 7 inches in his stockings.

Mrs. Lottie Anderson Bernard, who committed suicide in San Diego, Cal., several days ago, was formerly Miss Lizzie Wyllie, of Detroit.

George A. Prout, aged 21, blew his brains out with a revolver in Detroit because Miss Carry Wright, with whom he had been keeping company, would not marry him.

Gov. Winans has appointed Fred D. Hammond, of Ironwood, and Wilbur E. Bailey, of Benzonia, circuit court commissioners for Gogebic and Benzie counties, respectively.

The village president of Saranac has issued a circular ordering every dog found upon the streets between now and the first day of January, 1893, to be killed.

In the United States court at Bay City Charles Trombley and William Torrence were fined $1,000 each for making fraudulent claims for pensions. George Lake, for passing counterfeit coin, was sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment.

RECOVERS HIS SPEECH.

Alphonce Hempbling, of Summitt township, Butler Co., Penn'a made an affidavit that his twelve-year-old son, who had St. Vitus Dance for twelve years, lost his speech, was completely cured after using three bottles of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine and recovered his speech. Thousands testify to wonderful cures from using it for nervous diseases, dyspepsia, nervous debility, dullness, confusion of mind, headache, etc. Four doses of this Nervine cured Mrs. W. E. Burns, South Bend, Ind, who had been suffering with constant headache for three months. Sold by Baker & Hall.

WHEN CHRISTOPHER COLUMBUS LANDED

He was actually unable to buy a bottle of Parmelee's Sarsaparilla at any price at any drug store in America. Now you can buy it for 50 cents at almost any drug store. This shows how much more fortunate people are now than they were in Columbus' time. Parmelee's Sarsaparilla is a blood purifier of great merit, and a tonic of remarkable virtue. For every disease or condition coming from an impure state of the blood it is an absolute remedy. It acts with great effect upon the liver, keeping that most important organ in healthy activity. It braces up the system "all run down" from sluggish circulation or inactive secretions, and is in all respects a most valuable remedy. 50 cents. Sold by dealers.

HAMILTON'S COUGH BALSAM.

The best made. Guaranteed to give satisfaction or money returned by the dealer who sells it to you. 25 cents for large bottle. Sold by dealers.

A GOOD WAY TO BE MISERABLE

Is to be a sufferer from Piles, Parmelee's Pile Suppositories are an easy and sure cure. Hundreds testify to their efficiency. 50c a box. Sold by druggists.

A SURE CROP.

A writer in Farm and Fireside says "one of the surest crops on the farm is Dyspepsia. The daily life of the typical farmer is suggestive of indigestion and dyspepsia." The writer might also have added that one of the best remedies for poor digestion, and a preventive of biliousness, dyspepsia, and all the long train of ills which follow is Parmelee's Mandrake and Dandelion Bitters. A large bottle costs only 25 cents. Sold by dealers.

IT CURED HIM OF SALT RHEUM.

CARROLLTON, N. Y., Aug. 2, '92.

Last winter I was laid up with Salt Rheum in my ankles. After trying many other remedies without finding any benefit, I was practically cured by the use of Parmelee's Household Ointment. I heartily recommend it to all who are similarly afflicted.

A. G. PACE.

For all Sores, Cuts, Burns, Bruises, etc., we guarantee it to be the best ointment made. 25c a box. Sold by dealers.

A RHEUMATIC MONTH.

This is a time of year when Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and other pains of that character show at their worst. Have you ever tried Parmelee's Universal Liniment in such cases? It has wonderful soothing and curative qualities. Sold by dealers.

Hand-in-hand

—Pearline and purity. You can't have one without the other. A good housekeeper will have both. Pearline cleans anything that dirt can settle on. In the laundry, the bath, and all work about the house, it washes thoroughly, easily, safely, and cheaply. You will find there is nothing else like it. Everybody else is using it.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be the same as Pearline. IT'S FALSE—PEARLINE is never peddled. 229 JAMES PYLE, New York.

SMALL PILL. SMALL DOSE. SMALL PRICE

PRONOUNCED HOPELESS, YET SAVED.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at J. J. Orr's drug store. Large size 50c. and $1.00.

Lane's Family Medicine moves the bowels each day. Most people need to use it.

Mrs. Barney McAdam, who has been sick with consumption for many months died last Thursday at 7 a. m. The funeral was held at St. Dominic's church, Saturday at 10 a. m. James McAdam, who is now at Fargo, was sent for but could not come on account of the serious illness of his wife.

A Remarkable History.

We recently published a strongly commendatory notice of "Alden's Cyclopedia of History." In the interest of our readers we wish to repeat and emphasize what we said. A good Universal History ought to be in every home; this is certainly excellent, if not the very best for general use and reference ever published, covering all nations (except the United States, to be published separately) and from B. C. 500 to A. D. 1892. Certainly it is the cheapest historical work we have ever seen; but that is what readers generally will expect from Mr. Alden, who has done so much to place the highest class of literature within popular reach. To get such a vast amount of matter within such small compass the type used is necessarily small, but it is beautifully clear, and the paper, printing and binding are of the best. Send 10 cents to Mr. Alden and he will send you a sample volume of 160 pages, containing the history of several nations complete, by which you judge for yourself whether you want the entire work. His catalogue of choice books, 128 pages, sent post-paid for 2 cents, presents a wonderful feast for book lovers. Address John B. Alden, Publisher, 57 Rose St., New York.

The December North American.

The North American Review for December embraces a variety of articles that go far towards a solution of the questions handled and to which the public mind is at this moment directed.

The established policy of the Review is to secure papers from those men upon whose opinion and action the decision of the matters under discussion largely depend. Mr. Gladstone, the Prime Minister of England, has spoken in its columns on the condition of affairs in Ireland, his paper being a reply to the Duke of Argyll, and in the December number the Hon. Arthur James Balfour, Secretary for Ireland in the Salisbury administration, gives what he claims to be the view of the real majority in Great Britain. His article is entitled The New House of Commons and the Irish Question. The meaning of Papal infallibility is made very clear by the Rev. S. M. Brandi, of the Society of Jesus at Rome, in "When is the Pope Infallible?" He reviews various utterances and decrees of the Pope and points out their distinctions in character. The Governor of Jamaica in Opportunities for Young Men in Jamaica sets forth with some enthusiasm and yet practical detail the business advantages that are afforded by the somewhat neglected island. In view of recent achievements by American-bred horses and the revived interest in fine stock an article in special value is that of Col. Theodore Ayrault Dodge on "The Horse of America."

"It was taken from me by fours," explained the man who had lost his money at poker.

—Having opened a new meat market in the building north of Spayde's store, I wish to inform the public that I will keep fresh meats of all kinds on hand and shall be glad to see my friends at any time Try my roasts and steak and you will have no other. FRANK SLATER.

OUR CLAIMS.

The Weekly Detroit Free Press challenges comparison with any other weekly newspaper published in the northwest. An examination will establish the truth of the following claims:

1. That The Free Press gives the greatest amount of Reliable News—Foreign, National, State and Local—compiled and presented in the most comprehensive and readable way. Nothing worth chronicling escapes its attention.

2. That The Free Press employs the best Literary Talent; publishes more Choice Reading matter—Illustrated Stories of Travel and Adventure, Serial Stories, Humorous Sketches, Poems, Articles on the Farm and Garden, Bright Miscellany, Letter Box, The Household, Children's Merry Times department Puzzles, etc.—giving abundant entertainment and instruction for every member of the family, in short that it is The Family Paper.

3. That The Free Press is always fair, courteous and forceful in the discussion of public questions, readily commanding the respectful attention and consideration of men of all shades of opinion.

4. That The Free Press is not only the foremost Michigan newspaper in the above particulars, but that it is the LARGEST—twelve to sixteen pages each week—the Brightest and Cleanest, both in respect to its table of contents and typographical appearance; and the CHEAPEST, because no other paper does or can give so much for One Dollar a year.

Such a paper should receive the active support of every discriminating and fair-minded man and woman in Michigan. It is a HOME PAPER of which every citizen may well be proud. For 1893 it will be better than ever before. We solicit your subscription.

THE HERALD FOR 1893.

For eighteen years last past, through good report and evil report, in prosperity and adversity alike, the HERALD has kept in "the middle of the road" in both a political and business sense. The record of the paper, under its present management, is well known, and nothing need be said on that point. Performance is better than promise. We have no special promises to make for the future, as the paper will speak for itself, as it has done in the past.

First and foremost, it will aim to be the best local newspaper in Lenawee County, and to hold its place as a household necessity in every family of Northern Lenawee. Though not a political organ in a partisan sense, the HERALD will always be found on the people's side in the great battle for equal rights and reduced taxation, and will continue to be an uncompromising advocate of tariff reform until that question shall be settled and settled right. All efforts to shake its business position and influence have proved unavailing, and it views the approach of 1893 with a serene confidence that the World's Fair year will be the most prosperous in its history.

Our Subscription rates next year will be only $1.10 within the County of Lenawee, if paid spot cash in advance. Beyond the County, $1.25 in advance. When payment is delayed an additional rate will be charged. We consider this a fair solution of the subscription problem. When subscribers desire accommodation they can afford to pay a reasonable bonus for that privilege. Here are our premium offers and club list for the coming year.

FIRST

The Herald and the American Farmer price $1.00, or,

The Herald and the Breeders' Guide, price $1.00, or

The HERALD and the Home Magazine (Mrs. Gen. Logan's paper), price 50 cents, with its cooking chart, price 50 cents, a total value of $2.50, for $1.50.

SECOND

The HERALD and the N. Y. World Almanac for 1893, which is the best statistical annual now published, both for $1.50.

THIRD.

The HERALD and Webster's Unabridged Dictionary, the regular $6.00 edition, half morocco bound, a total volue of $7.50 for $2.50. The book will be sent direct to the subscriber at his expense.

FOURTH.

The HERALD and the Great Divide, including a gem stone cabinet of 20 gems as a premium. Or the HERALD and the Home Maker, one of the best monthlies, all for $2.00.

FIFTH.

The HERALD and a bird's-eye view of the Columbian Exposition grounds, a beautiful lithograph 16 by 24 inches in size, suitable for framing, or

The HERALD and Henry George's great book, entitled, Protection or Free Trade, both for $1.25.

Old subscribers, as well as new, can avail themselves of these premium offers by paying all arrearages and one year in advance.

OUR CLUB LIST.

The papers named in the list below can be taken in connection with the HERALD at the lowest club rates. Sample copies can be seen at this office. At the reduced rates named in this club list subscribers will receive NO PREMIUMS.

In the near future.—Old Friend: And so both of your children are studying professions? Hostess: Yes, my daughter is in a polytechnic college, studying mechanical engineering, and my son is in Paris, learning dressmaking.

She: If you had never met me, would you have loved me just the same? He (convincingly): More.

Greatest of Republican Newspapers.

National in its aims and devoted to the welfare of the Masses of the American People.

The New York Tribune concedes the election of Grover Cleveland, but promises to defend the Republican policy on Finance and protection, with all the ability it can command.

It was the discontent of the farmers which caused the Democratic victories of two years' ago. The Weekly Tribune addressing isself directly to them for the past two years, has carried on a campaign of discussion for their benefit, almost unparallelled in American journalism; and the result coupled with Whitelaw Reid's previous great service to farmers, has been seen in the fact that agricultural communities have stood faithful to the Republican party, in a campaign in which, in other localities the party went completely to pieces. This year, the Democratic leaders changed their tactics and excited discontent among workingmen. They pointed to thehigher prices of farm products, and assured the workingmen of Northern cities that the British tariff system (that is to say, lessened protection to American Farming and Industry) would lower the prices of food and manufactured products, and the profits of 'monopolists' in this country, while at the same time maintaining the wages of labor, those wages being now the highest ever known in the United States. By false pretence, deception, and pandering to the lowest passions of uninformd men in large cities, they carried the country and elected a Democratic President and Congress.

The Tribune confidently awaits the result. Not for one moment, however, will the Tribune yield one inch of ground in the battle for American policies.

Roswell G. Horr's great articles will be among the features of The Tribune, the coming year. Men of every political faith are invited to read them. They will state the Republican view with frankness, point out the probable consequences of a change in the tariff policy of the country, and evade no issue, and conceal no fact, bearing upon the subjects discussed. Their thorough treatment of fundamental principles will aid every reader to a better understanding of profound and important issues.

A page a week will be devoted during 1893, to war stories and news of interest to Union veterans. Old soldiers, who have some experience to tell, which has not yet been printed, are asked to send the story to The Tribune for publication.

Farming has now become such an enormous interest in the United States, that there is an imperative necessity for making more of a specialty of the business interests of the Farmers of the country at large. Plans have been formed which ought to make The Semi-Weekly and The Weekly Tribune absolutely indispensable to every tiller of the soil during 1893.

A large number of entertaining features of general interest will also appear. 'How to succeed in Life,' 'Village Improvement,' special articles by brilliant men and women of high reputation, Chess and Checkers, and a hundred other things which cannot be recited in a brief prospectus, will appear on the Tribune's pages during 1893. The paper will have less politics and more of the thousand and one things which refresh the mind, entertain the imagination, and guide the reader in the prosecution of his business and social life.

The Tribune asks for reports as to the operations of Village Improvement Societies, from those who are acquainted with their operations.

An illustrated catalogue of excellent premiums will be sent free on application.

The Semiy-Weekly is particularly commended to the attention of general readers. It gives more of the keen incisive editorials, book reviews, foreign letters and other valuable features of The Tribune, than there is room for in the Weekly. The large type and broad columns make it the easiest paper to read.

To all who subscribe during 1892 for one year, the paper will be sent free for the balance of this year. Sample copies free. Weekly, $1.00; Semi-Weekly, $2.00

Friends of Agriculture, Industry and the Republican party, are invited to make up clubs for this paper in their location. There are four years' of trial, of new experiment, of discussion of great national topics, and of observation of the effects of Democratic supremacy before the country. The Tribune will lead in the presentation of the Republican view. The friends of the splended record of the Republican party, can aid in the final triumph of Republican principles by seeing that the people read the Republican side of the story.

THE TRIBUNE,
New York.

A Remarkable History.

We recently published a strongly commendatory notice of "Alden's Cyclopedia of History." In the interest of our readers we wish to repeat and emphasize what we said. A good Universal History ought to be in every home; this is certainly excellent, if not the very best for general use and reference ever published, covering all nations (except the United States, to be published separately) and from B. C. 50 to A. D. 1892. Certainly it is the cheapest historical work we have ever seen; but that is what readers generally will expect from Mr. Alden, who has done so much to place the highest class of literature within popular reach. To get such a vast amount of matter within such small compass the type used is necessarily small, but it is beautifully clear, and the paper, printing and binding are of the best. Send 10 cents to Mr. Alden and he will send you a sample volume of 160 pages, containing the history of several nations complete, by which you judge for yourself whether you want the entire work. His catalogue of choice books, 128 pages, sent post-paid for 2 cents, presents a wonderful feast for book lovers. Address John B. Alden, Publisher, 57 Rose St., New York.

Tornado Tom: He was tough, but his heart was in the right place. Blizzard Bill: That so? Tornado Tom: Yes. I shot for the place where it ought to be and, by gum, it was right there.

Sound Reasoning.

The difference between common sense and mathematics was illustrated in a remark which Tommy Jones—who is not exceptionally bright, but just a common, natural boy—made in his class the other day.

It was the class in mental arithmetic. The teacher asked Willy Smith:

"Which would you rather have, Willy, half an apple, or eight-sixteenths of an apple?"

"Wouldn't make any difference," said Willy.

"Why not?"

"Eight-sixteenths and half an apple are all the same."

At this reply Tommy Jones, who was several steps farther down the class, sniffed scornfully. The teacher heard him.

"Well, Tommy," said she, "don't you agree with Willy?"

"No'm," said Tommy. "I'd a good deal rather have one-half an apple."

"And why, please?"

"More juice. Cut up half an apple into eight sixteenths, and you'd lose half the juice doing it!"

Keeping Warm.

It is often said that residents of the extreme North do not feel the cold so keenly as the records of the mercury would lead one to expect.

This fact, if it is a fact, may perhaps be accounted for in more ways than one, but the explanation offered by Mr. Julian Ralph in his book "On Canada's Frontier" seems to be adequate.

He says that the reason why the people do not suffer more from the low temperature is because "every one puts on everything he owns—all his stockings at once, all his flannel shirts and drawers, all his coats on top of one another—and when there is nothing left, draws over all a blanket suit, a pair of moccasins, a tuque, and whatever pairs of gloves he happens to be able to find or borrow."

A Possible Objection.

Miss Charter Oakes (from Hartford)—Yes, our city has more wealthy people in proportion to its size than any other city in the United States.

Upson Downes—I hope that won't make any difference about my visiting you, Miss Charter Oakes.

Miss Charter Oakes—Pray, why should it?

Upson Downes—I didn't know but you would object to having the average lowered.

Forced Bribery.

Judge—You admit that you bribed the witness, as the other side charged?

Lawyer—Yes, your honor; but—

Judge (severely)—What?

Lawyer—I bribed him to tell the truth. He was going to lie for the other side.

A Stinging Rebuke.

Mrs. Kirke—George, I think it is perfectly shameful for you to stay away from church and sit home reading novels!

George—And what was the text this morning, my dear?

Mrs. Kirke—Why!—Oh! I forget; but Mr. Tonsill sang a lovely solo, and I saw a bonnet that was simply a dream!

It Is a Way Women Have.

"Miss Budlong is traveling under an assumed name."

"What on earth is she doing that for?"

"She's been married and has assumed her husband's name. They are away on their honeymoon."

No Laughing Matter.

Bleecker—That fellow Carryon is a sad dog. He seems to take life as a joke.

Pun Cheditor—Dear me! What a glum time he must have!

A Second Crichton.

Rounder—Shay—can you show me w'ere I live?

Policeman—But I don't know you

Rounder—Thash aw'ri! My wife will introdoosh you!

Brought It 'Way Down.

"I hear Carper's acting brough down the house last week."

"Yes. The week began with a house of 700; Saturday night we had seven, counting the ushers."

Not Unqualified Success.

Kirby Stone—How are you getting on with your literary ventures?

Spacer—Well, I'm making just about enough to starve respectably.

A Natural Blunder.

"What are you laughing about?"

"Why, that Englishman just asked me if Sleepy Hollow wasn't a suburb of Philadelphia."

An Addition to the Poets.

"Man wants but little here below."
So Young and Goldsmith say;
But lovely Woman wants it all,
And wants it right away.

A New Standard of Value.

The poet song will roar and sing,
With all the music of his soul,
Of any dear and precious thing
"It's worth its wei ht in coal"

Perhaps It Was The—

God made the country,
And man made the town;
But who made the suburbs
Is not yet set down.

OUR WIT AND HUMOR.

THE WEEKLY GRIST FROM THE FUNNY WRITERS.

The Soft Spots in Character Shown Off in a Manner to Create Laughter—The O'Tools, the Isaacs and the Johnson Families.

A Poor Investment.

Pat—Phoy did yez go and buy that nasty Schwiss chase for, anyhow?

Bridget—Sure I only got wan pound, to be afther throwin' it.

Pat—Wan pound, is it? Sure, then we have no chase at all, for there's more than wan pound of holes in it.

A Foreign Substitute.

Mrs. O'Toole—Good hivins, Pat, wot's th' matter wid yer eye?

O'Toole—Begorra, it fales a blamed soight wurrus thon thot. I got a furrin substince in thot eye this mornin'.

Mrs. O'Toole—A furrin substince?

O'Toole—Yis; Murphy basted me in th' eye wid a pace of Dutch chase.

Well Amended.

Undoubtedly one way of testifying a genuine affection is by helping a somewhat timid suitor. A member of the House of Commons was once very grateful for a graceful and witty bit of encouragement from the lady of his choice.

For a long time he had been paying the lady attention, and had taken her to attend the House until she was well acquainted with the rules.

One day he brought a bouquet of flowers, and said, "May I offer you my handful of flowers?"

She replied promptly, "I move to amend by omitting all after the word hand!"

He blushingly and happily accepted the amendment, and the motion was adopted unanimously.

Hard to Answer.

A question may look simple, and yet present great difficulties. "Am I on the road to Scramtown?" asked a lady who was making a tour of discovery from her summer home in a small New England town.

She addressed a man who was weeding a patch of ground near the road.

"You be, ma'am, he replied, surveying her with mild curiosity.

"Well, am I half way there?" she asked.

"Why, as to that, ma'am, it would seem as ef 'twould make a diff'rence where you started from."

Wanted—A Modern Manager.

Ben Johnson—You missed a big thing, Bill, when you did n't snap up Walter Raleigh as a star, after he laid his cloak under the Queen's feet.

William Shakespere—I should n't wonder, Ben; I'm so confoundedly modest and retiring that I'm afraid my epitaph will be the only undisputed record I leave.

Nothing to be Thankful For.

Bleecker Bond—I suppose you celebrated Thanksgiving day with a great deal of zest, considering the large crops you had, Uncle Si?

Uncle Si Low—I dunno as I did. Crops was so big I can't get no kind of price for anythin'.

Early Birds.

Elder Berry—Job Lott proposed a novel Thanksgiving scheme to the Society for the Prevention of Crime.

Dr. Thirdly—What was it?

Elder Berry—To send out wagons a week ahead, and give every colored brother a turkey.

His Face Not His Fortune.

Paterfamilias—Want employment? Well, what can you do?

Tramp—Oh, I can do anything.

Paterfamilias—Humph!

Tramp—Don't you believe me?

Paterfamilias—Well, you certainly look as if you would not hesitate to!

The Natural Assumption.

"I wonder why Columbus thought America was a portion of Asia?"

"He saw the Indians, and naturally assumed that it was India he had discovered."

Prominent, Nevertheless.

"Do you lead your class in college?"

"No," replied the Sophomore; "but most of the faculty are after me."

The Reward of Industry.

He practiced at figures and writing, they say
When a lad, in the old village school-room;
And he's now in receipt of five dollars per day
For shaking up odds in a pool-room.

A Literary Chat.

"I suppose you are familiar with Pope's 'Essay on Man?'" said Miss Bostone.

"I can't say I am," replied Miss Gotham. "I did read his last encyclical on the labor question, though. It was a daisy."

Flat Flattery.

He—Mrs. Redd-Clay, allow me to present to you my friend Mr. Reginald Robinson.

She (who always tries to say something pleasant)—What an aristocratic first name you bear, Mr. Robinson.

Popular Subjects.

Professor—Mr. Smartman, you may name some of the more prominent ologies.

Mr. Smartman—Biology, sociology, geology, astrology and doxology.

It Was Strong Enough.

"Spatt" called out Hunker from the other end of the breakfast table.

"Well?"

"Turn the butter in this direction and tell it to come."

Recognition—A Long-Forgotten Romance

Mrs. Duton—Have you had any experience as butler?

Applicant—Oh, yes; I have been engaged for——What! is not this Alicia?

Mrs. Duton—Why, count!

How He Knew.

"This must be a female turkey," observed Hunker, at the dinner-table.

"What makes you think that?" asked Mrs. Small.

"It has such rich dressing."

The Unattainable.

To those who've felt misfortune's sting
It must seem rather funny;
One never really wants a thing
Unless he has no money.

A Sure-Enough Freak.

"That man is a freak."

"Why so?"

"Has eight thousand dollars a year and lives in Brooklyn."

His Boast.

"I have a pair of suspenders for every pair of trousers I've got," he said.

"Gracious, how many pairs of suspenders have you got?"

"One pair."

Good Judgment.

"And whom shall we invite next?—Mr. Brown?"

"No. Let us have some one who ca talk."

Freddie's Riddle.

"What does a volcano do with lava?" asked Freddie.

"Give it up," replied his father.

"That's right," said Freddie.

A Boy.

"They tell me you are a happy father."

"Yes."

"Are you setting up the cigars?"

"No. I'm sitting up nights."

Rough Weather for Signs.

Passenger—Say, porter, I've just dreamt a good policy-gig for you. Had three dreams, and each one was six-sixty-six.

The Porter—Thanks, boss. (Aside.) I jess go play nine-ninety-nine. He done dreamed dem figgers upside-down.

A Chance to Smile.

A Dark Secret—"Who stole the ham?"—Union Standard.

Almost any man can be made to talk if a corkscrew be used to draw him out.

"Bronson is a man of letters now." "In what way?" "He is hearing from his creditors."

"What is the shortest word in the language?" a ked Bilkins. "Broke," replied his impecunious friend.

He—Will you marry me? She—On one condition. He—What is that? She—An improved financial condition.

Hicks—Do you keep your birthdays? Wicks—No; but my wife does. She has kept her thirtieth birthday to my knowledge for ten years.

He'd Been Gripped: First ferry passenger—These sudden changes of weather are very trying. Second ditto—Trying sir! They are convicting sir!

"Do you believe in marrying for love?" said Mrs. Bleerker of New York to Mrs. Drestbeef of Chicago. "Oh, yes; once in awhile," replied the Chicago woman.

Edison's proposition to fight Chileans with a stream of water charged with electricity has sent a thrill of horror through the State of Kentucky.

Neighbor (on the street)—Good morning, my little dear. I can never tell you and your sister apart. Which of the twins are you? Little dear—I's the one what's out walkin.

Mme. Ecole—Your daughter is not fit for our school, my dear Mr. de Porke. She has no versatility, no mental acumen, no intelligent comprehension; in fact, she is hardly compos mentis. De Porke of Chicago—She shall have them as long as her old dad has the money to pay. Give her all them things and send me the bill.

A white enamel apple blossom with the edge of the petals overlapped with frosted gold and a jeweled center is a new and pretty brooch.

THE FUNNY WRITERS

GRIND OUT SOME NEW JOKES THIS WEEK.

A Son of the Emerald Isle Runs Amuck of a Gentleman From Jerusalem and Comes Out Second Best—Some Very Funny Sayings.

The Irishman's Treat.

An Irishman picked up a round bit of t n in the street. It looked like a coin, and he walked into the nearest saloon and ordered a drink, putting down the disk when he had finished.

"Here!" said the bar-keeper; "this is tin."

"Tin, is it?" says the Irishman. "Thin hev wan yuresilf."

Cause and Effect.

Gentleman—What is your name, little girl?

Little girl—Evelyn Antoinette Billings Smith Redfern Hathaway Jacobs Strathmore Clum.

Gentleman—You have a long name for a little girl.

Little girl—Yes, sir; but ma lived in Chicago seven years."

For Evening Dress.

Mr. Grogan—"Bedad! look at this coat yez sould me lasht noight fer a blue wan. Shure, it's grane this marnin'."

Mr. Golstein—"Mein tear frendt, dot goat ees fur eefening vare only."

Then, of Course, She Was Satisfied.

Wife—Harry, I never thought you could change so. You used to say that you might search the world over and you never could find a woman equal to me, and now you are scarcely ever at home.

Husband—Oh, that's all right, dear; I'm simply making the search now, to prove the correctness of my assertion.

No One to Borrow From.

Lipsley—You know those cigars Miss Bacon sent me for Christmas?

Lapsley—Yes.

Lipsley—Well, I gave a lot to my friends and now I haven't any left.

Lapsley—What, cigars?

Lipsley—No, friends.

Crank Inventors.

Mephisto—If St. Peter doesn't stop sending American crank inventors down here I'll throw up my job.

Asmodeus—What is the trouble?

Mephisto—Why, one of these fellows came to me to-day and submitted plans for having this place heated with steam and hot air instead of brimstone.

Luck Is Wealth.

If I could have the thing I want
In all this world of good and bad;
If I could have the thing I want,
And what I wanted could be had,
With wealth and fame I'd have no truck.
I'd just take Russell Sage's luck.

Acquainted With It.

Ella (at the opera)—There's Charley Slim, and I do believe he's got on Harry Saunders's coat.

Sallie—Nonsense! He wouldn't borrow a dress-coat.

Ella (excitedly)—Don't you suppose I know that right sleeve?

She Will Rule.

Trivvet—Do you think Queen Victoria will abdicate in favor of the Prince of Wales?

Dicer—No, indeed. She'll rule till she dies.

Trivvet—Then it will be another instance of the ruling passion strong in death.

Not Often.

Secretary of the Navy—I shall go over to New York in the morning.

Assistant—On one of the naval vessels?

Secretary of the Navy—Did you ever hear of a doctor taking his own medicine?

Stale News.

Mr. Halfcentury—The newspapers must be hard up for news.

Mrs. Halfcentury—Why so?

Mr. Halfcentury—Here's an item that the oldest man in New York State died last week, and the oldest man in New York State died when I wasn't more than 16.

A Slight Coolness.

Shivver.—This is one of those Masonic rooms, is n't it?

Mrs. Defrees.—What do you mean, sir?

Shivver.—It never gets above thirty three degrees.

Outside the Circle.

"Is she in society?"

"No; I don't believe she ever took a lesson in Delsarte in her life."

SOME LAUGHING GAS.

A WEEK'S SAYINGS AND DOINGS BY HUMORISTS.

The Warden of the Other Shore Receives a Call From a Chicago Dynamiter—Mr. Hayseed Strikes an Attitude in a Photograph Gallery.

"Mr. Collum," said the city editor to one of his reporters, "do you drink?"

"No, sir."

"I wish you would acquire the liquor habit, for I want you to make a personal test of one of the new specifics for drunkenness and write it up in good style."

What It Is Coming To.

St. Peter—You can't come in.

Dynamiter—Give me a front seat and a harp or I'll wreck the place!"

An Angel of a Cook.

"Oh, Aunt Lizzie, I am so glad you have come! I found that wretched girl Nora taking brandy from my closet this morning and I discharged her. I couldn't do any different, could I?"

"Why no; I presume not. But what did you do for dinner? Do you want me to help you?"

"Oh, no, indeed! Tom says I'm an angel of a cook. I got the dinner all myself."

"Um! What did you have?"

"What makes you say it so queer? Tom toasted some bread, and I let him make the coffee. You know he camped out two years ago, and he likes to keep in practice. Then I found part of an orange pie left from yesterday, and we sent out for some pates, and had some of the fruit-cake mamma made for us last Christmas. I got along splendidly, and I'd like to do my own cooking all the time." Tom says I'm an angel of a cook."

A Great Relief.

Helen Hyler—I've got to go and see a girl—she's the president of our society; and I've got to ask her a formal question; and all the time I know just as well as can be that she will say "Yes."

Jack Lever—Well, that's a great point when you go to ask a girl a question.

It Comes High.

Mrs. Bawnso—I regret to learn that your daughter's cough is no better. Of course, you have employed the best medical talent.

Mrs. Grubstakes—Oh, yes; no expense has been spared. We think now of trying this new gold cure everybody is talking about.

Millions In It Without Doubt.

Fanning—Is Jobson a practical level-headed man of business?

Channing—Yes; he has a very great scheme afoot right now.

Fanning—What's that?

Channing—He's organizinga company to insure fire-proof buildings against spontaneous combustion.

In Full Bloom.

"Who is that pretty girl over there with a smiling, blooming face?"

"Oh, she's one of last year's buds."

"Ah, I see—her expression is quite natural."

Good Advertising.

Client—Well — eh — what is your charge in a divorce case?

Lawyer—It depends, Madam, altogether upon the amount of advertising I get. Is yours a newspaper case?

Evidence to the Contrary.

Photographer—But why do you wish to be taken with your watch in one hand and your pocket-book in the other?

Mr. Bascom—I'm a-goin' to send this picter to my wife, young man: when I left home she said she'd bet I'd be buncoed out o' everythin' I had before I'd been in the city two hours.

Money in His Pocket.

Blenstein (meeting his son as he returns from Europe)—Ikey, I vos sorry dot ship vos delayed by shtorms.

Ikey—Fader, don't mention it. I got four days' poard fur nuttings.

The Guttenberg Winner.

He's not the best horse in the race,
He has but little fame;
You haven't backed him, e'en for place—
But he gets there just the same.

Regularly Employed.

His Honor (to vagrant)—What is your business?

Vagrant—Looking for a job.

Better Face the Music.

Young Bashful—Why wouldn't you advise me to tell her my love in a valentine?

Rounder—Because girls don't know enough about business to consider sealed proposals.

The Object.

"That's a beautiful stained-glass window."

"Yes, it was given by Mrs. de Riche, whose pew is just below. She wanted something to suit her complexion."

Rather Strange.

"I'm surprised at the noise Niagara makes."

"Why?"

"You'd think there was enough water there to drown the sound."

Museum Amenities.

Winkess Wonder—Will yer come out ridin' next Sunday wid me?

Circassian Beauty (scornfully)—Naw; wot's de good—even if yer can drive wid yer feet.

Naturally.

Quericus—What is Miss Autumn's opinion of valentines?

Cynicus—She doesn't think they make as nice ones as they used to years ago.

Full Value.

Mrs. Lovey—How much money do you waste on your cigars, Charlie?

Mr. Lovey—Waste money! My dear girl, you can't waste money on the kind I smoke.

Getting Square.

I mailed her such a valentine
I'm sure she will resent it;
But still this consolation's mine,
She doesn't know I sent it.

His Fears.

"Why don't you get an umbrella lamp?"

"I'm afraid somebody might borrow it, and forget to bring it back."

Simpler.

Servant (to Squibs, in his new boarding-place).—Shall I get some ice, sir?

No, it isn't necessary. Just put the pitcher of water in the stove.

Unencumbered.

"What are your political principles?"

"I have none—I'm a Republican."

New York Winter.

"Now is the Winter of our discontent."
Made up of all the various seasons blent.

Business Is Business.

"Ve must begin and cut down our expenses, Jakey."

"Vat for, Fadder? Piznese is goot."

"Yah, Jakey. And ve must make it a leetle petter."

A Chance to Smile.

The cook doesn't burn everything she sets on fire.

It does not take a mortal long to get the big end of his life behind him.

When a balloon fails to go up as announced it is a soar disappointment to many.

A man's troubles do not come singly when his wife presents him with twins.

Sound is said to travel over 700 miles an hour; yet we have known the sound of a cat yawping on the back fence to remain right in one spot for five maddening hours.

A little up-town girl, on hearing of a certain man who was 90 years old, remarked: "When a man lives as long as that I guess it is a matter of habit with him."

First electric wire: "With all their kicking there is one thing people never threaten to do with us." Second electric wire: "What is that?" First electric wire: "Handle us without gloves."

Photographer — That is certainly a good picture for an amateur; very good. How did you manage to get such a pleasant expression on the gentleman's face? Amateur—I told him I wasn't going to charge anything.

Little Dot—Ma, may I take the baby out in my doll's carriage? Mamma—Why, what for? Little Dot—Susie Stuckup has a new doll 'at shuts its eyes an' cries 'Wah, Wah!' I'm doin' to betend the baby is a doll and let her hear him yell. Then I dess she'll stop puttin' on airs.

Binkle—I had a great notion to lick my boy for getting to the bottom of his geography class to-day. Pinkle—Why didn't you? Binkle—Well, he put some of the questions to me that the teacher put to him, and as I couldn't answer one of 'em I let him go and licked the teacher.

Electricity Gives Age to Liquors.

A New York inventor has invented a process for aging liquors by electricity. By means of a series of connected vessels, in which are inserted a series of electrodes, alcoholic liquors are passed through them; and, during the action of the current upon them the liquors will, when caught in the receiving tank, be purified, deodorized and aged to a degree corresponding to the duration of the action and the number of the vessels employed.

Artificial Grindstones.

Science comes to the front in the manufacture of grindstones. The best now made are composed of a mixture of pulverized quartz, powdered flint, powdered emery and rubber. They outwear by many years any natural stone.

BRITTON BUDGET.

A fine line of plush goods at Sink's.

Chauncey Dibble, Jr., left for Harvey Tuesday morning.

Have you seen that new line of Jewelry at F. Brown & Son's?

Will Beasley has hired out to Andrew Gogolin for the coming year.

Jakey returned from Chicago Monday to pass the holidays at home.

Call and see the Christmas presents at Sink's before buying elsewhere.

Dr. Minaker is still at the hotel, prepared to do all kinds of dental work.

New line of Windsors and neckwear at Brown's. Just received for Christmas.

Exelby Hall has been engaged for the Y. P. S. C. E. meetings on Sunday evenings.

The children and young people will give an entertainment in the church on Christmas night.

E. W. Osgood will leave Saturday for a ten days' stay, during which time his mill will be closed.

The finest line of plush caps at Brown's. Just what you want for a Christmas present.

Water Sets, Tea Sets, 100 Piece Sets, Lamps, Toys, Novelties, Dolls, Millinery goods, etc., at Sink's.

It was said that our boy Jakey was going to Harvey, Ill., Tuesday, but he concluded to await a better job.

The school entertainment last Saturday evening was an acknowledged success, the receipts amounting to $17.75.

Rev. J. H. Joldersma spent Sunday last in Britton. He is Superintendent of Missions of the Reformed Church.

Samuel Steele is agent for the Farmers' Insurance Co. for the township of Macon and may be found at his home on the Chas. Shaler farm.

Jakey was at Clinton the 19th buying stock, and judging from his tired, careworn phiz we can rightfully say he must have done a good day's business.

At a meeting of the church trustees Monday evening it was decided to move the church. Now let all put a shoulder to the wheel and boost with all their mite.

O. P. Henderson died at his home Monday evening, at 10 o'clock. The funeral was held at the Christian church Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock.

Arrangements are made to have regular preaching service in Exelby Hall at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. every Sunday hereafter until a church building can be erected in early spring.

Thos. Adams, Jr., and a bale of hay played Humpty Dumpty Monday to the grief of the former, who got dumped to the ground by Hay and only escaped with his life and a few bruises about the optics and proboscis.

It is either buy a road or no road at all. After four years of dispute and lawing it has been found that the Lowes hold lawful possession of the disputed land, never having been purchased for road purposes.

Mrs. Thos. Lee fell last Friday from a chair on which she was standing, breaking two ribs on the left side. She is resting as comfortably as possible and under the efficient care of Dr. Hardy will soon be about again.

At the town board meeting Monday we understand some of the members got to singing the tune of "you did," "I didn't" with outsiders in the key of high G. Quite a discord, we imagine, from what we know of the vocal powers of some of them.

At the annual election of officers of Eaton Post, G. A. R., Dec. 10, the following were chosen:

Commander—Jo[illegible] Britton.
Senior Vice Com.—Joseph Thackery.
Jr. Vice Com.—James McIntyre.
Quartermaster—Lewis Miller.
Officer of the Day—Willett Ellis.
Chaplain—Stewart Ballou.
Sergeant—Chester A. Linn.
Officer of Guard—Henry Reynolds.
Delegate—John R. Winsley.
Alternate—Lewis Miller.

In pursuance of a general invitation the trustees of the church met at the home of Samuel Kniffen last Monday evening with those interested in the moving of the church and parsonage. From the estimates of workmen it was decided by the trustees to undertake the work if one thousand dollars be subscribed by the church and community. A soliciting committee of citizens was then appointed as follows: Samuel Kniffen Geo. Oliver, Samuel Underwood, Walter Exelby, George Smith, Wm. Swick, John Wiggins, John Britton, Cornelius Exelby. The trustees take this means of notifying the different members of the committee of their appointment. A meeting of this committee is called at Sam Kniffen's next Wednesday evening. It is sincerely hoped that every member can be present.

Just the place!

Mrs. Alice Rogers, of Hudson, is visiting friends in the village for a few days.

Charlie Vaughan is home from Sault St. Marie.

Christmas party at Mrs. Groger's hall Friday, Dec. 23.

A shadow social was held at Ira Rogers' last Friday evening to raise funds for a Christmas tree.

Several in this vicinity are taking advantage of the Jackson markets, which in farm produce are in advance of those of Lenawee.

The ladies of the Episcopal society recently realized nearly ninety dollars from the manufacture and sale of an autograph quilt. The funds will be used to purchase cushions for their church.

Cleveland's Cabinet.

Politicians are already figuring on the personnel of President-elect Cleveland's Cabinet. Although Michigan did not give him her entire electoral vote, it is loudly whispered that a place will be given one of her most distinguished sons and that he will travel on one of the new 1,000-mile family tickets issued by the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan Ry. They are good for the purchaser and members of his family and are now on sale at all ticket offices of the Company. Price $20.00.

"Our gardener would make a good villain in a melodrama." "Why so?" "Because he is always laying out plots that amount to nothing in the end."

Dr. J. H. McLean's Strengthening Cordial and Blood Purifier is admirably adapted to make "a little health go a long way." Its curative power is largely attributable to its stimulant, tonic and nutritive properties, by which the energy of the system is recruited. It is pleasant to the taste, easily borne on the stomach and harmless under prolonged use. Try it.

MOTHER'S FRIEND

is the greatest blessing ever offered child-bearing women. I have been a midwife many years, and in each case where Mother's Friend has been used, it has accomplished wonders and relieved much suffering. It is the best remedy for rising of the breast known, and worth the price for that alone. Mrs. M. Brewster, Montgomery, Ala.

NEW ROUTE TO THE NORTHWEST

On and after Monday, November 28th 1892, the Toledo, Ann Arbor and North Michigan Railway's new car ferry, "Ann Arbor No. 1," will make daily trips between Frankfort, Mich., and Kewaunee, Wis.

This boat will carry freight cars across Lake Michigan, making the trip in 6 hours, so that all freight shipped by this route will be carried through without breaking bulk, as has been necessary heretofore with freight handled across the Lake.

As this is the shortest route to the northwest, it should be well patronized by Michigan shippers.

FRANKLIN FACTS.

Ray Marshall is down with the measles.

Chas. Burridge was in town one day last week on proffessional business.

Remember the Lyceum at Mr. and Mrs. Frank Marshall's New Years eve.

Some of the children young and old will look for Old Santa at Mrs. A. B. Wisner's Saturday eve, the old fellow will probably be there; by the way A. B. has moved up north, she has not been much homesick yet.

Mr. Brown of Chicago, has been circulating around among the farmers, organizing a stock company to build a butter factory at Tipton; we understand that he has raised the necessary capital and that the building will be located on Frank Norgross' land.

A letter dated at Delhi, La., Dec. 5th, to Edward Wisner from Jehiel his brother, announces the safe arrival of himself and family in that sunny climate, he seems to like it there; is surprised at the amount of cotton that is drawn in there, some loads with three yoke of oxen and $300 worth of cotton on one wagon and some bails worth $90.00.

EAST FRANKLIN.

Measles at Chas Mathews'.

Mrs. Abie Hunt visited her sister in Bridgewater last week.

The Farmers' Club meets at Menzo VanValkenburg's Christmas eve.

Ray Marshall is home from the Raisin Valley Seminary on account of measles.

The young people surprised J. C. Van Doren and wife last Friday evening. They report a very pleasant time.

The Tipton Epworth League held a leap-year social at the residence of Geo. Poucher on Wednesday eve of last week.

The Reading Circle was quite well attended last Saturday evening. The next meeting occurs on Friday evening, Dec. 30th.

Christmas and the Exposition.

America is not without her Christmas present:

The December issue of the "World's Columbian Exposition Illustrated" comes to us dressed in a specially designed lithographed cover. On the front page Santa Claus is shown as presenting the World's Columbian Exposition as a Christmas present to Miss Columbia, who, posing in her dignity, gracefully accepts it with thanks to her enterprising citizens. The scene is produced in rich colors and to be appreciated must be seen.

This number is attractive by its numerous OFFICIAL photographs of the dedicative parades, also illustrations of the Turkish, German and Irish villages to be produced at the Fair. In addition to this are the buildings of the French Colonies, Colorado Cliff-Dwellers, while Hon. John T. Harris of Virginia is the frontispiece.

Among the leading articles are "Open the Fair Sunday," "Directors' Resolution on Sunday Closing," Transportation Department," "Music Department," "Description of Foreign Exhibits, etc. The Woman's Department is replete with interesting information regarding the women's work.

In all, this number is the richest yet published, and as this is the only publication entirely devoted to the Exposition interests, while answering for a complete guide, the entire issue will form an authentic history of the World's Columbian Exposition. The publishers want reliable agents in each town. Sample copy of Christmas issue sent for twenty-five cents. Address

Buy Dullman's Great German 25 cen Cough Cure at Jno. Orrs.

The celebrated remedy, Salvation Oil, is recommended by experienced veterinary surgeons as just the thing for the stable and cattle yards.

Our baby was sick and we bought one bottle of Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and were well pleased with it. It did the baby a great deal of good. Wm. Thompson, McKeesport Pa.

I have been using Salvation Oil for backache stiffness in the neck, and pain in the side and found it an excellent cure. I keep it constantly on hand. Chas Haller, Union Hill, N. J.

"How do you enjoy the bagpipes, Miss Crasher?" Miss Crasher: Oh, I think they are horrid. I just detest tobacco in any form.

A Magnificent Christmas Number.

With its heavy burden of superb colored supplements; of mounted pictures of groups of noted horses; of short stories; of original drawings and of illustrations; of prize articles; of photographs of horsemen and turf writers, and last, but by no means least, beautifully designed cover in colors, the Christmas number of the American Horse Monthly has arrived at this office. It is one of the most elegant and interesting holiday papers it has ever been our duty and pleasure to criticise.

Crammed with supplements and valuable features, it almost takes one's breath away on opening its pages. Ten loose mounted phototints, including Nancy Hanks, Kremlin, Stamboul, etc., are first taken out and admired, and then the large special picture of celebrated horses holds our attention. It is in size 36x12 inches, and deserves a handsome frame. This picture will be greatly prized by all lovers of that noble animal, the horse. A large portrait of Budd Doble is also given.

The magazine contains a specially charming series of illustrated short stories by well-known writers. These stories are good reading for everyone, are not purely tales of the turf, but rather tales of the horse. Every page contains illustrations and engravings, all most cleverly executed.

The price is only twenty-five cents, and orders can be left at this office or sent direct to the American Horse Monthly Co., Detroit, Mich.

New York Musical Monthly.

We have received from Richard A. Saalfield, 794, 796 and 798 Tenth avenue, New York, the first number of his New York Musical Monthly. How any publisher can afford to give so much for so little surprised us. We all know what music costs, but here was a publication of 32 pages of music, large size, large print, equal in every respect to high-priced music, which he offers to the public at 15 cents per copy, or $1.50 per year, post-paid. But his Christmas number embarrasses us. His other numbers contained 32 pages of music; but this number contains 56 pages and 19 different pieces of music. The cover of the Christmas number alone is a work of art, being printed in 4 colors.

This monthly is printed on elegant paper and we can hardly say enough for it. Our subscribers would do well to send 15 cents for a sample copy, or, better still, $1.50 for a yearly subscription to the publisher.

The St. Louis Republic.

The "Twice-a-Week" St. Louis Republic has led the fight for Tariff Reform, and stands without a rival as the leading and representative Democratic newspaper of the country. Everybody should subscribe for it now, and get all the news during the closing months of the Republican administration, as well as after the inauguration of Cleveland and Stevenson, when the Democratic party will be in full control of the National government. It is a great semi-weekly paper, issued each Tuesday and Friday—fourteen to sixteen pages every week—for only one dollar a year—the price of a weekly. An extra copy free to the sender of a club of four new subscribers, with four dollars. Write for free sample copies. Address The Republic, St. Louis, Mo.

Brainard's Musical World.

The Christmas Holiday number of Brainard's Musical World is out, filled with interesting reading, fine illustrations and the following choice new music: "Christmas Bells" Reverie, and "Sunshine in Spain," by Richard Ferber; "The Glenwood" Schottische Caprice, by F. Lust; "Song without Words" by G. Holzel; and "Jack and the Sea," song by E. A. Phelps. The music is alone worth more than a years' subscription. The Christmas number will be mailed for 15 cents or three back numbers (containing about $5.00 worth of music) will be mailed for 25 cents, cash or stamps. The Musical World is published monthly at $1.50 per annum, and no music lover can afford to do without it. "The Musicians' Guide, a 200 page volume of valuable musical information mailed on receipt of eight two-cent stamps. Address, The S. Brainard's Sons Co., Chicago, Ill.

"I always let a cold go as it comes"—one says; which means that he overworks the system in getting rid of a cold rather than assist it by using Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup.

TWO CHRISTMAS GIFTS.

A MAN was found murdered in the village of Norton, East Tennessee, and the authorities arrested a stranger named Alfreds. Of course Alfreds had no business in the community, and this of itself partook of the nature of a crime; but, aside from this, evidence of serious import was not wanting. Here is the case briefly set forth. Alfreds and a man named Jenkins were seen together one evening walking along the road, and the next morning Jenkins was found, with his head crushed in, lying in a patch of briars. At the preliminary trial before a justice of the peace Alfreds declared that he and Jenkins had parted company near the briar patch where the body had been found, but as this declaration was not admitted as evidence Alfreds was handed over to the grand jury and was, as everyone expected, indicted for murder and imprisoned to await the action of the circuit court.

The jailer in an obscure village is often a leader in society, and the jailer's daughter is naturally a person of much moment. Old Lias Springer had, during many years, been jailer in Norton, and his daughter Ruth had declined several good offers of marriage. She was exceedingly bright of countenance and it was the mysterious boast of the neighborhood that she could parse anything. I say mysterious, for parsing was a vague mystery to many people who were glib in repeating this bit of commendable learning. Ruth, from the first moment of Alfreds' imprisonment, showed a sympathetic interest in him. He had dreamy eyes, waving chestnut hair, and was therefore innocent. In the afternoon, when the jail corridor was lighted by the sun, she often placed her rocking-chair near the door of Alfreds' cell, and sitting there sewed and talked to him.

SHE PRETENDED TO POUT.

"Would you let me out if you could get the key?" he asked one day.

She pretended to pout. "You should be. You'd run away and then I'd not have anybody to talk to."

"But if I stay here to talk to you I shall be hanged."

"Yes; but a woman would rather talk to a man, even if he is to be hanged for it, than not to talk at all."

"What an odd little creature you are, Miss Ruth."

"Oh, you think I'm odd, do you? That isn't very kind of you. I was in hopes that I was something besides odd. Anybody can be odd."

"But anybody can't have your sort of oddity."

"Oh, then, I've got the oddest sort of oddity. I don't know whether to like that or not. Do you know that you are the only man I ever met that didn't try to flatter me?"

"I didn't know it, but if I am, why, I must be thankful for the distinction."

"Oh, you must, must you, Mr. Sarcasm? Why don't you tell me something about yourself?" she asked, after a moment's pause.

"I have—I have told you that I am innocent."

"Oh, that isn't anything. Anybody can be innocent. Where do your people live?"

"I haven't any people."

"Well, where do you come from?"

"I have come from a place where there was no happiness to a place where nothing but misery and disgrace can be expected."

"You make me sad when you talk that way, Mr. Alfreds."

"And would you expect me to inspire gayety, Miss Ruth?"

"No, I don't think I ought to expect that. But you are not without friends, Mr. Alfreds. Most all the ladies in this town are interested in you."

"Women are ever interested in a man who is about to be hanged," he replied.

"Oh, don't talk about being hanged. I don't see how they can hang you, you are so nice." He laughed. "I don't; I really don't. Now if you were some ugly, good-for-nothing thing, it would be different. You follow my advice: When you are taken into court look just as pleasant as you can."

"Unfortunately, Miss Ruth, the jury will not be composed of women."

"Well, don't you fear. I think it will come out all right."

But did it come out all right? The court met three days later, and after a very short trial Alfreds was sentenced to be hanged. It was no surprise to him. He was to meet death sixty days later, on the day after Christmas. It was dark when he was taken back to his cell, and he clung to a hope that Ruth might come to console him; but the weary hours passed and loud-mouthed dogs bayed the turn of night. Morning, and still no sympathetic face, no voice of soft encouragement. Weeks passed. Ruth was away on a visit. Christmas morning. The day was bright. A man came in with the prisoner's breakfast.

"Do you think the weather is likely to change between now and to-morrow morning?" Alfreds asked.

"Why so?"

"Because if it should cloud to-day will give me my last glimpse of the sun. Has the young lady returned?"

"No, not yet."

"When do you expect her?"

"I don't know. I'm hired to chop wood and work about the place and not to listen to the news of the family."

"Will the hanging be public?"

"As public as out of doors can make it."

"Do you think there'll be many people present?"

"Oh, certainly. People look for amusement during the holidays."

"I must say that you are cold-blooded."

"And why shouldn't I be, why should I care every man that's unfortunate?"

"Why, indeed, is the question?"

"I guess I served a term in the penitentiary."

"What had you done?"

"Told the truth."

"What, they sent you to the penitentiary for telling the truth?"

"Yes, they asked me if I committed the forgery and I said that I did."

"Oh, you are a satirist."

"Well, I must go and split a piece of kindling wood. Days must go even if Christmas do come. I suppose you can take care of yourself to-day, and as for to-morrow, why, the sheriff will have to take care of you."

He passed out and a merry voice was heard. The prisoner's blood leaped. Rush and retarget. All smiles and airs of gayety, she entered the corridor, and she was not alone, the sheriff and the jailer were with her.

"Mr. Alfreds," she cried, "I have brought you a Christmas present. Here is your pardon."

"Open the door," said the sheriff. Before Alfreds' swimming eyes the iron bars were shadow lace work.

"Come on into the sitting-room," said the girl, and she led him out.

He sat in a rocking-chair. A long time passed before he said anything.

"And have they discovered my innocence?" he asked.

"No," she answered. "Let me tell you what I did. I made all the jurymen and the prosecuting attorney and the judge and hundreds of other people sign a petition asking for your pardon, and then I went all the way to Nashville and made the governor sign your pardon. Don't you think I'm smart?"

"I think you are an angel."

"No you don't—you think I'm a haphazard rattle-trap. I told the governor about your hair—think of talking about a man's hair—and I said: 'Governor, he's got the loveliest eyes you ever saw,' but I must not talk this way, for you ain't in prison now."

He got up and stood with his face turned toward the door. "I must go," he said.

"Are you going very far away?"

"No."

"How far?"

"I am going to stay here until I prove to you that your mercy—"

"Excuse me," interrupted the jailer, stepping into the doorway, "but you are no longer shut up."

"But he can stay to dinner, can't he, papa?"

"No, he'd better go."

Alfreds did not leave the neighborhood. He was shunned by men and frowned upon by women, now that he had the disgrace of murder without the romance of hanging. He did not attempt to see Ruth, and had sent her word not to attempt to see him. A detective came from a distance, and after a time an arrest was made. A man was brought to trial, and the proof was so strong that he was convicted; and, given to frankness and the truth, he acknowledged that he had committed the murder. Shortly after sentence had been passed upon him he turned to Alfreds, who stood near by, and said:

"I BRING YOU A PRESENT NOW."

"I thought you said [illegible] me when I brought your breakfast to you last Christmas morning, no, was a year ago."

It was another Christmas morning and the day was bright.

"May I come in?" Ruth asked at the door.

"Oh, surely, if you are not afraid of me."

He sprang toward her [illegible] clasped her hands. "I bring you a present now," he said. "The present of [illegible]."

The jailer stepped [illegible] the doorway and said: "Come on [illegible], you young folks. Dinner is ready."

CATARRH CANNOT BE CURED

with local applications, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. It is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials free. F. J. CHENEY & Co., Props., Toledo, O. Sold by druggists, 75c.

SURPRISE TO ALL

After using "Mother's Friend" two months I was so speedily and easily relieved that it was a surprise to those attending me. "Mother's Friend" undoubtedly lessens the pains, shortens the time and restores the mother speedily to health. Will recommend it to all expectant mothers and advise them to use it.—Mrs. J. A. R., Muncie, Ind.

RADFIELD'S FEMALE REGULATOR

has won, on merit alone, a widespread and enduring reputation. It is a combination of vegetable agents, the result of the experience of one who made the diseases of women a life-long study. Taken according to directions the organs awake to new life and energy, leaving the woman free from pain at these periods. Sold by Jno. Orr.

"I have tried Salvation Oil in my family, on a broken and dislocated foot, and can recommend it to any one as a good liniment.—Mrs. Wm. Tolley, Joplin, Mo.

VERY MUCH SURPRISED.

I have been afflicted with neuralgia for nearly two years, have tried physicians and all known remedies, but found no permanent relief until I tried a bottle of Dullam's Great German Liniment and it gave me instant and permanent relief. 25 cents per bottle Signed A. B. Snell.

Hamilton, Mich., April 11, 1891. For sale by John J. Orr.

Joseph Ruby, of Columbia, Pa., suffered from birth with scrofula humor, till he was perfectly cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

A common cold should not be neglected. Downs' Elixir will cure it.

Arnica & Oil Liniment is equally good for man and beast. 25 and 50 cents per bottle.

Coughing leads to Consumption. Kemp's balsam will stop the cough at once.

PHYSICIANS OUTDONE.

My wife has been suffering with female trouble of the severest kind for over three years. I have paid twenty-five dollars during the last three months, and she had no relief. She had doctored continually with the best of physicians.

I bought three bottles each of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and Dullam's Great German Blood, Liver, Stomach and Kidney Cure, and can say to-day that she is entirely cured. W. H. DROWLEY.

Sworn to before me on this 23d day of June, 1890. JOHN C. DULLAM, Flint, Mich. Not'y Public, Genesee Co. For sale by Jno. Orr.

Teacher: Well, Tommy, I suppose you had a very pleasant time Thanksgiving Day. Tommy (not feeling well): Yes, had an awful nice time till after dinner.

A late prominent patent medicine manufacturer once gave his opinion that we couldn't make Brant's Balsam a great seller, because we gave such large bottles for the money, there wouldn't be the large profits made by other manufacturers with which to advertise the goods. He hadn't learned that quality and quantity are advertising always fully appreciated, as proven by the rapid growth of sale of Brant's Balsam, the leading seller everywhere. Large bottles, small doses, quick effect. 25 and 50 cent sizes at Orr's drug store.

About all the average drunkard has to support him is a lean on a lamp post.

For the Good of Others

Rev. Mr. Williams Heartily Endorses Hood's Sarsaparilla.

We are pleased to present this from Rev. A. A. Williams, of the Silsbee street Christian Church, Lynn, Mass.:

"I [illegible] by a clergyman, more than a layman, who knows whereof he speaks should [illegible] recommend

Article of Merit

and worth [illegible] which he or his family have been [illegible] that I [illegible] whose commendation [illegible] to extend the [illegible] to others suffering their confidence. My wife had [illegible] years been [illegible] from severe

Nervous Headache

for which she found little help. She has tried many [illegible] but [illegible] perhaps [illegible] Last fall a friend gave her a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla. It seems surprising that simply one bottle could and did do for her. The attacks of headache decreased in [illegible] and were less violent in their intensity. While her general health has been improved, her appetite has also been better. From our experience with

Hood's Sarsaparilla

I have no hesitation in endorsing its merits."

THE lights of Christmas burn nowhere on earth with so genial a flame as in the illumination of one's own fireside; but there is a fine compensation for absence from home on the brightest and best of anniversaries in finding oneself in the streets of London on the eve of Christmas, a spectator and a part of the great Christmas tide of expectant, happy, smiling humanity flowing in counter currents through Bond street, Holborn, the Strand, and eddying and whirling around Charing Cross; and when, with heart warmed with the glow reflected from thousands of sparkling faces, to see this city of a million homes and a thousand churches blaze forth with Christmas lights from basement to roof, from chancel to belfry, the mystic spell of the anniversary becomes wondrous, overwhelming, complete.

But when Christmas dawns, one should leave the bewildering maze of this vast city for some old English village where the beauty and traditions of the day possess a cameo-like unity and relief; and the farther this shrine is removed from the rush and roar of the nineteenth century the sweeter will be the flavor of the anniversary and the more redolent of its old-time incense. The village green, buttressed by the ivied church and manse at one end, and the old hostelry and smithy forge at the other, the noble hall half visible in its park, and ancient farmhouses neighboring near, make up a mis en scene for a charming Christmas that cannot be surpassed. Watching the assembling worshipers flecking park and green, you follow on, pause in God's Acre for a look at the old yew trees and the billowy sod where the rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep, and enter the rough stone temple to whose plain interior tender and sympathetic hands have lent a grace and freshness with clusters and festoons of holly and mistletoe, and where Christmas has been sacredly celebrated for centuries save when Cromwell's soldiers put down the "papistical" worship or during the pitiable War of the Roses. Your mind dwells mainly in the misty past during the service, for Celts, Britons, Saxons, Danes and Normans have knelt before you on this spot, many of them under this same roof, and do not the symbols gathered from the remnants of old Druidical groves blend the credo of the Christian with the worship of Beil?

As the day declines and you have your choice between the hospitality of Norman hall and the festivities at some old farmhouse where the Saxon dwells, life then to the latter, for Christmas is but a play under the patronizing smiles of rank and fashion, while in the soil-imbedded home of the descendant of Celt or Saxon you shall see the greatest of Christian anniversaries celebrating at the same hearth with the first of pagan festivals (as you saw them commemorated at the same morning altar) and each claiming the day in honor of its nativity. In the midst of the fete where hospitality reigns with gladness the carols are heard without and the door swings wide open for the singers. In they troop, and as they chant of a Saviour born this day in the cave of Bethlehem, and of peace on earth, good will to man, the blazing yule log of the sun worshipers illumines the room with tidings of scarce less import, telling that on this day the source of all light and life has emerged from the grave of the winter solstice to break the icy bands of death and restore to man the fructifying spring, the ripening summer and golden autumn. I have chosen England for the loci of my Christmas scenes, for there one is brought into closer sympathy with the spirit and traditions of this great dual anniversary than in our modern America.

Centuries before the shepherds watched their flocks on the Syrian hills in the dawn of the Christian era the Egyptian priests had traced the zodiac in the heavens and hazoned the 25th of December as the day of the deliverance of the sun from the darkness and bands of the winter solstice, and for centuries before the light of Christianity burst forth from the grotto of Bethlehem the fire altars of the Orient, the sun wheels of Germany and the yule logs of Britain celebrated this day as the resurrection of nature from death unto life. Does it detract from the beauty and splendor of the Christian holiday that all nature joins in its hosannahs to that infinite and benign Providence which heedeth the sparrow's fall and the sun in its course with the same care and solicitude that proclaimed from the angelic skies of Bethlehem: "Peace on earth, good will to man?" GEO. W. VAN HORNE.

All Provided For.

Clara (arranging the Christmas presents)—Well put mamma's pearl necklace here.

Dora—And Mable's diamond earrings here.

Clara—And George's gold watch here.

Dora—And Edith's diamond bracelets—what shall we do with them?

Clara—Lay them on the piano alongside of papa's Christmas card.—N. Y. Weekly.

Only Too Willing.

Generous Six-Year-Old—Papa, there's a poor little cripple next door that hasn't any use of his arms. I'd like to give him for a Christmas present some of the things I got last year.

Papa (with tears of parental pride in his eyes)—So you shall, my boy—so you shall! Give him that nice little drum Aunt Mary sent you.—Chicago Tribune.

AT CHAMPION CITY.

Hilarious Christmas Blowout in the Spread Eagle Theater.

HERE were several unique features connected with the observation of one Christmas eve at Champion City during the time that I was editing the Clarion there, and, I may add, cutting hair in the then prevailing style, dealing in hides and pelts, leading the choir, selling land, pulling teeth with neatness and dispatch, and otherwise making myself useful as well as ornamental.

The Christmas tree was erected in the Spread Eagle theater, and there the pride and chivalry of the settlement assembled at even-tide, and "bright the lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men," as I so appropriately remarked in the succeeding issue of the Clarion.

At the conclusion of the regular programme, which was interspersed with impromptu fits by Rickety Wadkins, the presents were distributed. I do not now remember the character of any of the gifts except those in which I was personally interested. I distinctly recall, however, that Col. Corkright, a gentleman of the old school, who had taken exception to one of my editorial utterances, hung a neatly written invitation on the tree for me to call at his office any time during the week and have my nose pulled. I forgot to accept, and three days later the colonel called on me and made his word good.

Some eight months before, three sanguine souls in a neighboring town had formed a copartnership for the purpose of conquering the world anew with liver pills. They purchased a double column of advertising space in the Clarion for six months, paying therefor in advance and pills.

While their peculiar talents might have won them renown in the days of Alexander the Great, they were not appreciated in the degenerate present, and the pill syndicate collapsed in five weeks, leaving me with several bushels of beautiful pills on hand. As they were homeopathic pills and had never been medicated, I won the gratitude of my subscribers without taking any risks when I made each a Christmas gift of a box of pills.

The entertainment concluded with the partial hanging of paralytic John Lanks by Dr. Slade. The physician had but just learned of the discovery by a Kansas City scientist of the efficacy of partial hanging as a remedial agent in the treatment of locomotor ataxia and paralysis. He recognized that the Christmas eve entertainment offered an excellent opportunity for familiarizing the public with this method of treatment and at the same time providing them with a thrilling spectacle. Accordingly, a temporary gallows was erected on the stage, and upon this poor Lanks was duly hanged while the lights were turned down to a yellow haze.

So realistic was this bit of acting that even the little children shouted their approbation. The experiment was a signal success in every particular except that it seemed to exercise no beneficial effect whatever upon Mr. Lanks.

Then we all went our several ways, feeling, as I also appropriately remarked in the Clarion, that "it had indeed been good to be there."

TOM P. MORGAN.

A PROVERB FOR THE DAY.

"A bird in the hand is worth two—dollars."

He Did Without It.

Miss Sweetser—Will you come up to the Christmas gathering to-night? I shall be there.

Jack Reddy—With pleasure. Am I expected to bring anything?

Miss Sweetser—No; but you might fetch a spray of mistletoe.—Puck.

He Had Nothing Left.

First Footpad—There is no use tackling that fellow.

Second Footpad—Why?

First Footpad—He's been buying Christmas presents all day.—Judge.

CHRIST'S DAY.

March trumpets and the violet
Springs up to cheer the wood:
E'en so, when storms of winter fret,
Dear Christmas bloom last we forget
The joy of doing good.

Sweet day, when every bosom thrills
With such a joy as stirr'd
The Wise Men when, above the hills,

They saw the Star whose glory fills
And beautifies the Word;

When soldiers leave the field of strife,
And battle flags are furled,
While in the marts where trade was rife,
There moves a mercy-loving life,
A charitable world;

When favors are in all that's said,
And acts do not oppress,
But joys return we've counted dead—
He maketh smooth the patch we tread
With special tenderness.

O bells of golden gladness, ring!
The stream of plenty flows,
The world has gifts to surfeiting,
To-day our Brother Christ is King
And rules the hearts He knows.

CHARLES EUGENE BANKS.

A Slight Delay.

Mrs. Pinkerly—The boy has just come with that lovely Christmas present I got for you to-day, dear. He is waiting in the hall now.

Pinkerly—How kind (kiss) and thoughtful of you, dear. (Kiss, kiss.) I am just dying to see what it is. (Impatiently) Why don't you have the boy bring it up?

Mrs. Pinkerly (embarrassed)—The fact is—er—darling, it has come C. O. D. —Life.

THERE ARE MEN AND MEN.

Clerk—I am very sorry; but we are all out of mistletoe.

Miss Kissam—Dear me! Isn't there anything to take its place?

Clerk—Well, madam; that depends upon the man.—Puck.

A Great Present.

"What are you going to give Santa Claus for Christmas?" asked auntie.

"I guess I'll give him my stocking," answered May.

"Why, Santa Claus doesn't care for that," auntie returned.

"Well," said May, "then he can fill it and give it back to me."—Harper's Young People.

THE CHRISTMAS PLUM PUDDING.

—Sun and Shade.

Measure for Measure.

"It's not the right sort of feeling, perhaps, but at Christmas I like to give just as valuable presents as I receive."

"So do I. My wife is going to give me a hundred-dollar dressing gown, and I am going to give her a hundred-dollar check to pay for it."—Life.

CHRISTMAS EV... AN ALARM.

Chorus—What wuz dat? Didn't you hear sumfin?—Life.

Staving Them Off.

Jagway—How do you feel over Christmas, old man?

Travers—Very poorly. I find I am obliged, as a matter of necessity, to give my creditors a Christmas dinner.—Judge.

KING OF THE BLOOD

The Most Thorough Purifier of the Blood Yet Discovered.
Cures all Humors, from a Common Boil to the worst Scrofula.

It purifies the Blood.
It invigorates the Liver.
It regulates the Bowels.
It strengthens the stomach.
It gives vivacity in place of lassitude; cheerfulness in place of gloom, and robust vigor in place of debility.
Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Disordered Liver, Constipation, Nervous Affections, General Debility, in short all the numerous diseases and discomforts caused by impure blood are speedily conquered by this powerful corrector, the chief and sovereign of all ancient or modern medical discoveries—KING OF THE BLOOD.
Its name is its best description as it is a royal dispenser of the blessings, of health and vanquishes the foes that lurk in the blood.
It banishes PIMPLES, SALT RHEUM, SCALY ERUPTIONS, ULCERS, SCALD HEAD, FEVER SORES and all SCROFULOUS DISORDERS.
It checks CONSUMPTION in its early stages. It has frequently cured it when advanced.
It disperses TUMORS and CANCERS without the Surgeon's knife.
It cures DROPSY, general or partial.
It cures FEMALE WEAKNESS and DISEASE.
It reduces in a safe and effectual manner all swellings, external or internal.
It eradicates the effects of Venerial Disease and Mineral Poisons, and establishes a sound constitution.
Many certificates, much further information and full directions for using will be found in the pamphlet, "Treatise on Diseases of the Blood," in which each bottle is enclosed.
Price $1 per bottle containing 12 ounces, or 50 doses. Sold by dealers in medicine.
If your druggist does not happen to have it on hand, request him to order a supply of it for you will be cheaper than for you to order direct of us, and less trouble.

BUFFALO N. Y

The Great Healer of all Inflamed Injuries and Disorders.

It is constantly effecting the most wonderful cures, while the unparalleled demand with which it meets, stamps it at once as the greatest medicine of the age for outward application.
The most incredulous are convinced, and the most skeptical are compelled to believe in the power of this great remedy.

WHAT IT CURES.

All Sores, Cuts, Bruises, Sprains, Burns, Sore Throat, Lameness, Rheumatism, Piles, Inflammation of Lungs and Bowels, Bronchitis, Croup, Salt Rheum, Chilblains, Affection of the Spine, Erysipelas, Nervous Irritation, and all disorders attendant with Inflammation.
It never fails to restore the natural functions of the skin and equalize the circulation of the blood. By this means a controlling power is gained over the most malignant forms of disease. It penetrates to every portion of the human frame; every bone, muscle, vein, nerve and ligament is searched out and made sensible to its soothing and healing influence. Hence it copes readily with internal as well as external diseases.

Over 40 Years.

This Ointment has been used by the people throughout the United States, and our confidence in its qualities is such that as we have no space here to insert any of the numerous certificates of cures which we have from all parts of the country, we simply ask those readers of this notice who have ever used this Ointment, to frankly state their experience with it to inquiring friends. If but one in a hundred would do this we should be perfectly satisfied with the result. Full directions for use will be found on pamphlet around each bottle.
Price 25 and 40 cents per bottle. Sold by all dealers in medicine.

THE HISTORY OF AN IMPORTANT PUBLISHING HOUSE.

The Arena Publishing Co. and What it Has Accomplished in Three Years.

About a year ago we published a brief sketch of Mr. B. O. Flower, the editor of the Arena, and then took occasion to note the phenomenal success of this popular Boston review in the field of serious periodical literature.

Since then we have watched with interest the rapid strides of this magazine, and the progress of the Arena Publishing Company in developing from merely the publishers of a great review to one of the most important publishing houses of New England, or for that matter, of this country.

The Arena has from its birth steadily and rapidly grown in circulation and influence, long since distancing, with one exception, all high-priced reviews in point of popularity and circulation. This is largely due to the courage, boldness and the moral convictions which have ever been the distinctive characteristics of this review. It is also the only American review which appeals to the tastes of all members of the family in which it circulates. By publishing each month strong, short stories, biographical sketches, prose etchings and interesting pen pictures it has won its way into the hearts of tens of thousands of people who have been through these features attracted to its pages. The admirable portraits of leading thinkers and the introduction of fine illustrations when the text has called for them, have also contributed to its popularity, but doubtless the fact that it is in perfect touch with the most advanced, progressive and reformative thought of the age and employs the ablest living thinkers to write for its columns, also gives it a prestige enjoyed by no other great review. At the present time the Arena is read each month by more than 100,000 people in America while during the past six months its European circulation has increased more than 1,000 copies.

This is due largely to the great interest felt in the Bacon-Shakespeare case now being presented by the giant thinkers of two worlds, who are combating the opposite claims of the two most illustrious names in the golden age of literature in England. Another reason for the growing popularity of the Boston review in Europe lies in the fact that in Boston and on the Continent the thoughtful and progressive people are becoming for the first time acquainted with the Arena and thus learning that it in a larger degree than any other magazine reflects the best progressive and reformative thought of both the old and the new world.

The phenominal success of this great review under the editorial management of Mr. B. O. Flower is no more remarkable than the progress made during the past year in the business management of the enterprise under the vigorous and energetic personal direction of Mr. H. H. Boyce, who, as business manager, has made the Arena Publishing Company one of the most important book publishing concerns in the New World. This company has recently published "The Rise of the Swiss Republic," a finished and scholarly work, being the first elaborate history of Switzerland published in the English language. Another handsome book which has just been issued by this company is M. French-Sheldon's story of her travels in the wilds of Africa. It is one of the most superbly illustrated books of travel ever published, containing almost four hundred photogravures or text cuts, many full page pictures made direct from photographs taken by M. French-Sheldon. The achievement of this remarkable American woman stands without parallel in the history of extraordinary attainments by women, even in this day of their wonderful achievements. Her story is of absorbing interest and rich in information contained in no other work on the Dark Continent.

The sales of one of their books has already exceeded 50,000 and another 35,000 copies.

The great publishing house of Harper Brothers point with pride to the fact that during the past year they have published no less than seventy-five new books. Comparing a young house with one that stands almost at the head of the publishing business, it is a remarkable fact that the Arena Publishing Company has within one year given to the world twenty-one new books, and every one of them a marked success.

The handsome offices of this company are on Copley square, and a casual visitor, who is always cordially received, is impressed with the tremendous amount of business that is transacted there. Under the present management the Arena Publishing Company, in addition to conducting the liveliest and most popular review in the world, the paid circulation of which has been doubled in one year, is bound, in the natural course of events, to become one of the greatest book publishing concerns in America.

The Columbia Daily Calendar

remains the only valuable daily pad calendar. The calendar for '93 is of the same general design as that of previous years, consisting of 366 leaves, one for every day in the year, and a calendar for the entire year. The day of the week, of the month, and of the year are given, and on each leaf is a short sermon on the "Gospel of Outdoors, Health and Happiness," with valuable hints on practical road making. The leaves are so arranged that there will be no stub left, and each one can be referred to at any time during the year. The pad is upon a metallic stand of ivory black, arranged so as to rest upon the desk at a convenient angle. The pad matter, which in the aggregate is enough to make a book, is all fresh and new, and is of more pertinent value than that of any previous calendar. The calendar is issued by the Pope Mfg. Co., of Boston, New York, and Chicago.
